IT'S RED FEATHER DAY for C.N.R. trainman Phil Drumm of Belleville. When he made his United Appeal donation this year, United Appeal volunteer worker Miss Jackie Bell of C.N.R. office services pinned a red feather on his jacket. AN C.N.R. employee who donate' ge a feather.

United Appeal Drive Opens With Red Feathers Waving

Belleville's United Appeal campaign starts today. More than 300 people who have been working behind the scenes, some for six months and more, come out into the open today to ask their fellow citizens for $106,024.88. They have two weeks, until October 15, to get it. The money is needed to help support 12 local charities and service agencies.

The campaign is different this year. There is no big, noisy parade, no bands and few speeches. The goal is more than $20,000 higher—than last year's goal, because this year the goal is based on Belleville's needs, not on past performances. It sounds like a lot of money, but Belleville's $106,000 goal is about equal to the goals — and serious scholars' quota of other cities of Belleville's size.

WILL DROP FEATHERS

The details of this year's campaign are simple. Three uniformed school students, or children, are planned to get the Appeal's message into homes. For school children in grades one to four, there is a coloring contest. For children in grades five to eight, there is an art contest. For high school students, there is an air drop of red feathers this afternoon, with a prize for the student bringing the first of the feathers to the United Appeal office. Prizes for all contests are being donated by local businesses.

For adults there is one other promotion, a project of the Belleville Jaycees in support of the United Appeal. At the partially-finished park on the Ben Safe property on Bridge St., the Jaycees will build a 12-foot high red feather of concrete blocks. Each block will represent steps toward the campaign's goal, and contributors whose contributions put the fun over each step will be asked to lay the blocks.

CHANGE SYSTEM

The working end of the campaign has been changed too, this year. Most obvious change is that there will be no general house-to-house canvass. Instead, the emphasis is on catching people at work, and a corps of canvassers is lined up to reach everybody who works in town. People who cannot be reached at their work, or who work outside Belleville, (this group includes about 400 airmen), will be canvassed at their homes by workers armed with specific lists of people who cannot be reached except at their homes.

The main part of the campaign is divided into five divisions, each division with a specific job. The selected names division, including those people who cannot be reached at their jobs, has a corps of about 100 canvassers working under co-chairmen Rod Cameron, Mrs. G. W. Howell and Mr. L. B. MacQuarrie.

About 20 people are canvassing the city's professional men, working under chairman Sheriff Ross Bailey. The public services division, including city, county, provincial and federal employees, is being canvassed by internal organizations under the general direction of Bill Hurst. National corporations are being canvassed by letter, with Mr. Davidson in charge of the campaign.

The industrial and commercial division is divided into five sections, including three general categories under the chairmanship of Gordon Wilson. Bryson Leslie and Reginald Worrell. The three chairmen have a total of 19 assistants. Businesses in the downtown area will be canvassed by about 50 people working under chairman Robert Irvine and business men in other parts of town will be canvassed by one of about 60 people working with Stanley Wiggins.

BEGAN TUESDAY

First of the in-plant campaigns started Tuesday at the CNR when the company, at the request of running trades union representatives, moved the pay office to a parlor car near the Belleville yard office. Canvassers working under in-plant campaign chairman Bill Boulter had collected about $2,500 by last night. Last year the company's nearly 900 employees in Belleville gave less than $20,000. In-plant campaign officials this year hope to collect $6,000.

CHARGE REDUCED

HALIFAX (CP)—A Supreme Court jury found Halifax stenographer Vivian Munro guilty of a reduced charge of manslaughter Wednesday night. The 37-year-old woman had been charged with capital murder in the April 27 rifle-slaying of Graham Preston, 33, a Halifax merchant seaman. She was the first woman charged with capital murder since Canada's Criminal Code was revised in 1961. She will be sentenced later.

No Bomb Booms On Red Birthday

TOKYO (AP) — Communist China celebrated its 15th birthday today with the defiant statement that "revolution is the locomotive of history." It apparently did not choose to mark the occasion by touching off an atom bomb.

Peking's Mayor Peng Chen Chen sounded the revolutionary keynote, reiterating the tough policy which Moscow deplores, before thousands of Chinese and foreign dignitaries massed in the Square of Celestial Peace in the Chinese capital.

Though there had been lively speculation that China's anniversary might cap the day's festivities with an announcement that they had fired their first nuclear device, neither Peng nor President Liu Shao-chi even mentioned the word nuclear in anniversary addresses.

Japanese correspondents in Peking reported that informed Chinese sources said U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk's statement that China may explode a nuclear device soon was a "fabrication."

"No one," the Chinese sources said, "not even Chairman Mao Tse-tung or President Lui Shao-chi, knows when Communist China will explode a nuclear device."

"The oppressed peoples are bound to rise in revolution, the imperialists and all their reactionaries will inevitably perish and the world will march forward," Mayor Peng said in the day's major speech before 500,000 persons began moving through the square.

He said "this will be a year of very good harvests in China's history." He claimed that a powerful industrial system based on self-reliance has been built up, and said that new developments in culture, education and science "have eloquently proved that the people are fully capable of scaling the worlds summits in science and technology.

He admitted, however, that "we still have shortcomings, mistakes and difficulties and that they occur not only every year but every month. He called on Communists everywhere to unite against "United States imperialism" which he said "is plundering not only the economically backward countries in Asia, Africa and Latin America but also the economically developed capitalist countries, its partners included."

Mao, who at 70 is beginning to lose his old plumpness, was the central figure in the celebrations. He was flanked on the rostrum by President Liu; Premier Chou En-lai, apparently fully recovered from a recent illness; Marshal Chu Teh; two African presidents; the premiers of North Viet Nam and Romania; the president of North Korea; Prince Norodom Sihanouk, the Cambodian chief of state; and a relatively high-ranking Soviet delegation.

Pravda, the Soviet Communist party organ, in an anniversary article reviewing Soviet aid to China said: "Our party, in spite of the attacks by the Chinese leaders and their aids, Soviet smear campaign, stretches out a hand of friendship and support to progressive China for the sake of the joint struggle against imperialism, for the sake of peace, national freedom and socialism."

Formula to Alter BNA Act Seen Giving Provinces Veto

OTTAWA (CP)—The weighty issue of repatriating the constitution was brought into the Commons Wednesday by Justice Minister Favreau for the purpose of soliciting some views on the matter.

He got some powerful ones.

"An unmitigated disaster," was the way Agriculture Minister Hamilton (PC — Toronto Greenwood) described some aspects of the proposals now considered as the basis for repatriation.

"Treason," was what said Creditiste Leader Real Caouette, in reference to the British North America Act. "I don't Let's draft our own constitution."

"I think it is safe to say that no one in this Parliament objects to the plan to bring the constitution home," said R. G. L. Fairweather (PC — Royal), former attorney - general of New Brunswick.

Next Monday and Tuesday, Mr. Favreau will meet the attorneys-general to tackle the technical details in connection with the drafting of written Crown and defence arguments.

Longshoremen On Strike In Atlantic Coastal Ports; Daily Loss Said 20 Million

Support of Maritime Union Could Deal Shipping Big Blow

By MALCOLM STEPHENSON

NEW YORK (AP) — Sixty thousand longshoremen went on strike today in Atlantic and Gulf coast ports from Maine to Texas.

A board of inquiry appointed by President Johnson under the national emergency clause of the Taft-Hartley labor law acted quickly to get a report on the situation in the president's hands before nightfall. A return to work under a federal court injunction was expected by Monday or earlier.

Shipping circles estimated a loss of more than $20,000,000 in the U.S. economy for each day the docks are idle.

Threatened loss of jobs through automation of cargo handling was a major factor in the "no contract, no work" walkout by the International Longshoremen's Association (AFL-CIO) which began a strike after midnight.

Some longshoremen jumped the gun in New York and began quitting work on the luxury liner piers as early as 5 p.m. Wednesday. Clerical employees were put to work handling passengers' luggage and three big ships—the Queen Mary, the independence and the Bremen—sailed during the night.

PLEDGES SUPPORT

Joseph Curran, president of the 50,000 - member National Maritime Union (AFL - CIO), has promised support to the longshoremen. Such support could deal a blow to United States and foreign-flag shipping. Members of Curran's union are seamen, engine room and steward department workers and other ship personnel below officer rank.

President Johnson late Wednesday invoked the Taft-Hartley Act for the first time since he entered the White House. His action was expected to lead to speedy issuance of a court injunction ordering the longshoremen back to work for an 80-day cooling-off period. During this time, his board of inquiry would investigate, report to the president and conduct a secret membership vote on the latest offer by management.

The chairman of the three-man board, Richard Schmertz, 34, a Washington labor lawyer and arbitrator, called a meeting of the board for today in New York. He telegraphed requests for statements on their positions by the union and the New York Shipping Association, which represents more than 150 shipping and stevedoring companies.

After the board reports to the president, he will be up to him to make the final decision on whether to ask the justice department to seek an injunction.

5 Firemen Die In Blaze

BOSTON (AP) — The rear wall of an old toy factory crumbled and fell on firemen early today, killing five firemen who were battling a blaze in the wooden building.

The fifth victim, James B. Sheedy, 39, of Dorchester, died seven hours after the fire.

The victims—one of them the son of Boston's acting fire chief were swept from a ladder and buried beneath a ton of brick and timber.

"They were screaming as they fell," said a fellow fireman. "It was terrible. They were on the ladder at the third floor and all of a sudden the fourth and fifth floor walls just gave way and buried them."

At least 13 other firefighters were injured fighting the five-alarm fire in Boston's crowded south end section. The names of five men were on the danger list at Boston City Hospital.

BRICKS RAIN DOWN

Ten minutes after the firemen were killed, a second portion of the structure collapsed, raining bricks down on seven other firemen and narrowly missing a group of reporters and photographers.

Directing the operations of more than 200 firemen at the scene was Acting Chief John Dacey Sr. Killed were Lieut. John McCorkle, 53.

. . . Suddenly the walls just came down. Somehow I managed through a window of another building about 15 feet away."

Many of the firemen were weeping openly as they tunnelled into the charred refuse looking for the bodies of their fellow firefighters.

Firemen were able to confine the fire to the one long unoccupied building. There was no immediate indication of what caused the fire.

Roblin Supports Lesage

By KEN SMITH

Canadian Press Business Editor

WINNIPEG (CP)—Duff Roblin, Progressive Conservative premier of Manitoba, has given a strong vote of support to Jean Lesage, his Liberal counterpart in Quebec, in the dispute over federal and provincial rights.

Mr. Roblin used the closing banquet of the 35th annual meeting of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce here back Quebec's policy of contracting out of federal - provincial programs.

He told the 800 delegates Quebec's action may be the "practical and pragmatic" way of reconciling competing claims of jurisdiction between the governments.

He admitted there are risks involved in the contracting out policy, but argued it may prove to be the formula needed to meet the special situation of Quebec without providing special treatment for the province.

He added that in his judgment the potential benefits outweigh the risks. However Manitoba probably would not use the same policy to get out of federal - provincial programs.

He said contracting out likely emerge from its present constitutional unrest strengthened and with unity confirmed.

SEPARATION PROBLEM

A separate French Canada could become an isolated ghetto surrounded by 200,000,000 English - speaking foreigners, he said. A separate English Canada fall into a sub-national status.

The strongest applause came, however, when Mr. Roblin expressed concern over welfare spending.

Mr. Roblin said the provinces and Ottawa should set up a joint system of statistical priorities to oversee welfare expenditures, adding there are three major fields where government spending is essential — education, health and pensions.

He said Canada also slapped their formal seal of approval on policy declarations hammered out Friday. At one time, however, dealing with federal - provincial relations was taboo.

It said the number to undertake a review of existing rights and obligations of both federal and provincial governments under the terms of the British North America Act.

One policy statement accepted by the chamber's national council on Monday and turned back by the delegates would have asked the chamber to urge the government not to interfere with programming carried on television cables.

Major policy declarations accepted included a call for more technical training for workers; a study of the loss of skilled workers to other countries, development of a national resources policy, establishment of a flat-rate, pay-as-you-go pension plan and extension of passenger plane routes.

Mother Shot By Son, 3

SMITHS FALLS, Ont. (CP)— Mrs. Audrey Salter, 34, was killed Wednesday when a three-year-old son accidentally discharged a rifle in the kitchen of the family's home.

Police said Mrs. Salter was sitting in the living room when the child, who was alone in the kitchen, somehow fired a loaded 22-calibre rifle. The bullet went through a wall and struck the woman in the left side, puncturing a major artery.

She was taken to hospital but died in the operating room.

30,000 Marooned by Bursting of Dam in India

NEW DELHI (AP)—The Indian Army sent food by helicopter and rescuers by road and boat today to the aid of an estimated 30,000 persons marooned by a dam burst that sent a 10-foot wall of water crashing down on the sleeping town of Macheria in southeast India.

Estimates of the dead fluctuated widely in the confusion and communications breakdown following the disaster, believed the worst of its kind in India.

Irrigation ministry sources said that according to unofficial estimates, more than 1,000 persons died when the wall of water surged through the town of 25,000 in Andhra Pradesh state after a rain-swollen reservoir burst early Wednesday.

However, The Times of India reported a death toll of 200 for all of Andhra Pradesh. With six states of northern India already suffering from devastating floods, the southern state was hit by 18 inches of late monsoon rains in three days, flooding the Krishna and smaller rivers. At least 30 deaths outside of the Macheria area have been reported to New Delhi.

The chief minister of Andhra state, Nagi Reddy, told Reddy said he thought the death toll in Macheria "may be 150 or more." But he added that in the state capital, Hydebrabad, still was not in direct touch with the stricken city.

Army units were reported to have reached the stricken hill town 160 miles south. At Hyderabad and were rescuing survivors from treetops and the roofs of houses still standing.

Survivors told a tale of horror. At least one and possibly two large irrigation dams burst during the night. The water joined the flood waters of two overflowing rivers in the vicinity, and the combined waters swept down on Macheria.

The huge wave hit about 3 a.m. It swept through the sleeping town, drowning people in their beds, destroying flimsy huts and washing away cattle and bodies.

Before the Macheria disaster, Irrigation Minister K. L. Rao told Parliament the floods in northern India had killed 145 persons, washed away 2,800 head of cattle and affected 6,300,000 inhabitants of 18 600 villages. He said 3,000,000 acres of cropland were under water, a loss that has caused hunger in much of India, touched off food riots and caused a crisis for the government of Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri.

New riots were reported Wednesday in villages north of Bombay where there are acute shortages of sugar and cooking oil.

Along the Andhra Pradesh coast at Kakinada, there was still no word of the fate of 83 missing fishing boats with nearly 500 men aboard.

Everett Morgan, 39, Drowns When Car Goes Into Trent

Everett Morgan, 39, 73 Grier Street, Belleville, works engineer and father of six children, was drowned in the Trent Canal a short distance south of 401 Highway early today when his borrowed car went into the river beside the Glen Miller road.

The body was recovered about 8:30 this morning by provincial police from Belleville.

Police found the submerged car with its light still on and the left window and rear door open. The vehicle was empty.

This morning police recovered the body a short distance from the car. Mr. Morgan was said to have been a non-swimmer.

Shannonville Man Fined, Licence Lifted

A Shannonville man's licence to drive was suspended for three months this morning, and he was fined $75 after he pleaded guilty to leaving the scene of an accident.

Leslie Jack Hill of Shannonville was driving Highway Two near Point Anne, Sept. 5, when his car sideswiped an oncoming car, driven by Theodore Maracle, of Shannonville. Damage to Maracle's car was about $150, to the Hill car about $70.

Hill told magistrate's court this morning that he did not stop after the accident because he looked back at the Maracle car and saw no brake lights, so he assumed the Maracle car had not stopped. He said he needed his own car to drive back and forth to his job in Kingston.

Hill faces the possibility of another fine of up to $50, if he is convicted back at the basic public liability and property damage insurance. He was unable to show proof of insurance in court this morning, but said he believes he is insured.

Committee Plans Sale Of Poppies

The Belleville Poppy Fund Committee met recently at The Royal Canadian Legion Hall, on Pinnacle Street. Chairman Claude MacDonald called the meeting to order with two minutes' silence.

Regular business was transacted, including a letter that was read, signed by the mayor of Belleville, verifying the sale of poppies from Wednesday, November 6th and 7th, 1964.

Two guests were present, Mr. Everett Liddle and Mr. Madden, to offer their assistance in the forthcoming campaign, and to offer various suggestions as to procedure in building up an interest in the community for the Flanders Poppy, since they had previous experience.

The Flanders poppy is a symbol of the sacrifice which has been made on behalf of democratic freedom by Canadians. The Poppy Fund serves those who were the victims of that sacrifice.

Each year, the fund has helped numerous veterans, their wives and families. Quoted from the report printed and published by the Belleville Poppy Fund this year in the city.

Members of The Royal Canadian Legion, the Ladies' Auxiliary, Army, Navy, Air Force Veterans, and the Ladies' Auxiliary, will be calling on all the Belleville business organizations and factories, asking them to purchase wreaths. Anyone can buy these wreaths. The Royal Canadian Legion or the A. N. and A. F. Veterans.

If, when the Citizens of Belleville are approached, they have any doubts that the agent is a member of one of the above organizations, it is expected they will ask the agent to show his membership card. Citizens should be paid for by cheque, either mailed in to the Belleville Poppy Fund, or picked up by one of the committee members.

Meeting was adjourned until October 6th, 1964, at 8:30 p.m. at the Legion Hall.

General Welfare Costs Show Big Decrease

The statistical report from the Department of Public Welfare for July, showed that 419 persons in the city receive the grocery allowance as compared with 657 for the same month last year.

The total amount of money paid out in general welfare assistance in Belleville from January this year to the end of July was $115,307, a drop of $78,086 compared with the same period in 1963. The report showed that 1.4 per cent of the city population was receiving general welfare as compared with 2.8 per cent a year ago.

Centennial Project Committee Reaches No Decision at Meet

The special committee named last week to come up with a suitable centennial year project for Zwick's Island met last night and after discussing several possible projects, broke up ed without any final decision being made.

Another meeting of the committee will be called next week.

The committee was formed after a month to name a suitable project, as the city's application for a centennial grant had to be in by Nov. 6th.

In June of this year city council asked the city planning board to choose a suitable centennial project for Zwick's Island.

After several meetings the committee decided that residents of the city should vote for a bandstand, because of land fill conditions.

Instead it was recommended be re-named that the pavilion project be approved for the Centennial Year.

Monday afternoon council turned this proposal down and decided to submit plans to choose a centennial project for Zwick's Island.

Attend Meeting Pentecostal Assemblies

Rev. E. D. Bergman, Rev. J. H. McVeigh, of Calvary Temple, Belleville, were delegates at the 24th Biennial Conference of the Pentecostal Assemblies of Canada recently.

Rev. Tom Johnstone, the denomination's senior officer, was the keynote speaker at the conference, held in Montreal.

Rev. Johnstone, leader of the 685 Canadian churches, said: "I believe implicitly in the Bible to be the infallible word of God—of course, this includes the Book of Genesis," he added, apparently alluding to the Sunday School curricula of two Canadian Protestant denominations which state that Genesis is not literally true.

Dr. C. M. Wortman, general secretary-treasurer, in his general report pointed out the staggering growth of the Pentecostal church in Canada.

President Discusses Warren Report

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson met for an hour Wednesday with his committees on the Warren report and Treasury Secretary Douglas Dillon said afterward.

Presidential protection can be improved and "I am sure the president ever can be perfectly protected" from assassination.

Johnson met with former Cabinet members to appraise the report of the commission, headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren, which investigated the assassination of John F. Kennedy and made recommendations for strengthening presidential safeguards.

Dillon said the four members to come up with their own recommendations. Dillon said they are likely to do as he did time to incorporate them in the next budget and in legislative proposals in the next Congress.

Asked whether the committees and Johnson discussed the president's practice of getting out of cars during motorcades and shaking with people, Dillon said press reports on that were discussed. He said they also have been discussed with the secret service, which he said holds that "this is a normal thing; the president has always done it and it is something they have always handled and can handle."

Will Call Tenders For Installations

TRENTON — Tenders for installation of roads, sewers and water services in Burtindale Heights, in the Reid St. area (formerly North Bypass St.) will be called for by the town in the near future.

Burtindale Heights was opened for Councillor Ross Burt, a one-time mayor of the town, earlier this year. It is planned to service 68 lots initially.

In all, 340 lots are planned for the area which will extend west of Reid St.

The 150, 50 to 60 foot frontages, and 110 feet in depth, will be put up for sale to the individual buyer, once serviced. If all the serviced lots are sold within a reasonable time limit, blocks of the lots may be sold to builders. The erection of the houses, which will be, it is hoped, in the $12,000 price, may be financed by CMHC loans. The provincial-federal land assembly project will be financed jointly by the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, and the Department of Planning and Development by the Ontario government, with the town acting in the role of "agent," as far as planning the services are concerned.

The Trenton Board of Education plans to build a public school in this area soon, and a separate school will be built later.

Air Rangers Spend Day At Flying School

TRENTON — Last Sunday, nine members of First Trenton Air Rangers' Flight, and two leaders, Corey Jones and Fred Baker, spent the day at the Prince Edward Flying School, where they were shown around by the manager, Murray Clapp. Although weather prevented a flight, four of the girls, Kathy Everson, Heather McDougall, Christine Hamilton and Corinne Brock, climbed aboard a club aircraft to get the "feel" for a future flight.

Resume Paving Operations On Sidney Street

TRENTON — Paving operations resumed yesterday on Sidney Street, and it is planned to finish the entire length of the street by the end of this week. Only two coats of asphalt will be put on the street.

Meanwhile, the addition of a third coat of asphalt to Gilmour Hill, scheduled for this week, will be postponed until next week.

Workmen are also expected to finish off the intersection of Dufferin Ave. and Dundas St. W. by next week at the latest.

Final paving operations on Dufferin Ave. between Dundas St. W. and McGill Street, are still in a quandary, because of the failure to find the source of a leak in the recently installed water main. Until the leak is located, the paving will have to wait. Dufferin Ave., between Dundas Street and McGill St., has been given the required three coats of asphalt.

Division Street, which is being widened between King Street and Dundas St. W., should be ready for paving next week.

Yesterday, workmen started laying the first curbs for curbs on the west side of the street. Once the widened portion is paved, and open to traffic, town workmen will curb the east side of the street and install a sidewalk.

Air NONG Telegram In Court

SUDBURY (CP) — A telegram and letter exchange between the late C. D. Howe and the mayor of Sudbury in May, 1956, was introduced in court Wednesday by defence counsel, who claimed it was an indication of external pressure on the council to sign a gas distribution franchise with Sudbury Ontario Natural Gas Company.

Mr. Justice Leo Landreville of the Ontario Supreme Court, mayor of Sudbury from January, 1955, to September, 1956, when he was appointed to the bench, is charged with accepting NONG stock while mayor as a consideration for help in getting the company's franchise through Sudbury council.

He is also charged with allegedly agreeing to accept stock for signing the franchise agreement.

The telegram to Mr. Howe mentioned Mr. Justice Landreville's pleasure that Sudbury's board of control had recommended second and third reading of a bylaw that would give the franchise to NONG. The telegram also mentioned the probability of a contract being signed between NONG and the International Nickel Company plant near Sudbury.

LETTER APPROVES

The letter from Mr. Howe, dated the next day, expressed his approval of the NONG franchise because it would bring Inco's large industrial gas consumption into the scope of Trans-Canada Pipe Lines Limited as well.

Mr. Howe, then federal minister of trade and commerce, said it was important because he was then "doing his best to speed up the pipeline project."

The Trans - Canada pipeline issue and subsequent closure debate in the House of Commons preceded a federal election in 1957 in which the Liberal administration was defeated.

At the preliminary hearing Wednesday, J. A. Robinette, counsel for the 54 - year - old judge, questioned John Joseph Kelly, a former Sudbury city solicitor and now living in Kitchener.

Mr. Kelly said he and city engineer T. L. Hennessy believed Sudbury was "a special case" as far as the gas franchise went since the International Nickel Company, three miles away, was also planning to get natural gas.

Under re-examination by special prosecutor Harvey McCullough of Hamilton, Mr. Kelly said he and Mr. Hennessy considered Sudbury "was the guiding force in the franchise agreement and, therefore, whatever company or municipality arranged agreement with, Inco could do the same."

URGES UNION

Patrick H. Murphy, city clerk-comptroller, testified that city council had received a letter in May, 1956, from C. D. Howe urging council to make a decision about a natural gas franchise.

About 19 other municipalities had already signed with NONG but "we were holding back to get more information," he said.

"We knew what we wanted and we knew what we didn't want," he said.

It was then that Mr. Robinette introduced the telegram-letter exchange between Mr. Howe and Mr. Landreville.

Under cross-examination by Mr. Robinette, Mr. Kelly and Mr. Murphy said the former mayor had never put pressure on them to do anything contrary to their duties.

Mr. Murphy agreed with Mr. Robinette that Mr. Howe's letter urging expedition of the gas franchise was an important factor in the signing in July, 1956, of the agreement with NONG.

FROM FUEL BOARD

Another factor was a letter from A. R. Crozier, chairman of the Ontario Fuel Board, which said NONG's service in Northern Ontario hinged on winning the Sudbury franchise and it appeared the city would be favored with advantageous NONG rates, he said.

Earlier, Mr. Kelly reported "there were three votes recorded in opposition" when city council gave the franchise by law third reading.

Mr. Murphy said "there was no recorded opposition."

City council records entered as evidence showed one controller and three councillors differed with the mayor in the need for haste in signing with NONG.

Magistrate A. J. Marck of Hamilton commented that "any leadership (by Mr. Justice Landreville) seems to come after correspondence from C. D. Howe expressing urgency in regard to the pipeline."

Want to Extend Provincial Aid To Indians

OTTAWA (CP) — A federal-provincial conference Oct. 29-30 will consider ways of extending such provincial services as education and social welfare to Indians, Citizen Ship Minister Tremblay informed the Commons Wednesday.

But, he said, that doesn't mean the federal government is surrendering any of its constitutional jurisdiction over Indian affairs. The government intends "to maintain the rights accorded it under the constitution over Indian affairs."

Mr. Tremblay ran into a barrage of questions about what he called preliminary discussions for the October meeting here. He declined to indicate how the provinces feel about the idea or whether there is any opposition.

However, a reliable source says three provinces are taking the stand that Indians are a federal responsibility. The source declined to identify the provinces but said the federal government hopes for a change of attitude.

Mr. Tremblay said the October meeting is exploratory and no decisions will be made before any are arrived at, the Indians would be consulted.

Wants Canada To Separate From Quebec

OTTAWA (CP)—An English-speaking Ottawa man said Wednesday he is forming an organization aimed at separation of the other nine provinces from Quebec.

Leigh Smith, 36-year-old native of Ottawa, claims only about 20 supporters so far for this "like-province confederation movement" but is confident thousands of English-speaking Canadians will agree with him that they are being "cheated" in the name of unity.

Mr. Smith is a former public school teacher and a graduate of Ottawa Teachers College and of Queen's University.

Judge Anderson Meets DEW Line Workers Friday

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor Minister MacEachen said Wednesday he has no knowledge that a threat was made to picket Canadian DEW line workers with American air force technicians unless the Canadians agreed to binding arbitration in their wage dispute.

Marcel Lambert (PC — Edmonton West) asked him in the Commons about the reports. The 650 Canadian workers are demanding wage parity with the Alaskan scale of the Arctic radar network. The Federal Electric Corporation of Paramus, N.J., operator of the entire line, has rejected the proposal.

Mr. MacEachen said Judge J. C. Anderson of Belleville, appointed by the federal department to arbitrate the dispute, will meet with both sides Friday, in the courthouse at Whitby, Ont.

Federal Electric and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (CLC) have agreed to abide by Judge Anderson's decision on the wage issue, and another involving union security.

British Strike Threatens To Paralyze Motor Industry

By COLIN FROST

LONDON (AP) — A strike by 300 men threatened paralysis for much of Britain's automotive industry today and brought a large dose of bitterness into the general election campaign.

The strikers are inspectors at a midland factory which makes transmission units that, by 10 per cent of British car builders.

With supplies cut off, production lines ground to a halt. The largest British Motor Corporation warned that many thousands of its employees would be laid off this afternoon.

Strikes at election time—plainly hinting that strikes have been fomented for political reasons.

The strike was called by men employed by Hardy Spicer, whose chairman, Herbert Hill, is a member of the Labor Party, which gets its financial support from the trade union movement.

Party Leader Harold Wilson warned that if Labor wins it will order a judicial inquiry into strikes at election time—plainly hinting that strikes have been fomented for political reasons.

The strike was called by men employed by Hardy Spicer, whose chairman, Herbert Hill, is a member of the Labor Party, which gets its financial support from the trade union movement.

Party Leader Harold Wilson warned that if Labor wins it will order a judicial inquiry into strikes at election time—plainly hinting that strikes have been fomented for political reasons.

DERIDE SUGGESTION

Conservative leaders derided Wilson's suggestion that some sort of plot might lie behind the strike. Deputy Prime Minister Frederick Lord Boden-Powell said: "I have really heard such an irresponsible allegation."

The strikers are demanding an increase of nineteen (12 cents) an hour on wages now averaging 10 shillings ($1.30) an hour. The company has offered three-pence.

Wilson, seeking to set the election battle alight, lashed out, too, at Prime Minister Douglas-Home, accusing him of deliberately deceiving public opinion about Britain's economic position.

Speaking at Norwich, Wilson asserted that Britain is borrowing at the rate of £1,000,000 ($3,000,000) a week to keep up an appearance of prosperity.

He continued:

"Sir Alec has been touring the country claiming the economy is stronger than ever, when he knew that his government was being forced to put out figures which would show skyhigh the carefully fostered myth of gently rising prosperity."

With 15 days to go before the voting, two of the three major opinion polls show Douglas-Home's Conservatives comfortably ahead in the race for 630 House of Commons seats.

The third poll, Gallup, has the Conservatives slightly ahead on one sampling system and three percentage points behind on another.

Can't Convert Sinners With Soap Opera

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — You can't convert sinners with soap opera, a television priest said today.

"So we're going after them with gutsy drama, just like The Defenders, said Father Edward Kieser, producer of Insight, a weekly TV show broadcast by 150 stations.

"I know we are going to get lots of complaints this year from clergymen and laymen in the Roman Catholic priest added. "But they're not the people we're trying to reach. We're after sinners."

For instance, in last Sunday's show, dialogue was sprinkled with such phrases as: "Go to hell!" "Dammit! Dammit!"

The show is sponsored by the Paulist Fathers. Its aim—to explore in religious depth the conflicts of modern man.

East Germany claims that nearly 80,000 West Germans and others have asked for permission to live in the east since August, 1961.

Baden-Powell Quits Managing Liquor Stores

LONDON (AP)—The grandson of the founder of the Boy Scout movement has stepped down as chairman of two liquor stores and plans to take his seat in the house of lords.

He is Lord Baden-Powell, 37. His grandfather founded the Boy Scout movement in 1908 and the Girl Guides in 1910.

The present Lord Baden-Powell succeeded to the title in 1962 when his father died. The first Lord Baden-Powell died in 1941.

The present titleholder has been working on technicalities connected with sitting in the House of Lords. Meanwhile, he has operated two shops in Nottingham.

He was born in Johannesburg and the South African government have been very slow in the progress of my birth certificate and other documents necessary to take up my seat in the Lords," he said. "At last I can take my seat."

Pearson Asks Russian Envoy About Arms Deal

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson called in Soviet Ambassador Ivan Shpedko Wednesday to seek details of Russian arms agreements with Cyprus.

External Affairs Minister Martin, who disclosed this in the Commons, was present at the meeting. He gave no details of the talks.

Mr. Martin said Cyprus has the right but, in the view of the Canadian government, no justification for acquiring arms from Russia.

He added in reply to Wallace B. Nesbitt (PC — Oxford) that the full text of the agreement between the Greek-Cypriot government of Cyprus and Russia is not clear. In addition to certain weapons, Cyprus was to receive some economic aid.

Canada is the main contributor in personnel to the 6,300-man United Nations force on Cyprus.

Parties, Labor Leaders Attack PSI Increase

TORONTO (CP) — Members of Ontario opposition political parties and labor leaders Wednesday criticized announced premier Lesmueen in the doctor-run Physicians' Services Incorporated health insurance program.

Some suggested the Dec. 1 jump in PSI rates would hasten the advent of a government-operated, prepaid health program.

PSI Tuesday announced increased monthly rates ranging from $5 cents for single persons in a group plan to $5.20 more for coverage of a family paying directly outside a group. The new monthly group rate for a family will be $13.25 instead of $10.75. The employers usually pays half the subscription in group plans.

"These are impossibly unfair and exorbitant figures," said Stephen Lewis, New Democratic Party member of the legislature for Scarborough West and NDP candidate in Ontario matters. "Premiums will price people out of medical care to which they are entitled as of right."

David Archer, president of the Ontario Federation of Labor, said the increase "makes us all the more determined we are going to fight for a national health plan."

NDP Raffle Will Pay Debts

VICTORIA (CP)—British Columbia's New Democratic Party hopes the British election this month will pay off most of the party's debts.

The NDP has launched a contest in which participants stand to win $1,000 cash or a trip to London for the opening of the next British Parliament — for the meeting the outcome of the Oct. 15 election.

Party members across the province are giving out ballot pens and the election forecast ticket in exchange for a dollar for democracy.

The officials say the operation doesn't contravene Canadian laws banning lotteries.

The pens cost about 75 cents apiece and there are some 14,000 of them.

Sale of the pens would wipe out most of the party's debts and current obligations which now total $14,000.

They Work too Fast

The City Council has not yet decided on specifications for the new contract for the collection of the city's garbage.

Alderman Ben Corke, a merchant, is worried because proposed specifications would forbid the use of cardboard cartons, which many store owners prefer to use.

The Chamber of Commerce, on the other hand, is concerned about the "deplorable condition" of Front St. on garbage pickup days and blames this on inadequate containers.

The Chamber may be partly right, but nobody seems to have discovered the basic cause for scattered garbage after the collection trucks have passed.

Perhaps, this is not surprising, as the fault is most unusual these days.

The men on the garbage trucks work at too fast a pace.

We have seen them literally running from can to can.

Why they do this, we do not know. It may be in order to get through work early, or perhaps it has a bearing on the amount they are paid. We cannot believe, though, they work at this rate merely for the love of it.

It is good to see men who are prepared to work hard, whatever the reason. But with garbage collecting, as with so many other jobs, it is possible to work at too fast a clip. There comes a point where increased speed inevitably results in a sloppy job.

Oftentimes, we will admit, inadequate containers and badly packaged garbage make it virtually impossible to avoid spills. But there is a reason for the prevalence of containers of this type. The fast-working garbage men drop pails and lids any place. Garbage cans roll out into the road and get hit by passing cars and trucks. Lids lie on the sidewalk and are trampled upon or, in winter, get frozen into the sidewalk or lost in a snowdrift. If a new garbage can is still in good repair a month or two after it is purchased, it is a miracle. Few people are prepared to replace damaged cans with new ones as frequently as their condition demands.

It seems almost incredible, but the most necessary condition of the new specifications is that the garbage collectors slow down to a normal rate of speed, that they stop working so hard.

A Real Achievement

The years have been good to Mr. and Mrs. George Bonisteele—and they have been good to the years.

For both, progress granted the opportunity to live together for seventy years, and only some of those with the opportunity are gifted with the courage, the good humor and the temperament to make of these years a happy adventure instead of letting them peter out into a dreary chore.

Though Mr. and Mrs. Bonisteele are both, 92, goody says the picture taken at their seventieth wedding anniversary, a picture which graced the front page of The Ontario Intelligencer on Monday, could doubt but that they are still enjoying life.

This, alone, would be an achievement for either of them. To establish this mark together doubles the significance.

We offer to Mr. and Mrs. Bonisteele our congratulations on their good fortune—and our admiration of the manner in which they have taken advantage of it.

Students "Scouted"

Canadian engineering students are being "scouted" like hockey players. So says Frank Forward, director of the Federal Scientific Secretariat.

Young potential scientists are being lured away by United States universities who have checked on their abilities, he told the Canadian Symposium on Communications Engineering.

When one comes to think about it, the wonder is not that talented young people are being sought out to fill important jobs in today's complex world, but rather that for so many years industries have been content to depend upon adequately trained people coming to them seeking jobs, rather than going out looking for the best.

Could it be that the sport promoters here have demonstrated they are more enterprising and energetic than our great captains of industry?

There slumbers in every person the longing for youth, desire once more to experience the lovely time of hot craving, its fulfilment and its romantic disguise.—Dr. Wilhelm Stekel.

Socialistically Inclined Sauve Shocks Fellow Liberals

By RICHARD JACKSON

From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — From what the Government likes to regard as Prime Minister Pearson's "Cabinet of all talents," something suspiciously like socialist seems to have emerged.

He is Forestry Minister Maurice Sauve who, in quiet speeches in and around Montreal, has been sending shivers up the spine of the advocates of private enterprise and individual initiative.

Sauve is being replied by some in his party not merely with suspicion, but with hostility as being so far to the Economic Left as to be more of a New Democrat at heart than a Liberal.

For one, Saskatchewan Premier Ross Thatcher, now of the Orthodox Right but once of the Way-Out Left, regards him as a Socialist. And he should know a Socialist when he sees one, for he himself is a reformed New Democrat.

An economist, Sauve has made a speech to the Montreal Economic Association in which he called for "economic planning" and the economists are still studying his text, trying to determine how this differs substantially from a "planned economy."

If the business community has some reservations about Mr. Sauve, the feeling is mutual.

UP TO GOVERNMENT

Economic planning, he argues, involves all sectors of the economy, but the primary responsibility is the government's. "The guardian of the general patrimony and guardian of the public interest."

Private enterprise, he insists, can't be expected to do any national economic planning for, he puts it, "social objectives do not form part of the traditional profit motive of private business" even although businessmen are developing more and more a praiseworthy social conscience."

Having so patronizingly patted business on the head as if it were a small child, Sauve's planning mentors, he let fly with this:

"Individual companies are not structured to intervene and to work towards the general interest," and the state being "primarily responsible for the public welfare, must coordinate the economy in function of it."

To put the economic show on the road, Economic Planner Sauve wants the Federal and 10 Provincial Governments immediately to define what he terms objectives and priorities.

He wants them to "take on such basic questions as:

What branches and sectors of industry deserve my (the Government's with the taxpayers' money) encourage?

What minimum standard of living do we wish to provide for all Canadians?

What part of our resources must we devote to the production of consumer goods and what to the formation of capital?

OLD ISSUE

This arbitrary listing by Big Brother of what a nation can spend on consumer goods — food, cars, homes and all the other things we make life tolerable — and what must go into capital — like steel plants, mines, machinery and the other means of production—is an economic device pioneered and practised by Hitler's Nazi Germany (remember "Guns before butter!") and, more recedably, by Socialist Sweden.

Finally, as one of the five basic objectives of economic planning, Sauve lists the "distribution of income, the equitable distribution."

Premier Ross Thatcher and other advocates of free enterprise and private initiative who thinks like him might reasonably ask who is to decide what's "equitable" and how will dict the "distribution?"

Mr. Sauve perhaps? Certainly, if his thinking is to prevail, the economic planners.

The Sauve speech ran almost 20 typed pages. Not everybody has the hard core of it was found in the sentence: ". . . economic planning. . . is the consultation of goals broader than the narrowly economic goals of the marketplace . . . and to examine their reconciliation and ultimate resolution conflicts existing among economic goals and between economic and non-social goals."

Perhaps to comfort those on the Right of the party he threw in this: "economic planning. . . is in no way a threat to our fundamental democratic system of private enterprise. . . on the contrary, it is an eminently democratic process."

But in the balance of one sentence against nearly 30 pages, would be sound convincing to Premier Thatcher or even to Trade Minister Mitchell Sharp, the businessman of the Cabinet?

Difference Between Dress, Gown, Is $50

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Purely Personal Prejudices:

I have never understood how a candidate can attack his opponent bitterly in the primary and then urge all good party members to support the scoundrel a few months later; all this does is breed cynicism and disbelief in the electorate.

Some day, for a refreshing change, I hope a candid club chairman will present the speaker of the evening by saying: "Sorbo and so is rather obtuse outside of his own small circle, and therefore requires a fairly elaborate introduction; I am tired of speakers who "need no introduction" — and get a lengthy one, anyway.

One of the first things a husband learns about feminine semantics is that the difference between a "dress" and a "gown" is at least $50.

America is the only country in the world where grown men of 40 and older will stand around at a party and discuss their college days with heaving nostalgia; and one is driven to the supposition that the Master supplied some seed that the real mater failed to.

Among my souvenirs of science fiction reviews is Alexander Woollcott's: "The scenery in the play is beautiful, but the actors insisted on standing in front of it."

Why do hotel operators keep ringing a room long after it is evident that no one is there, instead of giving you the message clerk after a decent interval?

If a Nightmare by Bradner Matthews said, "is a person educated beyond his intelligence," then a lowbrow is a person who stubbornly refuses to let his intelligence become educated; and most men are content to drive through life on 10 percent of their intellectual horsepower, while demanding the right to political, and more, from their automobiles.

Poets and song-writers have dwelt too exclusively on the pain of missing someone; but it is a pain that contains a wide stream of pleasure, for the capacity of miss a loved one contains a delightful anticipation of full union; it is the people who don't really miss anyone who are the saddest.

The truest test of affinity between two persons lies not so much in their sharing abstract ideas or beliefs as in the objects they can laugh at together; if one person laughs at things the other finds cruel or disgusting, they can never be real friends.

A politician who becomes honest after his career is over in his pile is no more deserving of our approbation than the profligate who gets religion after he has become fatigued of his vices.

Watson-Watt Protests Plot

The man who developed radar for aircraft detection, Sir Robert Watson-Watt, was caught speeding by police and paid a $12.50 fine, the Ontario Safety League reports.

He commemorated the event with this poem:

Fifty Sir Robert Watson-Watt
Strange target of this radar plot
And though with others I can mention.
The victim of his own invention.
His magical all-seeing eye
Enables cloud-bound planes to fly;
But now by some ironic twist
It spots the speeding motorist
It bites, no doubt with legal glee
The hand that once created it.

Alertness on the part of farmers in the Oak Hill sector resulted in the apprehension of two juveniles, who returned to the scene of their previous crimes of robbery on Saturday and were captured by John Frederick of Oak Hill, assisted by neighbors. The two 18-year-old youths, both of Toronto, were armed with a loaded automatic shot gun which they had allegedly stolen from Mr. Frederick's home last Friday evening. The lads were securely tied with ropes until Provincial Police were notified and who later secured the pair of young desperadoes in the County Jail on charge of robbery. They were found in possession of Mr. Frederick's gun and a watch also stolen from his farm during the family's absence two nights before.

To Your Good Health

Do Not Fear Eye Surgery In View of Modern Techniques

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have a physician in my area who ophthalmologist thinks it should be taken off. It has been growing for 30 years, doesn't bother me at all, and is not noticeable.

I am 74 and in very good health. An eye operation might em. me. What do you think? — Mrs. E. L.

A pterygium is a fold in the membrane of the eyeball (usually on the side toward the nose) and is seen more frequently in elderly persons, especially those who have been much exposed to the elements — dust, and wind. Farmers and sailors have them somewhat oftener than others. But anyone may acquire them.

The pterygium grows very slowly toward the centre of the eyeball, and eventually can extend over the pupil. That is when you first notice any symptoms. Vision in that eye becomes blurry and distorted.

Since it grows so slowly (yours has been growing for 20 years, and very likely had started before you noticed it in the first place) there is plenty of time to watch it and estimate when it needs to be removed.

There are two reasons for not waiting too long. First, you naturally don't want it to keep impairing your eyesight. Second, it is much easier (and safer) to remove before it progresses that stage. When it has started to cover the pupil, removal can leave a scar which is itself affect vision.

I wouldn't fear the eye surgery in view of the modern and successful techniques now in use.

Of course I haven't seen your eye. Your opthalmologist has. In view of his advice, it may be that it is closer to impairing your vision than you realize. Perhaps your mind will be set at rest if you talk to your doctor again about it, or else you may wait until you get the opinion of another eye specialist. The important thing is that you should not wait until you begin to notice trouble.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have very oily skin, with pimples and blackheads. Is there a certain kind of soap I could use, or a special diet to follow? — I am 15. — P. C.

I think you ought to read my booklet, "Acne, The Teen-Age Problem." It answers these very questions, and many more. If you want a copy, send 30 cents in coin and a long, unstamped, self-address envelope to me in care of the Chicago Tribune Syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill.

Dear Dr. Molner: What is the cause of a larger fingers? What is generally done for it? Will it get well by itself in time? — Mrs. C. H.

A trigger finger is one that appears to get stuck when bent, and then suddenly snaps back to normal position. It is due to constriction or tightening of the tissues responsible for bending the finger.

Injection of hydrocortisone may help. Occasionally surgery is necessary to free the tendon.

Dear Dr. Molner: I cut myself shaving about four months ag and the place doesn't seems to get better. It has a brown spot and has a little hole in the middle. I have tried several ointments and salves, but it occasionally bleeds, and when I wash my face the scab comes off. It does not hurt. — Mrs. E. H.

Four months is much too long for this to continue. It's something other than a cut. Have your doctor look at it, and tell him how it acts and how long it has been there.

Explains Simple Test For Cancer of Cervix

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

I would like to comment on your editorial headed "Detect Cancer Early," of September 23.

I presume the test to which you refer is a simple procedure that can be undertaken in a doctor's office, that will tell us those women who have cancer of the cervix (neck of the womb) or those women who, in time, might develop this disease.

It was being performed in this area, through the Provincial Laboratories, in the early 1950's, but, for some reason fell into disuse. However, several years ago, Kingston General Hospital initiated a scheme whereby medical practitioners could send the specimens to his laboratory and he established a charge for this work.

Mr. Meslen indicated that some facts had been contradicted but refused to state what these so called facts were. Facts are not contradictable but sometimes the person bearing that weapon gets injured; so it is much safer to just inflate them generally and not allow the opposition the opportunity to see the source.

Mr. David at least was wise enough to see the truth in His Worship's statement and right-fully stated "that some men of mature years can outperform their younger brothers." He also realized that youth has spontaneous contributions that they should be offering to their community. It is not inferred that all youth is capable of accepting such responsibility.

It is interesting to note that Mr. Whalen brought the statement by the Mayor was too ridiculous to warrant recognition, but contradicted himself by submitting his amazement of the fact that young citizens of Belleville could prove beneficial. I would suggest to Mr. Whalen that he read newspaper reports with an open mind and not with one filled with amusement and prejudice.

In closing I would commend Mayor Ellis, as a politician, for having the courage to express himself and not worry about deflating the busy business man and the decisive retired man.

I'm sure they will have more admiration for a man who looks them squarely in the eye.

Jaycee Defends Speech by Mayor

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer,

I feel that I must defend the speech that Mayor Ellis presented to the Belleville Jaycees and which was disputed with such fallacy by a Mr. Whalen and Mr. David. The latter was on time stated that "all business people have no time to properly contribute to effective service on city council and boards" and that "retired citizens are unable to make decisions." Mayor Ellis did indicate, and quite correctly, that contrary to popular belief it was not necessary for a person to be a business man or an older citizen in order to take an active part in municipal affairs.

Mr. Meslen indicated that some facts had been contradicted but refused to state what these so called facts were. Facts are not contradictable but sometimes the person bearing that weapon gets injured; so it is much safer to just inflate them generally and not allow the opposition the opportunity to see the source.

Mr. David at least was wise enough to see the truth in His Worship's statement and rightfully stated "that some men of mature years can outperform their younger brothers." India Plans Press Council To Control All Newspapers

NEW DELHI (AP)—The Indian government is pushing for a stiff new law introduced in Parliament as a way to help newspapers maintain independence and high standards. It would set up a press council headed by India's chief justice and vested with court - like powers.

The council could compel a journalist to testify and to reveal his sources of information. After one censure, its strongest penalty, the council could recommend that the government take "further action" of a kind left vague.

Besides the chief justice, the council would be composed of three members of Parliament who would in turn choose 21 other councilmen.

The bill is undergoing strenuous debate in Parliament and may be weakened or shelved, despite the ruling Congress party's overwhelming majority.

Indian newspapers have stated their opposition, not to upholding professional ethics and conduct but, as one column-ist put it, to a press council "combining the functions of jury and judge and the government performing the functions of lord high executioner."

Defence of India rules proclaimed during the India-China border war in 1962 and still in force, give the government broad police powers and authority to ban writing on internal political conditions, foreign relations, food supplies and many other topics. Use of these censorship powers has been limited so far to reports on troop movements and arms aid and to giving Indian journalists what is called guidance and advice.

Grandmother Is Not Suspect In Kidnapping

POITIERS, France (Reuters) — The grandmother of one of three kidnapped children emerged from a coma Wednesday for the first time since she was discovered hanging in her home Tuesday.

The condition of Mrs. Giselle Blet, 55, is still serious, though improved, police said. They said she was not a suspect in the kidnapping of her five-year-old grandson and two other children, found unhurt last week.

Police continued search for the kidnappers who sent skull- and - crossbones demands for 1,000,000 - franc ($200,000) ransom before the children, whose parents are not wealthy, were found.

Third Candidate Picked for Vote

GALT (CP) — Alderman S. M. (Max) Saltsman was named by acclamation Wednesday night as New Democratic Party candidate for Waterloo South in the Nov. 9 federal byelection.

The 43-year-old Galt businessman was unopposed at the nominating convention, attended by 275 persons.

Roderick Stewart, 31, a Galt history teacher who left the NDP after unsuccessful contests as NDP candidate for the seat in federal elections, was named Liberal party candidate Sept. 16.

Alderman James Chaplin, 31-year-old Galt industrialist and son of the late Progressive Conservative member, Gordon Chaplin, whose death in June brought on the byelection, was chosen Conservative candidate at a convention Monday night.

100 M.P.H. HANDLERS

LONDON (CP) — A driving course is being launched here to teach speed-hungry young drivers how to handle 100 m.p.h. touring cars. The course, for a fee of £23 and run by the British School of Motoring, offers nine hours of driving on all kinds of roads in six high-performance cars.

Peterborough Asks Hearings On Train Cut

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — City council has asked the Board of Transport Commissioners for public hearings in connection with the announced cancellation by Canadian Pacific Railway of its day-liner service to Toronto.

The CPR said it will cancel the service October 25 because it is losing money on the three daily trips the train makes.

Prince Looked Too Much Like Prince

LONDON (AP)—A pub sign with the picture of the Prince of Wales has been taken down because it looked too much like the real Prince of Wales.

The pub named the Prince of Wales recently put up a brightly new sign outside its premises in suburban Thornton Heath.

Then someone wailed that the sign resembled the real Prince of Wales—15-year-old Prince Charles—with a Rolling Stones haircut.

The Rolling Stones are a British beat group with hair even shaggier than the Beatles.

Law and convention prohibit pubs or other commercial concerns from using like-nesses of living members of the Royal Family in advertising.

Had Drink Test For Girls Who Replied to Ad

HAMILTON (CP) — Girls answering a news,-aper advertisement for security investigators were allegedly told they would be sent out to secluded spots to caddie on golf courses, Crown Attorney Blake Ward Morrison was told in court Wednesday.

Detective Leonard Carrington also testified that truck driver Paul Barbe had displayed in his office a card reading "drink test 1, 2, 3," which Barbe told him was used as a test given to the evenings to applicants to see how much liquor they could hold.

Barbe pleaded not guilty to a charge of false advertising. Bail was set at $1,000 and the trial for Tuesday.

Detective Carrington said Barbe furnished one room of his two-room apartment as an office and interviewed women answering his advertisement.

Chaperon Describes System Of Control of Teen-Agers

CHATHAM (CP)—An elaborate system to control teenagers attending Friday night dances at Park Street United Church here was described by a chaperon Wednesday at the trial of Rev. Russel D. Horsburgh, the church's minister.

The dances had three chaperons, "one on the floor, one on the door and one on the rounds," the defence witness testified. He and other chaperons laid various traps around the church by leaving doors in pre-set positions in an effort to catch teen-agers sneaking into other parts of the church.

If the doors were not in the same positions when they made their rounds—15-minute tours through the church rooms conducted regularly during the evening—the chaperons checked to see who had moved them.

Mr. Horsburgh is on trial on eight charges of contributing to juvenile delinquency. Four defence witnesses testified Wednesday, the seventh day of the trial.

The adult witness said four chaperons had taken the dances comp ctely off the hands of Mr. Horsburgh. "We took over because we thought it was our duty," he told Crown Attorney Blake Ward.

GIVES REASONS

He said they tried to make the dances "more to the teenagers, not because they thought they weren't proper as they had been, but rather to improve decorations and the like.

Defence counsel Cyril Perkins objected when Mr. Ward questioned the chaperon concerning a split in the congregation of the church. He was overruled by juvenile court Judge W. H. Parfett.

The chaperon agreed he was one of the section in support of Mr. Horsburgh, although he differed with him on occasion. "He trusted those children too far," he said.

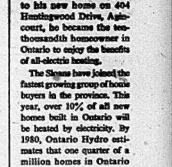
He testified his job at the dances was not easy, and once he "just took a rest" of two weeks after 2½ years "of chasing juveniles around."

He said Mr. Horsburgh's conduct was exemplary at all times.

Another witness, a 17-year old member of a youth group in the church, testified he had never heard Mr. Horsburgh suggest to any teen-ager to have sexual intercourse.

GOES TO CHURCH

The youth had gone to the church at least daily before the club was disbanded. It could play the piano and "think and be by myself," he said. It gave him something to do and kept him out of trouble."



Under cross-examination, he said he had been in the apartment of the church many times and had once seen two boys taking part in an act "too filthy to talk about."

He told Mr. Horsburgh about it, but the clergyman made little comment except to express disgust.

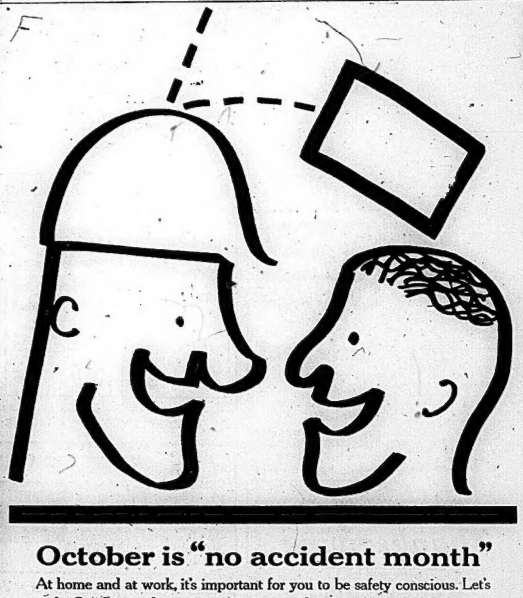
Homes With Electric Heating Pass 10,000 Sales Mark in Ontario

When Mr. W. N. Sloan moved to his new home on 404 Huntingwood Drive, Agincourt, he became the ten-thousandth homeowner in Ontario to enjoy the benefits of all-electric heating.

The Sloans have joined the fastest growing group of home buyers in the province. This year, over 10% of all new homes built in Ontario will be heated by electricity. By 1980, Ontario Hydro estimates that one quarter of a million homes in Ontario alone will have electric heating.



There are many reasons why Electric Heating is growing so rapidly.

Electricity powers the cleanest heating system ever developed. Since no fuel is burned, there is no ash, no soot to contend with. Annual cleaning and other yearly maintenance costs are eliminated. There is no bulky furnace or fuel storage tank to take up space in the basement. This gives the owner of an electrically heated home more usable space for his recreation room or work shop.

One big advantage of electric heating is room-by-room temperature control. Electric heating offers a thermostat for each room. There is no such thing as a hot living room or a cold bedroom—unless you want them that way.

Electric heating is truly quiet. There are none of the noises usually associated with heating systems. It is clean and quiet as sunlight. Yet, with all its advantages, electric heating, installed to the Triple Seal standards of the Electric Heating Association of Ontario, costs no more to operate than other automatic heating systems.

Anyone looking for a home these days certainly should look at electrically heated homes before making a choice. Many of these homes are open for inspection in almost every area of the province.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

QUESTION: I've been invited to the wedding and reception of a friend and would like to attend, but another friend will be visiting me for the weekend. I don't feel I should leave her alone to attend the wedding, since I will be gone most of the day. The only solution I can see is for my visitor to attend the wedding with me. Would it be a breach of etiquette for me to ask the bride if my guest may attend too? She doesn't know my guest, so that's the main reason I have hesitated about asking. — F. S., Forest Hills, N. Y.

ANSWER: It would not be proper to ask that a total stranger be invited on such an occasion. If you cannot ask your guest to postpone her visit for a week or so, then you should decline the invitation to the wedding and reception.

QUESTION: My mother and I were going shopping, so a fellow I date occasionally said he'd give us a lift home in his car. I told him what store we'd be in and made an appointment for him to meet us outside at three o'clock. As usual there was quite a lot of traffic. He was a few minutes late and, when he drove up, he merely reached over and opened the door for us to get in. Ever since, mother has criticized him for his lack of manners. She says he should have gotten out of the car, walked around to the curb and helped us in correctly. Ordinarily this is exactly what he does do, but there was so much traffic and he stopped in a "No Parking" zone to pick us up. I think, in view of the circumstances, that it was more practical to dispense with formalities at that time. What do you think? — K. A. A., Poughkeepsie, N.Y.

ANSWER: Usually a man should get out of his car and help a woman into it. But it's not considered rude to dispense with such chivalry when he has to stop in the thick of traffic and if being gallant makes him run the risk of being hit by a car or hit with a parking ticket.

QUESTION: When demitasse is served in the living room after dinner, is it correct to serve dessert along with it? My sister says dessert should be served at the dining room table, instead. Which is correct? — Mrs. N. A., Columbus, Ohio.

ANSWER: Dessert is served in the dining room. The hostess then pours demitasse in the living room and hands cups to her guests.

QUESTION: A wisp of hair came loose from my hairdo while at a dance the other night, so, when I got back to the table I took out a small spray, tucked it back and applied a short squirt to keep it in place. One of the other girls said that if I had to make repairs, she'd be glad to show me where the powder room was. She obviously thought I was impolite to fix my hair at the table, but, since I did it rather quietly and without any commotion, I don't see where I was being rude or thoughtless. What do you think? — A. F., Chicago, Ill.

ANSWER: Using a spray comes under the heading of major repairs, so a trip to the powder room would have been more polite.

'Lines on Life'

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

Thomas Jefferson, third president of the United States, and one of the maker authors of the historic Declaration of Independence, was a wise man in the tradition of the philosopher-king. He knew what some leaders, unhappily, never learn: that the community never rises higher than the average of the "average man." Jefferson spent a lifetime trying to help him to "improve his average."

His lessons were profoundly simple, uncomplicated, and unembellished by words which sometimes obscure fundamental wisdom. Here are ten of his suggestions — rules of life:

1. Never put off until tomorrow what you can do today.
2. Never trouble another for what you can do yourself.
3. Never spend your money before you have it.
4. Never buy what you do not want because it is cheap. It will be dear to you.
5. Pride costs us more than hunger, thirst and cold.
6. We never repent of having eaten too little.
7. Nothing is troublesome that we do willingly.
8. How much pain have we been cost by the evils which never happened.
9. Take things always by the smooth handle.
10. When angry, count ten before you speak; when very angry, a hundred.

ETHICAL THEORISTS

Nothing here, to be sure, for the systematic philosophers, the ethical theorists, and the like. Things too simple, too ordinary for their scrutiny and concern. Yet many a philosopher would do well to heed these simplicities. For there is no more disheartening an experience than to meet a learned knave or a scientific fool. Trapped by their close attention to words, or books, or systems of thought, all too often they forget the higher wisdom — the homely rules of simple living.

HIGHER PROBLEMS

Nor was Jefferson speaking here of the world-shaking, international problems which plagued his society, as they do ours. But his involvement in these "little problems" of society did not dull the edge of his keen concerns for the "lower problems" of the individual. Sometimes, in fact, those who seem most dedicated to "saving the world" have a great difficulty in living with their own neighbors — or even with their own wives. Looking for the world, these "social-minded" ones rarely look into their own mirrors. They worry much about "public relations," little about "private relations."

Jefferson is remembered for his diplomacy and statesmanship. But he also had simple and profound personal lessons to teach.

U.C.W. Meeting

ST. JOHN'S U.C.W.

CAMPBELLFORD — The general meeting of St. John's United Church U.C.W. was held in the church auditorium on Thursday evening. The president, Mrs. M. Fetherick presided when 46 members were in attendance.

Reports were given on the fowl supper to be held in October and the centennial of St. John's in 1965. The convener asked for old costumes and old music to be used in the proposed centennial pageant.

An invitation was received to attend a regional workshop to be held at Hoards Station Church October 21st. At the workshop ideas will be presented, gleaned at summer school at Albert College. Members were reminded of the opportunity sale to begin Oct. 13 and lasting until Oct. 24.

In the report of an executive meeting several recommendations were presented. One discussion took place regarding number of units. Should the units be less in number and consist of more members? It was recommended to place the church periodical, "The Observer," in every home.

Unit 6 was in charge of the program. President of the unit, Mrs. H. Pierce opened the meeting and welcomed the audience. The devotional service was in charge of Mrs. L. Brackenbridge, Mrs. J. Rannie, Mrs. Lois Towns. The theme was "Thanksgiving and revealed the significance and history of Thanksgiving from Biblical times to the Pilgrim Fathers, to modern observance. The leading of the Pilgrim had a simile in Abraham who "looked for a city whose builder and founder was God". Mrs. C. Seaborn contributed a solo.

Bethlehem Shrine No. 11 Holds Autumn Tea and Bazaar

A profusion of autumn blooms formed a colorful setting in the I.O.O.F. hall, Front Street, yesterday afternoon for the fall tea and bazaar sponsored by Bethlehem Shrine, No. 11.

The event was graciously convened by Mrs. H. Bridges, while warmly greeting guests at the entrance to the auditorium were Worthy High Priestess Mrs. Adam Stalker and Mrs. E. Gibbs. Taking tickets at the door were Mrs. J. Darvel, Mrs. M. Moorman and Mrs. G. O'Neil.

ATTRACTIVE TEA ROOM

The tea room convener was Mrs. Y. Bushell, assisted by Mrs. Pat Nichol and Mrs. D. Middleton as co-conveners. Here, there was an artistic centrepiece on the white linen cloth, of white and gold sprayed yellow 'mums. Yellow candles in matching gold-en candelabra, the silver tea services and prettily adorned serviettes completed the attractive setting. Each of the quartette guest tables was covered with a white luncheon cloth and centred with yellow, mauve and deep purple asters and 'mums in golden colored rose bowls.

Receiving in the tea room were: Mrs. F. Helson, Mrs. R. Valleau and Mrs. A. Little and pouring tea throughout the afternoon were Mrs. C. Barragar, Mrs. J. MacDonald, Mrs. M Hearns, Mrs. R. Fleming, Mrs. G. Adams, Mrs. Glenna Black and Mrs. H. Stevens.

SALES TABLES

Particularly eye-catching were the various sales tables each with their abundance of goods and decorated with green, yellow and golden streamers. The apron table in charge of Mrs. L. Adams and Mrs. C. McMullen had a generous supply of colorful aprons in prints, broadcloths and terrycloths. A wide variety of items were displayed on the miscellaneous table, including doilies, scarves, towels, mittens, socks, plaques and these were in charge of Mrs. F. Helson and Mrs. M. Black. A delicious assortment of candy in paper cups, cartons and boxes was available with M. Niblock and Mrs. M. Hick in charge of sales. The home-cooking table, always a drawing card at these events, was laden with many delicacies, including pies, tarts, muffins, layer cakes and was conversed by Mrs. J. Bell and Mrs. Rebecca Carman.

Lending a colorful background at one corner of the hall was a table of flowers and plants with African violets, geraniums, foliage plants and colorful bouquets of powder puff 'mums and asters, as well as spring bulbs and an assortment of jams, pickles and relishes. These were sold by Mr. and Mrs. William Adams.

A beautiful crocheted lace tablecloth in Queen Ann design made by Mrs. Adam Stalker was on display with draw ticket sales in charge of Mrs. Janet Williamson, with the draw to be made at a later date. Baskets of groceries were on display and ticket sales on these were in charge of Mrs. B. Humphreys and Mr. Georgs Pound. Winners of these were Mrs. A. McCrary of Tweed, Mrs. Mary White and M. Swoffer of Belleville.

The convener of the bazaar expressed appreciation to all who had helped in any way in making this a highly successful event.

Church Groups

ST. MARK'S W.A.

BONARLAW — The first meeting of St. Mark's W.A. after the summer recess opened with a pot luck dinner at the cottage of Mrs. Burton Woodbeck, Oak Lake.

Mrs. Noble, the deanery secretary and Rev. and Mrs. Secker, of St. Luke's church, Kingston, were present. Mrs. Secker is vice-president of the Diocesan board and secretary of the thank offering committee and on this occasion was the guest speaker. Mr. Stewart conducted the opening exercises and led in meditation.

Social service, Dorcas and treasurer's reports were given. Finances were found to be in a healthy condition and prospects for a busy season looked favorable as donations of remnants were received from both the T. Eaton Co., and Simpsons—Sears.

DEANERY MEETING

Mr. Stewart announced the thanksgiving service to be held at 9:45 a.m. on Sept. 27th. Mrs. Noble announced the annual deanery meeting of the W.A. will be held October 20th at Trenton. She also gave a few of the do's and dont's of W.A. work. The first board meeting is to be held in Brockville, with the Bishop of Uganda as the guest speaker. The diocesan board requests a treasurer's report from each branch.

Mrs. Barlow gave a reading found among the papers of the late Mrs. Jason Baker, dated 1925.

GUEST SPEAKER

Mrs. Secker gave a splendid address using as her theme, "Do It Now". "This saying is well-known in advertising and local improvement talks and to boost employment during the winter months, but it is equally, if not more effective in its use in social, charitable and children's work. Procrastination is deadly and is a common fault in most people's lives. The sick, the shut-ins and strangers should be visited. Opportunities for the teaching and training of young people should not be neglected."

The importance of meditation and prayer for everyone was stressed. "It is easy to lose the interest of young people through procrastination. It is far better to take a child into the church organizations too young than to let them get interested elsewhere and in all probability, not get their interest again."

After this impressive talk Mrs. Woodbeck served tea and cake and the meeting closed with the benediction by Rev. Stewart.

The Puritan collar and the blouson look, make a vivacious appearance on the fall fashion scene. These two new style trends, cleverly interpreted by Scout Tex in this two piece slim set. Striped vest top features V neck, solid Puritan collar and cuffs, with blouson tie at waist. Worn over matching bonded solid slims, in glorious fall shades of ceramic blue, Guatemala green and flame red.

Dessert Party, Hats, Furs Featured at Annual Bridge

High styles in hats and furs were shown yesterday afternoon at the Officers' Mess in the Armories when the Argyle Chapter of the I.O.D.E. presented their annual dessert party, bridge and style show.

Flattering large brimmed hats, a profile hat in beaver felt, sophisticated draped turbans, and pill boxes of fur were featured in the hats. An imported black and white checked beret was tied at the back with ribbon, and a startling velour was in red and green with a snood effect. Feathers were popular and were used in all over fashion, in ostrich plumage and pheasant trim. Fur hats were high pillboxes in beaver and mink.

Furs favored the little fur pieces, stoles, capes and short jackets. Persian lamb in brown, gray or black appeared to be still popular many with mink trim on collars. Collars were cutaway, pouch or shirred. Canadian squirrel was used in a jacket, and one Persian jacket had sleeves of black mink. The favored style appeared to be "bubble" in both hat and fur styles.

Woodley Furs presented both hats and furs with Miss Hazel Smith and Doug Woodley supervising. The attractive models were Mrs. Rayna Smith, Mrs. Claire Haskin, Mrs. Marylea Burtt, Mrs. Barbara Refausse, Mrs. Joan Birkenshaw and Mrs. Jerry Sprague.

Mrs. F. R. Allan was convener of the fashion show, and Mrs. A. S. McConnell was the capable commentator. Piano music throughout the show was provided by Mrs. R. Riedel.

Regent Mrs. O. M. Smith received the guests as they arrived assisted by Mrs. W.O. Cochrane.

A selection of delectable desserts tempted the ladies and calories were forgotten for the afternoon. Mrs. K. D. H. Willcocks was convener for this part of the entertainment.

About fifty tables were in play during the afternoon with still popular many with mink both bridge and euchre. High winner was Mrs. Thoda Miller; low, Mrs. Stella Smith, and hidden score was Miss Hazel Smith.

The euchre prize was won by Mrs. Peg Tullaugh and Mrs. Kaye Kokesh won the door prize.

Basic Oatmeal Mix for Muffins

by Mary Moore

As you may have noticed, we have had requests for oatmeal cookie recipes recently. Another arrived today asking for Basic Oatmeal Mix, including variation for making date or nut oatmeal muffins.

I gave the Basic Oatmeal Mix here in July /59 and think the time has arrived to repeat it. Please clip this rem. ber.

BASIC OATMEAL MIX:

Seven cups sifted all-purpose flour, 1 cb. 4 oz (1 box) quick cooking rolled oats, 5½ cups sugar, 1½ tablespoons salt, ¾ cup baking powder, 1 lb. good quality sho tening (a brand that does not require refrigeration), Sift together flour, sugar, salt and baking powder 3 times. Cut in shortening until mixture is of granular consistency. Add rolled oats and mix. Store in covered container at room temperature.

Shifts Blame To Children

VANCOUVER (CP)—Parents have a champion in New York psychologist Barbara Goodman. "Don't blame the parents for their children's misdemeanors," she says. "It takes two to tangle."

Miss Goodman explains that when a child misbehaves you have an explosion coming from an interpersonal relationship between child and parent.

"I can't see this automatically blaming the parent. Every parent does his best by his children. Some are not cut out to do so well. The reason some don't do better is because they don't know how."

Miss Goodman, a consultant at Roosevelt Hospital in New York, taught a summer school course at the Universit of British Columbia in psychology of childhood.

She says there are two main problems with teen-agers: their growing sense of independence and their lack of moderation. But she advises against worrying about the long-haired Beatle screamer, the way-out dresser—worry about the quiet ones.

"It's just plain horse sense to worry about the one that is a social isolationist."

USES TV FOR GRACE

American airlines now are using TV cameras and play-back video-tape to train air stewardesses in deportment and grooming.

Nanny-Nappers Prowling New York Central Park

NEW YORK (AP)—"Nanny-nappers" are prowling Central Park's sidewalks in broad daylight.

They are well-to-do women searching for nurses to take care of their children. First they "case" the wheeled nannies who walk their charges in the park, then they try to entice them away from their employers.

They offer more money, or less work or fewer children to take care of, or all three.

This is how they operate: Usually, they will sit on a park bench for a few days, observing the passing parade of nannies from the wealthy apartments in mid - Manhattan. They examine the nanny's appearance and her manner with children.

Then, a chance encounter and a casual conversation.

"My, what a wonderful baby!"

"Thank you ma'am," says the nanny, a 25-year-old Swedish redhead.

"He seems so well - behaved."

"Thank you."

"Have you worked for his mother long?"

"For five months, maam."

"Are you happy there?"

"Well . . . ."

The nanny - napper learns that the Swedish woman earns $50 a week and that her employer tries to get her to do ironing and housework, and drinks a bit in the afternoons and becomes surly.

"How about coming to work for me? I'll pay you $60."

One mother, found pushing her own carriage through the park, expressed indignation when asked about her experiences with nannies.

"I'm finished with them," she said. "I've leaned over backwards. I've bought them all the special kinds of food they wanted. I've got in our closet at home all these white uniforms in six different sizes."

She had six nannies quit this summer.

Most nannies get between $25 and $65 a week, with room and board.

Mothers Rejoin Children Expatriated From Cuba

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — "Mama, don't you know me any more? I'm Juan."

It had been three years since Juan's mother sent him to the United States to escape Communist indoctrination in Cuba. He was 13 then.

His mother, who had arrived from Cuba by way of Mexico to join him, crushed him in embrace when she finally recognized him in crowded Miami International Airport.

Another Cuban mother, reunited with her twin sons, shook her head and said, "They have grown so much. I am a little afraid." They were 12 when they left Cuba three years ago.

Rt. Rev. Bryan O. Walsh, Miami director of Catholic Welfare Service and a leader in finding foster care for unaccompanied Cuban children, related these incidents. He said such dramas occurs frequently in this child - emigre movement.

One Cuban boy, eight years old when he left home, became so attached to his foster parents that he wanted to remain with them when his mother arrived three years later. He asked social workers to "get a little foster boy for my mother so I can stay here."

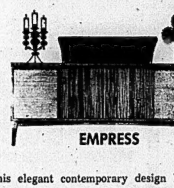
More than 16,000 unaccompanied children have arrived in Miami since late 1960.

ALL OVER U.S.

These temporary "orphans in exile" and more than 80,000 other Cuban children, who are with their parents, have scattered throughout the United States.

Thousands have reached adulthood in exile. Other thousands, born in exile, are U.S. citizens.

"A young Cuban generation is growing up with Americans, and adjusting quickly," a social worker observed.



When plane service between the United States and Cuba stopped in October, 1962, the migration slackened. But children still arrive almost daily, most of them now with their parents. Nearly all come in small boats, a hazardous escape route.

Some 2,500 children remain under foster care. Since Cubans are predominantly Roman Catholic, the Catholic Welfare Service handles most of their cases.

Legion News

BRANCH 587

The regular monthly meeting of the Col. Phay Wills Branch of the Royal Canadian Legion was held on Monday night, with the president Mrs. Janet MacDonald in the chair. This was the first meeting after the summer recess.

Plans were made for a rummage sale which is to be held in the Legion hall in October. Notices will appear in the paper. Any donations will be gratefully received. For pick-up phone Mrs. Ina Rollins at WO 2-0741. Most of proceeds from this sale are used to provide a bursary for a student. This year it will be received by Aubrey McLaughlin of Nicholson College, who is a student in the Factulty of Arts at the University of Toronto.

The branch will again take part in the sale of wreaths and poppies. The poppy committee has had a great many unfortunate people this year and they would appreciate any help they can get to sell poppies as this is the only money they receive with which to help out.

Two girls, who have moved to other towns, Olive Schmidt and Ethel Cumbley, will be sent gifts in recognition of their services to the branch.

The autumn dance will be held at the Legion hall on Oct. 17 with Ina Rollins convening the event.

The annual Silver Cross Tea for Silver Cross mothers will again be held on the Sunday prior to Remembrance Day. All Silver Cross mothers are invited to attend.

Mrs. Terry Gunock was the winner of the draw.

Again the girls are extending an invitation to ex-service women to join the branch and again enjoy the comradeship of the service.

DEER LICENCES

Deer licence sales in Ontario increased to 130,000 in 1963 from less than 4,000 in 1899.

Ann Landers

Majority of Panhandlers Are Accomplished Fakers

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I live in a large city and am frequently accosted on the street by people who ask for money for coffee or food, or a place to stay for the night.

Sometimes I give these people money and sometimes I don't. It depends on their approach, how they look, whether they're in a hurry, and if I believe they are in need.

My problem is that I don't trust my judgment. There are times when I give money and then decide I've been taken in by a faker. This makes me mad. Other times I have pangs of guilt because I fear I turned down a deserving person who only wanted a little help, which I can afford to give.

All of this is terribly disturbing and I'd like your views and your advice. — HELPING HAND, IF I CAN.

* * *

DEAR HELPING — Nobody in American needs to beg. The very one who will touch your heart is the panhandler who has rehearsed his lines, practised the sad look and learnbd how to get you where you live.

Why not ask the next panhandler who approaches you if he is hungy? He will probably say "Yes". Offer to walk with him to the nearest restaurant and pay for his meal. Chances are he'll decline. If he does accept — and you feed a hungry man — it's a darned good investment.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My in-laws are both 70. My husband and I have dinner with them every week. For several months now my father-in-law has not been acting very fatherly. He never does anything out of the way in the presence of his wife or my husband. He manages to get me alone — in the kitchen or in the back hall.

When I was dating I know how to deal with characters who sneaked up and planted an unwanted kiss on the back of your neck. I simply turned around and belted them one. There was never any trouble after that.

What should I do in this case? If my husband knew he'd be wild. I don't want to make a scene but I'm fed up. — DISGUSTED

* * *

DEAR D. — You can't belt a 70-year-old man, particularly a father-in-law. The old elk is probably operating strictly from memory so call on your sense of humor to save the day.

Nickname him "Old Love In Bloom" or "Casanova" and keep it loud and funny — and out in the open.

* * *

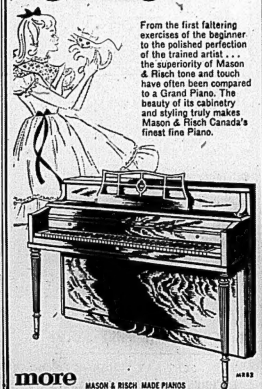
DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am a 16-year-old girl who would like your help with a problem. It's my mother.

When I am invited to a party I voluntarily give my mother the name, address and phone number of the person who invited me. I don't object to this. I DO object when she calls up the mother of the person who is giving the party and gives her the third degree.

She has to know what time the party starts, when it will be over and who the chaperones are. I'm sure the mothers resent her nosiness. It also makes me look like a baby.

Will you help me out by telling my mother she shouldn't make these calls? — EMBARRASSED INFANT.

* * *



DEAR EMBARRASSED — Sorry, but I heartily approve of the calls.

What you consider the third degree is really a healthy interest in you.

If more mothers took the time and trouble to find out where their daughters were and what they were doing I wouldn't be so busy sending out names of homes for unwed mothers.

The correspondence consisted of a letter from the County Home regarding the bazaar on Oct. 21st and "thank-you" letters.

The October meeting will be held in the form of a tour of the Bell Telephone Co., the ladies are asked to meet at the Bell Telephone Co. at 7.30 p.m.

Mrs. Lucas gave a report of the most interesting highlights of the area convention.

St. Andrew's W. M. S. Entertains Missionary Group

IVANHOE — A open meeting of St. Andrew's Presbyterian WMS was held in the church on Wednesday evening.

Visiting missionary groups represented Beulah United UCW; Ivanhoe; West Huntingdon UCW; Mt. Pleasant UCW; St. Andrew's Presbyterian, Stirling WMS; and Roslin and Fuller Presbyterian Mission Circles.

Mrs. Lindsay Sills presided and extended a warm welcome to the visitors.

During the worship period Mrs. A. Hassell and Mrs. William Donnan favored with a duet.

GUEST SPEAKER

Mrs. Amy Homewood, Salvation Army, Belleville, was introduced by Mrs. Barton Haggerty.

Mrs. Homewood with her husband are in charge of all the Salvation Army work in the district from Gananoque to Whitby.

Mrs. Homewood was born in China, the daughter of missionary parents. Before coming to Canada she had spent five years in India. She wore the S.A. uniform, worn in India, a white sari with red border. The sari is the national costume of India, although every area wears it slightly different.

She showed children's and adults' costumes, shoes, handwork and told of the food.

The National Council of Churches send out powdered milk and anti-malaria powder.

Mrs. Homewood spoke of the great difficulty in learning the languages— but said all could understand the language of love, as one learned of the great sacrifices made by these Christians in India.

Mrs. Dodds expressed thanks to the speaker and presented her with a small gift.

The program was brought to a close by a song service of familiar hymns and lunch was served.

Successful Living

Taming Girl's Steady May Win Him for Life

DEAR DORIS — My steady becomes extremely emotional and eager for contact with me. He often talks of overpowering me with his strength and I know that soon I'll have to fight him off in some way. In spite of this I love him dearly. If, when I feel that he is too eager, I try to push him away he becomes angry.

I hope that you will advise me on how to tame him without hurting his feelings. Please don't tell me to give him up. — ONE IN LOVE.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR ONE — It's going to be a race to see who tames whom! Unless, right now, you start avoiding compromising situations. If you plan on keeping him for life you push him away right now. Let him be angry!

* * *

DEAR DORIS — For over two years now I have been seeing a widow who is just my age (52.) We have been friends longer than that. All of the time she has been keeping company with a married man, and has never kept this from me.

Now I have grown to love her a great deal. I suppose my need to talk to some one has helped my love to grow for her. She says she likes me but not well enough to marry.

Most of the time she has refused to go anywhere with me locally, but won't say why. We go other places. If I suggest I may as well stop seeing her, she says why give up now, as she may love me some day.

Do you think it's wise for me to continue on with her in hope of things being better? It seems it would be so hard to break with her. On the other hand, I suppose if her married man should get free she'd just say goodbye. — WIDOWER ALONE.

* * *

DEAR WIDOWER — She toys with you as a cat with a mouse. Are you content to be a mouse? With a little more git-up-and-go you could find a mate suitable for a man. Try it.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — My husband never gives me a cent for myself. I clothe the kids with their family allowance cheques. I have most all my clothes given to me. I am 23 and have four children.

But here is the main thing: At night when he isn't working, he gets dressed and goes away, never says where he is going and does not come home until three or four in the morning. Never asks me to go.

If I should mention going he is always tired or has no gas or some excuse. He never shows me any love or just anything. And is always drinking when away.

What should I do? — LONESOME MOTHER.

* * *

DEAR LONESOME—Sounds more like board and room, with kitchen privileges, than a marriage. What put you so far apart?

Suppose you draw up a spending plan, including an amount to clothe you. Suppose you drew up a Care-of-Children-and-Mama list, to involve him. Suppose you spruced up and became 23 again.

Take things in hand. Plan some fun. He used to play with you. Try showing him what he's missing.

DEAR DORIS — Our nephew of 18 has come to live with us and is happy here. He told me he just hates his mother. He was in jail at 15 for taking money out of people's purses.

I asked him why he did that and he said that when you are accused of everything anyway, even when you don't do them, then you can do anything. You don't care any more.

We are on a farm. His Dad wants him to go home and get grade 12 but he wants to take some special training in agriculture. In five or six years we would be ready to give up our farm and we would sell our nephew the land. I've loved him since he was a baby and my mother took care of him.

I really don't know what to advise him. — PUZZLED AUNT.

* * *

DEAR AUNT — At 18 he has a mind of his own. In the eyes of the law he is adult enough to support himself.

From your lengthy letter it appears he has little cause to enjoy life with his parents. If he is bright, try for grade 12 where you are. Then the course in farming. High school gra---tion can open doors — and who knows what this basic e--- a might mean to him later?

S. S. Holds Special Rally Day Service

RAWDON — The annual rally day service was held Sunday morning in Mount Pleasant-Rawdon United Church with a large attendance. Autumn flowers were used for decoration and the Board of Christian education of the United Church of Canada supplied the program. The theme was "Teaching ministry of the church".

Robert H. Hoard gave the call to worship with Miss Barbara Williams as organist. During the service the junior choir rendered a selection.

Rodger Smith read a story which told of the teaching mission of Peter, John and Philip. The leader continued with concerns for a multitude of people who have assisted with various items of church work. Mrs. Herbert Smith conducted the story based on "God and his Purposes". FALL FASHIONS FOR TEENS — An effort to combine the dressy and casual look is reflected in styles for teens in Canada this autumn. The pant suit (left), a Paris original, has stovepipe slims and demi-fitted jacket in teal blue diagonal tweed. The coat (centre) features glen checks in red and black. It has large inverted pleats at the sides hiding slit pockets. The turtle-neck sweater (right) goes with a kilt, shawl and tam-o'-shanter in navy with brick red stripes and over-the-knee socks. Wool, Corduroy Jumper Big Teen-Age Favorite

By JEAN SHARP
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Probably the biggest single favorite for fall in teen - age fashions is the jumper in textured and tweed wool or corduroy.

It's worn over a Tom Jones blouse or a long - sleeved, brightly patterned blouse, sometimes over a turtle-neck sweater.

Also popular for high school is the A-line or slim skirt, although wrap - arounds and pleats are also favored in a season which emphasizes flare.

Top colors are black and whites, forest greens and wine red shades.

Stretch slacks are still sports wear leaders, and both pants and skirts are mostly in solid colors since they are worn with fancy sweaters and jackets to produce a costume look.

Sweaters are not quite as bulky as last year, although mohairs and turtle-neck inserts continue in fashion.

Somewhat abbreviated double - breasted blazers with gold buttons may be worn with either slacks or skirts.

In sportswear and dress, leather and leather-like fabrics are being used as the basic material — especially in shifts —and as trim.

TOES BROADER

For parties, even younger teen-agers are wearing fanciful flaring discotheque and lacy-patterned A-line dresses.

Coats are Chelsea and little-boy styles in slim, tailored lines in tweeds and solids. Some have matching suits, some have raccoon collars.

Besides the ever - popular sneakers, girls are wearing Parisian-fashioned little heels, with toes a bit broader than they have been, and cut-out, cut-down style. Loafing wear is little boots with elastic sides a la Beatles.

High school boys are wearing hand-stitched moccasins, more casual than loafers, or rough-surfaced desert oxfords and boots.

Leather, in the form of suede jackets, windbreakers and car coats, is a hit with the teen-age male too. Some are in two-tone dark beige and brown.

Continental sports slacks, trim and tapered, with the straight-across frontier pocket are popular. Jackets have natural shoulders, slim lines, and are being worn in slightly roughey tweeds.

Suits follow the same general style. They're neat, dressy, in fine - surfaced herringbones, tweeds and plains, usually in grey, brown or blue. The frontier pocket is featured in suits in high-style houses but isn't general.

Public School Grads Receive Certificates

BANCROFT. — Speaking to the members of the 1964 graduation class of Bancroft Public School and their parents on Tuesday evening, F. S. Beckley, Principal of North Hastings High School, told his audience that education is like a tree.

"At the bottom," he said, "is the trunk, strong and sturdy, to hold up the rest of the tree. This is the elementary school with its one course which has to be firm enough to provide the support for all the education which depends upon it and which leads to a variety of careers in later life."

"The branches of this tree," he continued, "represent the choice of courses available in the secondary school and they twigs the choice of subjects which are available in those courses."

Mr. Beckley pointed out to his audience, however, that unlike a tree which has an end, education never ends. Whatever is learned leads to further knowledge: every book read, every experience teaches something. He added that since life and business are growing increasingly complicated, a detailed and thorough grounding in education is required to provide the basis for the future of every boy and girl.

Mr. Beckley said it has been estimated that from 50 per cent to 65 per cent of all students leave school before obtaining the basic education required for skilled or professional work.

Since only 31 per cent of all jobs are classified as unskilled or semi-skilled this means that close to two-thirds of the labor force is competing for only one-third of the jobs available. This is why, he said, schools are providing an increasing variety of courses to students at the secondary level.

PRESENT CERTIFICATES

Following his speech Mr. Beckley presented graduation certificates to Linda Stewart, David Jamieson, Ten Neuman, Marina Hillsburgh, Barbara Elliott, William McPherson (honors), Roger Walker (honors), Mary Hall (honors), Elizabeth Churcher (honors), Dean Walker, Kitty Krastins, Charles Mullet, Edgar Muncher, Ross Martyn, Bobt. Kellar, Edgar Kelly, Glenn Prosser, Blair Smith, Joyce Maxwell, and Barbara Evans.

Other graduates receiving certificates were John Hattin, Randy Mather, Rose Ann White, Susan O'Shaughnessy, Margaret Goodman, Margaret Phillips (honors), Donald Wilson (honors), Linda Hooker (honors), Edward Robock (honors), James Saunders, Stephen Barker, Thomas Stacey, Larry Conlin, Eugene Plumley, Juddy Gunter, William Bandy, Marlene Battelle, Thaia Mitchell, Laverne Stapley, and William Brinklow.

R. J. Linton, Public School Inspector, presented the honors awards. The class valedictorian, Elizabeth Churcher, speaking on behalf of the graduating class, thanked Gary Stevenson, principal, and the entire staff for their help and guidance through eight years of elementary school.

Following the ceremony the students and their parents were provided with refreshments, highlighted by a special graduation cake provided by Mrs. Boyd Stinson.

Boniface, 80 miles northeast of Montreal.

Tardif identified the six accused as present at the camp, wearing khaki uniforms with "Quebec" sewn on the shoulder, marching through the woods in formation and standing sentry duty with one of the camp's three weapons.

In reply to a question by Sessions Judge Emile Trottier, Tardif said the purpose of the camp, said organized by Schirm, was "military".

"However, its membership was fluid as strangers were coming and going all the time." The ARO members were training to fight the enemy, "the federalists," Tardif said, "using violence if necessary."

While they practised carrying rifles, Tardif said he never saw ARO members fire a shot at the camp.

Sandy Oram Elected Head Of Students

BANCROFT — Election fever has subsided at North Hastings High School following a spirited and enthusiastic, although brief, campaign to elect the president and cabinet for the 1964-65 Student Council.

Sandy Oram, Grade 12, polled 407 votes to defeat Dean Davis, also of Grade 12, who put up a plucky fight against high odds.

President Sandy Oram and her cabinet of Fleming Sanders, Napanee, were -Mrs. Ken McMeehan, Mrs. Roy Badgley and Mrs. Arthur English and Mrs. G. McLaren.

Mrs. Mac Lazier and Mrs. A. Hall were hostesses in the township hall for the September meeting of Mazo W. A special feature at this meeting was a commentary and slides on Mental Health. Guests in charge of the pictures were Mrs. Reddick and Mrs. Hutchinson of Belleville.

Mrs. Harold Buckley and baby arrived home from Belleville hospital on Monday last.

Ministers of the Belleville Presbytery will meet this Tuesday evening at Melrose United Church. Ladies of the church will serve the evening meal prior to the conference, in the church basement.

Formula

federal - provincial responsibilities.

Under the formula proposed by Mr. Fulton, all provinces would have to agree before the Canadian constitution could be amend any part of the constitution dealing with basic provincial rights.

The parts of the constitution affecting only a few provinces could be changed with the consent of only those provinces affected. All other sections could be changed with the consent of two-thirds of the 10 provinces, providing those provinces have populations of 50 per cent of the Canadian population.

It was the clause requiring unanimous agreement that prevented the previous Conservative government from getting the formula approved in 1961. The then CCF government of Saskatchewan argued that the clause gave each province the power of veto over too wide an area, and matters requiring unanimous consent should be kept to a minimum. The Liberal government of Saskatchewan approved the formula in principle earlier this month.

TAKES UP ARGUMENT

But Mr. Erwin took up the earlier argument with force in the Commons Wednesday. Giving the province a veto over secondary sections of the constitution would be an unmitigated disaster . . . a basic surrender to some exaggerated views of provincial rights."

He would approve of education, language and provincial representation in the federal Parliament being subject to unanimous agreement, but "property and civil rights" was adding too much. It would prevent the federal government from dealing with national problems if one province happened to disagree. It could hamper federal action over such fields as securities, licensing, farm marketing, labor laws and the implementation of international treaties.

Guy Marcoux (SC — Quebec-Montmorency) also spoke against ratification of the constitution but he said amendments should not be ratified only by a simple majority of the Canadian population. French - Canadians accounted for less than 50 per cent of the population, but their basic rights must always be protected.

Mr. Caouette said the BNA Act has never been accepted by the Canadian people and there was no need to bring it to Ottawa. By drafting a new constitution, all the political, social and economic needs of the country could be met. Provinces should get control of credit and finance, along with control of internal and external trade and rights to taxation.

Says Bomb Will Spread Contamination

OTTAWA (CP)—China will explode a nuclear device in the atmosphere in the near future, External Affairs Minister Martin said Wednesday.

The nuclear test will spread contamination far and wide at a time when a test ban treaty supported by Canada and more than 100 other countries—including Russia — has reduced radioactive fallout hazards to health.

Mr. Martin would not say how he knew it would be an atmospheric test.

He was asked by reporters to comment on State Secretary Dean Rusk's declaration Tuesday in Washington that China is nearly ready to test an atomic bomb. Mr. Rusk's formal statement did not say the explosion likely would take place in the air.

Mr. Martin said the Canadian government learned of the imminent Chinese detonation with regret and concern.

EVERY GOOD GUY

GIVES THE UNITED WAY

Deficit Likely This Year In Tourist Expenditures

OTTAWA (CP)—Tourism, source of strength in Canada's balance of payments last year, seems likely to be a weakness in 1964.

First-half figures for this year show that Canadian spending abroad exceeded by $145,000,000 the spending of foreigners visiting Canada. The net outflow of tourist money a year earlier was $80,000,000.

If this trend continues, this is how it will look for 1964 would end:

Foreigners would increase their spending in Canada by about $50,000,000 to a record $651,000,000, up eight per cent from 1963. This assumes that the wet, chilly August didn't keep them home.

Canadian spending abroad—roughly two-thirds of it in the United States—would jump by 25 per cent to $726,000,000 compared with last year's $580,000,000.

That would mean an $85,000,000 deficit on the tourist account for 1964 after last year's $13,000,000 surplus, the first since 1952.

Such a deficit would be a large element in the anticipated drop in the current account deficit, which includes all forms of trade, to $600,000,000 this year from $321,000,000 in 1963.

Clearly, the main reason for the backsliding tourist picture is Canadian travel abroad. It has been increasing steadily, offsetting the country's gains in tourist income. Economists attribute it to higher prosperity.

Judge Declares Tax Foundation Juggles Figures

TORONTO (CP)—Mr. Justice Emmett Hall of Ottawa Tuesday politely accused the Canadian Tax Foundation of juggling figures to make the cost of the proposed universal comprehensive health care program seem larger than reality.

The chairman of the royal commission on health services told an audience of judges and lawyers at Osgoode Hall that the price tag placed by the tax foundation on universal, health care for Canadians—a 50-per-cent increase in income tax—was based on wrong calculations.

The health care program proposed by the royal commission, he said, provides for a step-by-step increase in health services up to 1971, during which time the nation's gross national product would have increased by about $70,000,000,000 from about $46,000,000,000.

But the tax foundation based its calculation on today's national income for 1963, he said.

"It's like taking a seven-year-old boy and putting him in 14-year-old's pair of pants and expecting them to fit," he said.

Minto

MINTO — Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Rayburn of Oshawa spent the weekend with Mrs. Mabel Ray and Gwen.

FRANKFORD

Clean-up Job Continues On Arena Project

FRANKFORD — On September 22nd work continued on the Arena project by the levelling off of the land on front of the present building. On Saturday, September 26th, Calvin Watson's group completed work on the placement of forms around the outside surface where boards will be placed. Work was also carried on in the present building. The boys' club with the aid of their fathers and friends painted the walls in the upstairs.

Recently the boys' club assisted by Bill Cheshire, Ray Bauer and Don Gilchrist did some block laying for a new counter for a canteen. The filling in of cracks around the doors and windows was done both upstairs and downstairs.

Work will continue this Saturday, October 3rd, and the boys' club would appreciate any extra help.

Judge Threatens To Boycott Old Courthouse

CORNWALL (CP)—A grand Jury Wednesday called for improvements to this city's 136-year-old courthouse after a Supreme Court judge threatened to boycott the building unless changes were made.

Mr. Justice E. A. Richardson, presiding over fall assizes here, made the comment Tuesday as he turned up in court as usual Wednesday.

The grand jury inspected the building and jail Wednesday and made urgent requests for both buildings. It described facilities as outdated and inadequate and called for plans for enlargement of the courtroom.

The jury was more alarmed at the condition of the jail, built a year before the courtroom. About 40 prisoners are now crowded into the 20 cells when the jury made the inspection, prompting comments that sanitary and air conditioning facilities were "very poor" and cell space "too small."

U. S. Industrialist Calls For Union of Canada, U. S.

LONDON: Ont. (CP) — A United States industrialist Wednesday called for outright economic and political merger of Canada and the U.S. in a "united community of North America."

"It must be clear that the Canadian problem, even more than ours, is not one of national identity but of economic survival," said Edward Lamb of Toledo, Ohio, who controls 26 radio and television stations including Seiberling Rubber Company and Lamb Industries Incorporated.

He advised the school of business administration at the University of Western Ontario that North Americans should not get "bogged down with silly nationalistic recriminations" but act for the mutual welfare of the continent's peoples.

Mr. Lamb said economic integration of Canada and the U.S. has been developing naturally until 70 per cent of many basic Canadian industries are U.S.-owned and 90 per cent of foreign investment comes from the U.S. This trend would accelerate.

He said that for a century Canada has been the major supplier of materials for American industry, but still manufactures its products "behind a wall of (tariff) protection."

Integration would increase ten-fold markets available to Canadian producers, encourage more efficiency in production, make available more U.S. products at a lower price and expedite the flow of capital for the development of Canada. Mr. Lamb said.

GIRLS ARE MISSED

NAIROBI (AP) — The Kenya Senate had to suspend sitting when two British girl stenographers quit their jobs, one to get married and live in South Africa, the other to move to New Zealand. Sessions were resumed after it was arranged to share stenos with the Lower House while six African girls undergo an 18-month training course.

Cecile Plans Child Welfare Law Changes

TORONTO (CP) — Welfare Minister Cecile said Wednesday that major changes in Ontario's child welfare legislation will be placed before the next session of the legislature.

He made the announcement after reading about an inquest Tuesday into the death here of two-year-old Kathie Kisac. The inquest heard evidence death was caused by neglect and abuse.

Coroner F. D. Cruickshank said there had been lack of communication" by the medical profession in the girl's case. An examining doctor's report that she might get a "battered child syndrome" victim was not checked by welfare or medical officials after her admission to hospital.

Mr. Cecile said his welfare changes would be based on a three-year study of welfare legislation completed this summer. He said experts from his department and the University of Toronto are examining the report.

BLAST OFF — Here was an artist's conception in 1963 of how an earth space ship could be launched from the surface of the moon. Teen-Age Canada says today even this may be outdated.

Teen-Age Canada Author Predicts Spacemen Will Be on Mars by 1970

By JACK HUTTON

Stepping onto a plane the other day, I picked up a paperback book that intrigues me with its title: Profiles of the Future.

Three hours later I stepped back onto solid ground. But I've never again been able to think of our old earth in the same way. And even without the plane ride I'm sure you'd have the same reaction.

I've rarely used this column to become enthusiastic about one book. But I'm doing so this week, because even its modest subtitle — An Inquiry Into The Limits Of The Possible — won't prepare you for what follows.

The author is Arthur C. Clarke a fellow of the Royal Astronomical Society who is blessed with more imagination than most of his scientist colleagues. You may, in fact, have seen his name on several science fiction novels.

ON THE MOON

His predictions? Spacemen will be on the moon by 1970, Mars will be next, possibly by 1990 and we'll be colonizing other planets a decade or so later. By 2050 we'll know how to control our greatest enemy—gravity.

His chart of the future (I've only plucked a few examples) is not meant to be taken seriously. Clarke isn't pinning himself down to specific years. But wait a moment. Everything he describes is technologically possible on the basis of what we know today.

He states: "At the present rate of progress, it is impossible to imagine any technical feat that cannot be achieved, if it can be achieved at all, within the next 500 years."

It's a bit difficult to imagine some of the prophecies coming true, but Clarke pins most of them to research that is already underway. For example, he believes the age of the wheel — the most faithful servant — may be coming to an end.

FLOATERS

Just when cars threaten to clog all our major cities and highways, Clarke says we may see them replaced in our lifetime by another development, vehicles that literally float on air. There are in fact, several already on the market.

The principle is a simple one. European scientists, worrying several years ago about how to move sensitive equipment weighing up to 300 tons, found the answer: they placed the equipment on saucer-shaped discs (about one yard wide) through which air was blown at a pressure of about 70 pounds per square inch.

The equipment was raised off the floor. Only slightly, but enough that one scientist could push it around the room with his fingertips.

Having your own GEM machine (the operation is called "ground effect; hence "ground effect machine") is still too expensive because of the gasoline involved. But the gasoline motor is already on its way out as more efficient types are being developed.

Think, says Clarke, of the immense possibilities of giant GEM's that will navigate the seas, equally at home on either land or water. Not only will they be faster, and safer, but trade routes will be revolutionized.

NEW HARBORS

Any stretch of coast that was not frosted by sheer cliffs, would be an open door to GEM freighters or liners," says Clarke. "They could continue on inland with scarcely a pause for 1,000 miles if need be, to deliver cargoes and passengers in the heart of a continent."

"All this is very bad news for San Francisco, New Orleans, London, Los Angeles, Naples Marseilles and any other seaport you care to name. But is is much worse news for Egypt and Panama.

"Precisely. The 'ships' of the future are not going to crawl along narrow ditches at five miles and $1,000 dollars an hour when they can skim over land at 20 times the speed — and can pick and choose their routes with almost the same freedom as in the open sea."

This is just a sample of Clarke's mind-stretching reasoning. I haven't touched on the strange signals we're already getting from outer space, the possibility of transferring yourself anywhere in the world (or galaxy) within a heartbeat, and other questions.

All this sounds unbelievable. But, says Clarke, so did the locomotive or steamship in 1800. So did radio and TV in 1900. In case you want to read more, Profiles of the Future is published by Bantam, costs 60 cents and is listed as B2734.

Jaycee Driving Tips

During March, April and May, Jaycees throughout Canada will be making plans for community Teen-Age Safe Driving Road-e-os.

In 1964, more than 25,000 young Canadians participated in over 200 community Road-e-o competition's in every province.

Next July, the 12 finalists will embark on an expense - paid four days of activities, including a battery of six Road-e-o examinations. The three high-scoring contestants in the National Championships will receive $1250 $750, and $500 scholarships respectively.

This year, our local winner, Wayne McGarvey of Moira Secondary School, travelled to Kitchener, and placed very high in the Provincial Championship. This coming year, we hope to have a National winner, who will bring the award home to Belleville.

We found that the weakness in Belleville was in the written examinations, and reading the questions and tips in our weekly column, would correct the weakness.

There are trophies and prizes to be won by finalists, and crests for all contestants.

Plan now to compete in the 1965 Teen - Age Safe Driving Road-e-o.

The Teen-Age Safe Driving Road-e-o is for any teen-age boy or girl who: Will not have reached 20 years of age by the first day of the National Championships in July; has a driver's license or permit; and has a clean record of no moving traffic violations in the last six months prior to registration for Road-e-o competition.

2. What happens to your danger zone as your car passes over a hill?
(a) it is the same
(b) you have past it
(c) it decreases

Informal Visits Favored Over Trade Missions

TORONTO (CP)—A group of business and professional men back from an 18-day tour of northern Europe say they are convinced that informal visits abroad have advantages over organized missions in pursuit of trade.

The 134 men visited Norway, Sweden, Finland, Denmark Russia and the Republic of Ireland on a trip organized by the Board of Trade of Metropolitan Toronto.

John H. Taylor, president of the board who led the delegation, said Tuesday in an interview Canada prefers informal groups because probably more business is done this way.

Belleville Burial Company, Now Owned by John Bush, Marks Fiftieth Anniversary

Thirty six years in the undertaking business, 50 of them as funeral director and owner of his own funeral home, is the record of John R. Bush, of the John R. Bush Funeral Home, Ltd.

This year also marks the 50th anniversary of the former Belleville Burial Company, the business which Mr. Bush has continued under his own name.

The three and a half decades don't only date back to the days of the horse drawn hearse, but Mr. Bush has nonetheless seen vast changes in the role of the funeral director.

For instance, when he joined the Belleville Burial Company, operated by Joseph Imlah and Matthew Armstrong, back in 1928, most undertakers were still operating out of a single room office with equipment likely to consist of little more than a hearse and service vehicle — and even these could have been rented.

Today funeral homes and chapels serve still hardly known 50 most people believe being considered from the bereaved family's home.

INVESTMENT HEAVY.

That is now all changed with undertaker's vehicle equipment, including a $18,000 funeral coach, likely to be worth up to $35,000, and total investment, with funeral home and chapel apt to run at least $200,000.

"When I joined the Belleville Burial Company back in 1928, the equipment consisted of a 1920 model service vehicle, and a funeral coach which was actually the body of a horse drawn hearse attached to a 1920 model Oldsmobile truck chassis," Mr. Bush said.

At that time all embalming was done at the deceased person's home; the body rested at home and practically all funerals were conducted from the home.

It was still in the days of winter - time snow - plugged roads and Mr. Bush recalls many occasions on which the hearse had to be left at the roadside with the funeral cortege proceeding by horse-drawn sleigh.

Many of the caskets came untrimmed from the factory and the raw earth of the freshly dug grave did nothing to ease the grief of the bereaved family.

COST WAS LOW

At that time an oak casket, funeral cost between $150 and $175 with a grey casket funeral running between $70 and $100. And the cost for opening a grave was but $13.

Today embalming is no long er done at the home and funerals with but rare exceptions are conducted either from the funeral home or the church.

Grave linings and artificial grass coverings, the modern touch to the cemetery and the casket is lowered mechanically often into a waterproof concrete vault. Steel grave vaults are no longer used.

And the old fashioned rear loading hearse has given way to the modern limousine type side-loading funeral coach.

The cost of dying has all but kept pace with the increased cost of living.

Today the average cost of a funeral, everything included except the cost of grave opening, is about $650 — with the CNIB as beneficiary.

FORMED IN 1914

The original Belleville Burial Company was founded in 1914 at took over the business known as The Bush Burial Company.

In the early 1920's the business was moved to Campbell Street immediately west of the old YMCA. Then in 1930 the Business was moved across the road to 52 Campbell Street where a funeral home was opened.

Mr. Bush remained with Belleville Burial Company until 1942 when he briefly joined the CNR as a fireman and then returned to the firm in 1944 as manager on the death of Mr. Imlah.

The same year — October 1, 1944 — the present firm undertaking business and changing its name to the John R. Bush Funeral Home. Then in 1956 as the volume of business grew and because of cramped quarters and ever increasing traffic problem, the business was moved to the present location at 80 Highland Avenue where a modern funeral home had been provided and funeral chapel erected.

Today John R. Bush Funeral Home, Ltd. is the largest between Oshawa and Kingston and has conducted as many as 275 funerals in a year and five in one day.

There is a staff of six in addition to Mr. Bush and some staff member is always on duty.

The funeral home chapel and family room will accommodate close to 300 and as many as 500 have been accommodated for a funeral.

V for Vodka Not Victory

K's Temperance Plea Goes Down the Dram

By JOHN REST

MOSCOW (CP) — Premier Khrushchev's personal campaign to get Russians to drink mineral water instead of vodka has been no howling success.

The fact that many still prefer vodka—and in generous quantities—can be grasped simply by walking along busy Moscow streets on a summer evening.

The number of intoxicated people may give the visitor an exaggerated notion of the drunkenness problem. Muscovites in a celebrating mood like to get out of their crowded apartments and let off steam in the streets. Thus they are more on display than those, say, in Canada, where people are apt to drink and stay at home.

Nevertheless the problem is real enough, as Soviet officials themselves have more than once acknowledged.

Some years ago Khrushchev promoted a drive to lead Russians into the habit of quenching their thirst with mineral water in place of vodka. This coincided with his own personal decision to cut down on alcoholic intake.

ECONOMIC EFFECT

The campaign had more than an idealistic motive. Reduction of drunkenness would be a boon to the Soviet economy it would cut the number of man-days lost to production from over drinking or drink-induced impairment of efficiency.

But Russians who look up to Khrushchev in most matters, may not have taken him too seriously on this point.

Russians have a peculiar tolerance for hard drinking When a Russian lies one on, he is exercising a time-honored privilege. The language is full of proverbs that may be taken as justification for an occasional blowout.

Examples:

"Only those don't drink who are fools, can't pay for it, or are ill."

"The drunkard will wake up, the fool, never."

"In every Russian home you'll find vodka, poverty and hospitality."

Fyodor Dostoyevsky once wrote: "Russians cannot help feeling a certain sympathy for a drunken man."

Even Russian police, strict almost to a fault on most matters, make special allowance for drunks Normally they don't bother them, as long as they do not make nuisances of themselves—and Russian drunks as a rule don't trouble other people.

If a man is completely helpless, and there is no one to take care of him, he will be taken to a special police lockup.

However, this is not considered an arrest. Next morning, instead of going before a magistrate, the drunk is given a cold shower and sent on his way with a warning (though habitual offenders may be sent to a reform colony). The police notify his employers who are supposed to help him overcome the drink habit.

"The Communist party newspaper Pravda complained not long ago that "very regrettably" the government can palgn against drinking is in some quarters considered only a temporary measure.

It wasn't entirely without result, however. Many vodka drinkers now use mineral water as a chaser.

Superplane Gives First Demonstration

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP)—A new jet fighter designed to knock down any bomber known in the world bolted down a runway and into the sky Wednesday at nearby Edwards Air Force Base.

The YF-12A, once called the A-11, was deliberately kept below its plus-2,000-mile-an-hour top speed in the demonstration, the first public showing since the interceptor was announced by President Johnson last February.

Air force officers told reporters the YF-12A has more than doubled the range at which U.S. fighters can intercept invading bombers and is "many times superior" to current aircraft such as the F-106 in detecting and knocking down hostile aircraft.

Col. A. K. McDonald of the Air Defence Command, Colorado Springs, Colo., displayed charts indicating YF-12As based as far away as Tucson, Ariz., can, with a few minutes' alert, hit a fleet of bombers attacking from the north before they can cross Canada.

Also disclosed for the first time was a 2,000-mile-an-hour missile called speed of 4,000 miles an hour—six times the speed of sound.

The nuclear tipped, radar-guided rocket has a proximity fuse and does not need to score a direct hit.

Newfie Road Program Goes Into High Gear

By DAVE BUTLER

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — "Finish the drive in '65" is a slogan that symbolizes the dream of any motorist who has tried to drive across Newfoundland.

If it comes true, it will be possible to make the 650-mile trip on the Trans-Canada Highway all on pavement.

At present there are still more than 200 miles of potholes, dust, gravel and flying rocks to try the patience of motorists driving between Port aux Basques and St. John's.

Some now make the trip in little as 15 hours out often at the cost of shredded tires and dented bodywork.

The provincial government is optimistic about completing the paving job by next year. F. W. Rowe, highways minister, says his department is sticking with the slogan which is displayed on a number of signs along the route.

The signs have an additional and political touch in the words "Thanks to Mr. Pearson." They relate to the federal government's agreement to pay 90 per cent of the cost of the highway in Newfoundland. The agreement originally called for a 50-50 split of expenses.

Persuading for a "trip across"—as the adventure is called by Newfoundlanders—in short entry spare tire and gas at risk of being marooned on one remote strip of dirt road is still vital.

FEW GAS STATIONS

A tourist making the trip from west to east disembarks from the ferry at Port aux Basques after a trip from North Sydney, N.S.

The first 60 miles are mainly between the Long Range Mountains and the sea. The green lowlands on the right sweep up the mountainsides to heavy timber stands and on to snow-capped peaks.

After crossing the Port au Port Peninsula, the scene changes to rolling hills of spruce, fir and birch, with some maple.

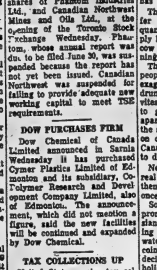
By the time you're 50 miles out of Port aux Basques you have already crossed 36 miles of unpaved road.

At Deer Lake, 27 miles from Corner Brook, the terrain changes to lush timber growth.

The major difficulty begins at Deer Lake and ends in the central Newfoundland p g community of Badger. The 141-mile stretch frequently proves nightmarish. It includes the Halls Bay Line, a tortuous 35-mile run that now is being shortened and straightened.

Only three gasoline outlets—and only one of these is a service station—are located in this 141 miles. Any mechanical trouble on a Sunday, holiday or at night can mean a long hike or delay.

After Badger, you get a reprieve. For nearly 200 miles the Trans-Canada Highway and linking roads form a ribbon of asphalt. But at Port Blandford the paving abruptly ends and you're in for more than 100 miles of often rugged gravel. The rest of the way you're on pavement again.



The condition of the original road and the terrain it negotiates is often so difficult that the new highway is being rerouted. But it's expensive and cost of the finished highway is expected to run about $200,000 a mile.

MAKE PAYMENT

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada Wednesday repaid $50,000,000 to the International Monetary Fund, reducing to $57,200,000 this country's debt arising from a 1962 loan, Finance Minister Gordon announced. In June of 1962 Canada borrowed $300,000,000 from the fund but because of a $24,000,000 credit Canada had with the IMF at the time, the outstanding debt was $276,000,000.

Guerrillas Hold up UN Vehicles

NICOSIA (CP) — Turkish-Cypriot irregulars, defying a Canadian officer attempting to carry out United Nations orders, threw up additional road-blocks and gun positions along the disputed Kyrenia Pass highway Wednesday and began searching UN vehicles.

An officer at the headquarters of 1st Battalion, the Royal 22nd R.giment, near Kyrenia Pass, estimated the Turkish-Cypriot forces at 100 men.

Armed with rifles, Sten guns and at least two bazookas, they took up new positions along the highway between this Cypriot capital and the north coast port of Kyrenia shortly before night fall.

Officers drove to the first position, eight miles north of Nicosia, and managed to dismantle one roadblock, a row of gravel-filled oil drums.

Pointing to additional barriers, the chief UN officer, Lt.-Col. William Mulherin of the Canadian Guards, told the young Turkish-Cypriot guerrillas guarding them: "Take these away. These must go, too."

"We only take orders from our commanding officer," one guerrilla answered.

Further effort by Mulherin, who took charge of UN forces along the Kyrenia road Monday, failed to persuade the guerrillas to change their minds.

Predict Potash Boomtown

LANIGAN, Sask. (CP)—Saskatchewan will be eyeing the growth of this village into a bustling city with more than passing interest.

For sleepy Lanigan, 77 miles east of Saskatoon, with a population of 600, has a booming future ahead of it and officials want to carve its path to future prosperity carefully.

The discovery of huge potash deposits near here has given rise to the prediction that Lanigan will have a population of 11,000 within 15 years.

It's the sort of find that has seen many a small community balloon—and burst. The Prairies and Canada generally have seen many such mushroom growths and the debris of almost forgotten towns litters the face of North America, the boom conditions that spawned them having passed on.

The Saskatchewan municipal affairs department's plan calls for the village's development in six stages according to population growth. The plan would avoid shacks, trailer communities, wildly inflated land values and scattered, chaotic housing developments.

The plan calls also for the upgrading of administration through appointment of a town manager, planning and zoning requirements to ensure orderly satisfactory development, with financial aid from the provincial government to help provide for increased services.

Alwinsal Potash of Canada Ltd., which plans to establish a $50,000,000 potash mine and refinery, owns most of the land involved in the master plan. As the company does not want to become involved in housing developments and real estate administration, the land likely will be turned over to Lanigan itself.

Production will be under way by 1968, a government announcement said. The potash deposits are expected to supply hundreds of tons for the next 75 years.

New Brunswick Critics Charge "Intolerable Bureaucracy" Outcome of Municipal Proposals

By DON McLEOD

FREDERICTON (CP) — A New Brunswick royal commission report that attracted nationwide notice with its ideas for untangling the complexities of municipal government is facing heavy criticism at home.

Eight months after the report of the royal commission on municipal taxation and finances was made public, its critics are still sniping at it, contending it will result in loss of local autonomy and an intolerable degree of bureaucracy.

Study committees have been set up by both sides in the legislature and by other groups that would be affected if the revolutionary "package deal" contained in the 250,000-word report were implemented.

Its theme is "equalization through centralization." Commissions with provincial - wide jurisdiction would take over such "general" services as education, social welfare, hospitals and municipal affairs.

The royal commission, under Edward G. Byrne, a Bathurst lawyer, contended these services had grown too large for their traditional administrators—local authorities and taxpayers.

It suggested funds for the administration of these services in the new scheme would come from a central taxation agency at Fredericton that would set, collect and distribute all tax money throughout the province.

CHANGED MIND

Liberal Premier Louis Robichaud dropped the idea of a special fall session of the house to deal with the proposals and said the report would be debated during the regular sitting early next year.

He said the postponement was due to the length, complexity and importance of the recommendations and the need to hear all submissions before any legislation was possible. A commissions with province - wide mittee to receive such submis-

The idea of centralized administration by autonomous commissions has drawn the fire of the Canadian Hospital Association, the provincial board of school trustees, the provincial labor federation and the Union of New Brunswick Municipalities.

The municipalities expressed their feelings in a vote that went 51 to 1 against the commission system. Sackville casting the lone affirmative ballot.

The labor federation was told by its retiring president, James A. Whitebone, that sections of the report pose "a serious threat" to organized labor, particularly in the public service field.

The labor body went on record in opposition to the proposals, hinging its objection on what it said was the lack of a built-in guarantee that the bargaining rights of public service employees working under the commissions would be protected.

'ROBIN HOOD' IDEA

Public school trustees rejected what they described as the "Robin Hood approach" of taking from the rich and giving to the poor in the name of equalization of educational standards. They said the Byrne commission would dilute the powers of local school boards.

The Canadian Hospital Association, supporting its New Brunswick branch, passed a resolution opposing the recommended take-over of all hospitals in the province.

The provincial council of the New Democratic Party, saying there was an attempt to make the proposed setup look like a successful Swedish system, called the report "a subterfuge to deceive the people of New Brunswick."

Of the labor federation's fear for the bargaining rights of some employees he said:

Change Party But Not Leader

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Dalton Camp, president of the Progressive Conservative party said Wednesday a political party and its leader are not the same thing—the party must keep changing but not the leader.

Following a speech to the Progressive Conservative Club of the University of Western Ontario, Mr. Camp told questioner: "The party has to endure. In order to do this it has to remain contemporary. It has to keep changing. The leader doesn't have to."

During his address, Mr. Camp said the modern Conservative does not fear "big government" as did the government will continue to increase in size as everything else increases.

Chinese Reds Celebrate 15th Year of Communism

TOKYO (AP) — Stalin said their insurrection had no prospects, told them to disarm and return to politics. But today, the stubborn men who scorned the old Bolshevik's orders celebrate the 15th anniversary of Communist China.

Some are bent by age, but the Chinese leaders taking the salute of 5,000,000 of their fellow countrymen in Peking's Square of Heavenly Peace have lost none of the shrewdness of imagination which made them masters of China in 1949.

Them, as now, four men occupy the chief places of power. They are Communist chairman Mao Tse-tung, 70, the Chinese Stalin; President Liu Shao-chi, 66, white-haired one-time labor organizer; Premier Chou En-lai, 66, China's most skillful diplomat, and Marshal Chu Teh, 78, chairman of the standing committee of the National People's Congress.

Since Oct. 1, 1949 they have:

—Radically altered the way of life and thought of 700,000,000 Chinese.

—Challenged the two mightiest powers on earth, the United States and Soviet Union.

—Split international communism into hostile camps and reasserted Chinese influence in Europe for the first time since the Mongol conquests of the 13th century.

—Extended their philosophy of revolution and violence to Africa, Asia and South America, and —By threats, calculated show of force and diplomacy, achieved a dominant position in Asia based on a mixture of fear, respect and, in some cases, admiration.

No other ruling group in the world has survived the vicissitudes of war and politics for so long.

BAD COMMON BELIEFS

This foursome began the climb to power more than 40 years ago, thrown together by their belief in Marxism and a common antagonism to the Kuomintang's Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Though they once again are confronted with internal dissension—party intellectuals who oppose Mao's doctrine of struggle and revolution frailties of human life seem likely to bring them down.

Under them is a dedicated, scrappy second team. Among these veterans are tong Hsiao-ping, Mayor Peng Chen of Peking, Defence Minister Marshal Lin Piao and economic czar Chen Yun.

Up to 1953, the Chinese elite built stability. They started transforming the old China of poverty, special privilege, militarism, recurrent famines and landlordism into a modern state. Heavy industry, particularly steel, made spectacular advances. Consumer production was up, wages comparatively high. Agricultural was pulling itself out of a centuries-old doldrum.

MAO STARTED COMMUNES

From this platform, Mao and associates launched their ambitious program for an industrial "great leap forward." To prop up this program, Mao forged the agricultural commune, herding the country's 500,000,000 peasants into thousands of communistically controlled and administered.

Natural disasters, Communist ineptitude and Soviet sabotage delivered crippling blows to all these plans.

The communes have been reduced to decentralized units.

Military, Mao possesses an army of considerable strength but, the experts say, of limited capability. Thanks to the Chinese leaders' quarrel with Premier Khrushchev, it lacks a nuclear punch. His air force is small, his navy modest.

Travellers report the Chinese are better off than they have been since 1961, when floods, typhoons, drought and locusts, coupled with the withdrawal of Soviet aid, left the country starving in some places and generally destitute.

Stalin's advice to the Chinese to put away their guns came at the close of the Second World War after he had handed them Shanhaikwan, gateway to the rich industrial region of Manchuria. Stalin's contemptuous estimate of their future prospects was made after Mao's forces had been defeated there by Chiang.

H'VE FORGIVEN STALIN

Stalin is long dead and long forgiven. But Khrushchev is something else again. Neither time nor circumstances are likely to mellow him in the Chinese memory.

The Chinese accuse him of hitting below the belt with cancellation of a promise to deliver an atom bomb to Peking in 1959. They complain about the withdrawal of Soviet aid, experts and blueprints in 1960 and the signing of a nuclear test ban treaty in 1963 aimed, the Chinese contend, at depriving them of the chance to build an atom bomb of their own.

Until recently, no one knew in detail how seriously Khrushchev's quarrel with Mao had hurt the Chinese in the early 1960s. On Aug. 5, 1963, the U.S. state department released 29 pages of a secret Red Chinese military publication which gave a partial answer. It is full of reports of peasant rebellion, hunger, starvation and disarray in the civilian population, depressed morale in the army, resentment and impatience with the Communist party.

Mao set about shoring up the Red establishment. His answer was discipline, a purge of corrupt and weak elements in the army and the party and a campaign to salvage what was left of the wreckage.

Buffeted by his enemies both within and outside the Communist bloc, still plagued by deficiencies at home, Mao's people's republic at 15 is still very much an infant.

But the miracle is that it is alive at all.

McCutcheon Worried About Scarce Capital

TORONTO (CP) — Senator M. Wallace McCutcheon warned Wednesday night that the massive re-allocation of funds that would result from a national pension plan and the implementation of a national health program might not leave enough private capital available for investment.

Under the proposed pension plan, and the recommended health program of the royal commission on health services, there would be a "stupendous" re-allocation of financial resources to the public sector from the private sector. Senator McCutcheon said.

He told the Canadian conference on pensions that this re-allocation would leave " large and worrisome question mark as to whether there will be sufficient private capital left available for adequate investment in our economic potential."

Cut Red Tape In Plan to Hire Older Workers

OTTAWA (CP)—Some of the red tape will be eliminated in this winter's edition of the federal program to encourage the hiring of unemployed workers over 45.

The program was tried out last winter and almost flopped before it got off the ground, despite a $186,000 advertising campaign. There were complaints that it had too many restrictions.

Informed sources say labor department experts have spent the summer ironing out the revised plan which is expected to go before Labor Minister Mcquire for approval shortly.

Mr. MacEachen was not completely satisfied with the original program that ran for five months and resulted in jobs for 12,000 men. But he feels it was valuable as an experiment and could become an important factor in easing the job-damaging effects of automation.

Under the program, Ottawa paid half of the wages for $75 a month, whichever was less, for 12 months for each worker hired. Employers received for this bonus through their local national employment service office.

To qualify, a worker had to be 45 or over, unemployed for at least six of the previous eight months and receive a "significant amount" of training on the job.

Diefenbaker Delays Trip To See Queen

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Diefenbaker will not go to Prince Edward Island for the opening stages of the Queen's visit next week, his office said Wednesday.

A spokesman said that because Parliament will be in session at the time, Mr. Diefenbaker decided he should remain in Ottawa. He had been invited to several functions.

No Possibility Pope Will Visit Montreal Fair

ROME (Reuters) — Archbishop Sergio Pignedoli, apostolic delegate to Canada, said Wednesday "the possibility of the Pope going to Canada for the Montreal world's fair in 1967 is 'nothing but the fantasy of some journalists.'"

Answering questions about Montreal press reports that the Pope will visit the opening of the world's fair, Archbishop Pignedoli said the Pope often receives invitations but the possibility of his going "has no reality for the moment."

MONTREAL (CP)—Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau said Wednesday there is no truth to published reports that he has invited Pope Paul to visit the 1967 Montreal world's fair.

Mr. Drapeau said at a press conference at Montreal international Airport he had no audience or appointment with the Pope during his visit to Europe where, accompanied by conductor Sir Wilfrid Pelletier, he visited the leading opera houses of six countries.

Two Montreal newspapers published stories Tuesday saying Mayor Drapeau was reported to have invited the Pope to the fair.

Banks Resigns All Offices Held in U. S.-Based Union Of Seafarers International

MONTREAL (CP) — Fugitive Hal Banks has cut himself adrift from the U.S. - based maritime union which helped him become overlord of Canada's merchant seamen and supported him for 18 stormy years.

In a letter that could have been written anywhere, Banks resigned from all offices he held in the Seafarers' International Union of North America (AFL-CIO).

Among other things, Banks was a $20,000-a-year international vice-president of the SIU, a job he still held after he was deposed last March as president of the SIU of Canada (Ind.)

A five-year prison sentence hangs over Banks's head should he return to Canada from parts unknown.

The resignation announcement was made by Banks in a statement to the SIU's Canadian membership by Earl Shepard, vice-president of the International union's Atlantic and Gulf district. Mr. Shepard said he was replacing Banks on the SIU President Paul Hall.

The announcement said:

"The resignations tendered to offices held by Mr. Banks in the maritime trades department of the AFL-CIO of which the SIU is a member.

RECEIVED WEEKS AGO

"The resignations were submitted some weeks ago and accepted by the union's executive board at a meeting in San Francisco several days ago.

"In addition to holding the office of international vice-president of the union, Mr. Banks was a vice-president of the maritime trades department and formerly served as that organization's representative in the Great Lakes area."

One report was that the resignation letter was mailed in New York City. Union spokesman declined to say whether Banks gave any reasons for his resignation and said they have no idea where he is now.

Banks's status as a fugitive stands up only in Canada.

The 55-year-old American citizen was sentenced here May 9 to five years in prison for conspiracy to commit assault on a federal union official seven years ago.

Freed on bail pending appeal, and with other charges against him yet to be heard, he dropped from sight in July when attempts were made to serve a warrant ordering him to jail for 90 days for contempt of court.

CAN'T EXTRADITE

But bench warrants for his arrests are valid only in Canada. He is not subject to extradition if located elsewhere because conspiracy is not covered in Canada's extradition treaties with the exception of conspiracy to smuggle narcotics.

Banks came to Canada in 1948 to help rid the Canadian maritime industry of the Communist - dominated Canadian Seamen's Union. He succeeded, but criticisms grew over the years as the Canadian SIU became more and more the private empire of Hal Banks.

To end labor strife on the Great Lakes, the Canadian government last year imposed federal trusteeship over the SIU and four other maritime unions. In March, the trustees fired Banks from the Canadian SIU presidency.

Bail pending appeal on the conspiracy conviction was set at $25,000. Wednesday, it was confiscated when — once again — Banks's name was called in court and nobody answered.

Hilda Hulas Toward Coast Seeking Prey

NEW ORLEANS (AP—Hurricanes Hilda and her 90-mile-an-hour winds moved through the Gulf of Mexico early today with coastal Louisiana as her probable target.

Residents of low-lying areas remembering killer hurricanes of the past, packed their belongings and fled inland to the safety of higher ground.

The weather bureau pinpointed Hilda's center 375 miles due south of New Orleans—or about 320 miles from the nearest land.

Hilda was moving toward the northwest at six m.p.h., the weather bureau said.

The $1,000,000,000 offshore oil operations were shut down late Wednesday and crews and personnel were taken ashore.

RMC Cadet Badly Beaten By Montreal Hoodlum Gang

MONTREAL (CP) — Gerald G. Mark, 19, of Winnipeg, reported severely beaten when he and other officer cadets from Royal Military College were jumped by hoodlums, was said Wednesday by Montreal Neurological Institute to be doing well.

Police headquarters said they had no knowledge of the affair but indicated that definite information as to the precise area where the beating occurred would be necessary for a complete check.

Meanwhile, military sources said no arrests had been made, presumably because the cadets had been unable to identify their attackers.

Reported to military sources, this is what happened:

Three or four cadets were walking along St. Catherine Street late Saturday night or early Sunday when they were jumped by a group. The cadets were in civilian clothing.

One cadet was severely beaten and knocked into the road. His companions dragged him back to the sidewalk and went after the attackers, who fled.

The cadets put their beaten mate in a taxi and took him to Queen Mary Veterans Hospital.

Through a misunderstanding on the part of the civilian guard on duty that night the cadets were refused admittance, although under normal circumstances persons would be identified, whether army or civilian.

The cadets then went to St. Mary's Hospital, from where Cadet Mark was taken to Montreal Neurological. The others went back to Queen Mary Veterans Hospital, where another cadet then was admitted.

The remaining cadets reported the affair to police but could not identify their attackers.

Reports from RMC at Kingston said Cadet Mark had suffered a fractured skull. The Neurological Institute did not disclose the nature of the injury, but reported him doing well.

RMC identified the others as David McCartney, 21, of Lewa, fractured cheek bone; Irwin Sippert of Toronto and Samuel Lipin of Deep River, minor injuries. RMC said McCartney had been discharged from hospital.

Greet Queen With Courtesy Without Delirious Cheering Is Montreal Paper's Advice

MONTREAL (CP) — Le Devoir says in an editorial that it would be best "not to be carried away" by the Queen's visit to Quebec City Oct. 10-11 to mark the centenary of the first meetings of the Fathers of Confederation.

The editorial is signed by Paul Sauriol, deputy editor-in-chief. It appears in a morning daily, with a circulation of 50,000 is considered to exercise considerable influence because its readers in many parts of Quebec province include its intellectual elite.

"Those who through their politicians must greet the Queen will be able to do so in our name with dignity and courtesy," the editorial says, "but delirious cheering by a large crowd would show a lack of dignity and logic on our part. And even more, if there are not too many people, the security organization will be more efficient."

While "normally the presence of the sovereign at such an anniversary would be most proper" it is a "grave error" on the part of federal and provincial governments to place "her in a false position" because of the present Canadian political climate.

Says Premarital Sex Story Represents Part of Debate Going on Within Church

OTTAWA (CP) — While expressing regret over "certain lapses of taste" in Rev. Gerald Paul's printed views on sex morality, an interdenominational church committee said Wednesday those views represent an aspect of a debate going on within the church at present.

The committee of clergymen from the Anglican, United and Presbyterian churches in Ottawa who support Mr Paul's chaplaincy at Carleton University issued the statement following a meeting called in the wake of an article by the United Church minister in the university's newspaper under the heading Premarital Sex Can be O.K.

A statement by the six clergymen forming the committee said the views expressed in the article by Mr. Paul were "his own, not the official views of the sponsoring churches."

Controversy erupted over the article when it was interpreted by some to mean Mr. Paul condoned premarital sex. He has denied this and said that the discussion on the heading placed on his article by the student newspaper's editor was.

"I do not condone premarital sex. I never have and I never will," Mr. Paul said in commenting on the criticism

The committee, while pointing to "weakness in the presentation of the article," said the views expressed "do reflect, however, an aspect of the current debate on sexual morality which is taking place within the church."

The committee's statement concluded by saying:

"We trust that Mr. Paul will be afforded the courtesy and opportunity to clarify his position, and we shall draw attention to the concluding paragraphs of the article which plead for an ethic based on the responsibility of Christian love."

After having referred in preceding paragraphs to the commandment "Thou shalt not commit adultery" as "old fash ioned" as an "outmoded and irrelevant basis tor their students' conduct" the minister wrote:

"Instead of an outmoded absolute backed by God or an 'anything goes' relative ethic' that ignores God, I suggest an alternative; unless we are sure that the contemplated sexual union will contribute to the growth of the other person, we leave il alone. Only if we are certain the sexual relationship will be more than just one partner (in the long run as well as in the immediate encounter) will we be justified in premarital sex. Glen Cavaliero wrote in an essay called chastity.

"Sexual experience is a great healer, but unrelated to the rest of life, unrelated to personal commitment it can ravage and destroy.'

"This is an ethic of love. There is no better way I can see right now."

Commenting on the first of the three paragraphs, Dr. E. M Howse, moderator of the United Church of Canada, said in Toronto: "I would have to disagree with Mr. Paul."

The interdenominational committee said it will take no fur ther action in the case.

Our Man in Cyprus

Diplomacy in a Panama Hat

By RUSSELL PEDEN

NICOSIA (CP)—In ordinary times the Canadian diplomat filling the dual role of ambassador to Israel and high commissioner to Cyprus spends most of his time in Tel Aviv.

But since communal strife between Greek and Turkish Cypriots began six months ago, Arthur Andrew has spent all but two weeks in Nicosia, leaving a charge d'affaires to run the Tel Aviv embassy.

In Cyprus, he has been in constant touch with a wide range of officials in the government of Archbishop Makarios, as well as the 1,100-man Canadian contingent here. He digests the local newspapers—Greek, Turkish and English—and keeps the external affairs department informed of developments in the complex situation.

He brings a professional eye to bear on the newspapers, having been a newspaper man himself in the Halifax bureau of The Canadian Press before the outbreak of the Second World War.

Andrew, 48, an energetic man of medium height with friendly brown eyes and a bristling grey moustache, is known to many Cypriots by a straw panama hat he wears everywhere, its brim turned up at a jaunty angle.

"Here comes the Canadian ambassador—the one with the hat," one Cypriot was overheard explaining to an other as the high commissioner arrived at Nicosia airport recently.

ON THE MOVE — Arthur Andrew, Canadian ambassador to Israel and high commissioner to Cyprus has been on the move since joining the foreign service in 1947. But he describes the opening of the mission in Nicosia, capital of Cyprus, as his "first taste of the dramatic," when hostilities broke out there between Turks and Greeks. Mr. Andrew has represented Canada in Bonn, Vienna and Prague. (CP Photo)

MOVED QUICKLY

Andrew has represented Canada in such hot spots as Bonn Vienna and Prague since joining the foreign service in 1947 but he describes his hurried transfer to Nicosia this year as "my first taste of the dramatic."

One evening in mid-March, a member of the Tel Aviv embassy staff told him Ottawa was trying to reach him on the telex.

"It was Chris Eberts, the act ing assistant undersecretary. We were doing our own punch ing on the machine, and had some trouble reading each other.

"He told me a resolution (assigning a Canadian UN contingent to Cyprus duty) had been drafted."

Andrew needed to get established in Nicosia in a matter of days. There were no secure communications facilities available at the time, not even a permanent office.

The Tel Aviv mission had looked after Canadian affairs in Cyprus since the Mediterranean island became independent in April, 1961, but Cyprus had been relatively quiet and few Canadians were living here. On occasional visits before the crisis, the ambassador or a member of his staff had stayed in a hotel.

"Normally it takes us six months to rent a building," Andrew said. "I rented this one in three days."

RENTED BUILDING

The high commission took over a two-storey stone-and-cement building a few blocks outside the ancient walled city of Nicosia. The building that formerly housed four apartments.

Andrew moved into an airy office on the second floor. He lives in an apartment in the high commission, as do three security guards, "saving a small of money in hotel bills."

During the Massoura - Kokkina crisis highlighted by Turkish air raids, the entire staff of eight lived and slept in the building for three days.

The opening of a mission to Nicosia might have been reasonable for the high commissioner, but it was not his first such experience. He also opened the Canadian mission to Vienna, and moved missions to different quarters in Bonn and Prague with security officers sifting on the filing cabinets.

Here, Andrew lives alone. Mrs. Andrew did not come to Nicosia, and their two daughters are in Canada, one working in Montreal and the other attending school in Edgehill, N.S., near Halifax.

"A wife is very important in this business," Andrew said. "Through laziness or lack of time, I'm not doing the entertaining I should be doing.

"But then I've always had someone to arrange my parties for me."

Johnstown

JOHNSTOWN — Mr. and Mrs. Robert Acker of Toronto were visitors of his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Brooks and family on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Gadey of Vancouver were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Harry and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Harry and children attended a surprise birthday party in honor of her father, Mr. Russell White of Elizabethville on Sunday at his home.

Mr. and Mrs. Grant Galloway attended the wedding of her sister the Vilneff — Jenkins wedding at Marmora United Church on Saturday afternoon with Rev. McLeod officiating, and the reception in the church hall later.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Pearson and boys of Wellington visited with Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Harry and family on the week-end.

A shower was given on Wednesday in honor of the arrival of Jeffrey Lance, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Laird at the home the Gares by Mrs. Ken Gare and Mrs. Betty Steenburg of Glen Miller. Games were played to entertain the 14 guests with a fine lunch served later.

When Hurricane Hazel Hit

Toronto's Night of Devastation

By R. J. ANDERSON

TORONTO (CP)—High above the Caribbean an airline pilot noted a "disturbance" of more than normal proportions.

It was Oct. 6, 1954. Toronto, far to the northwest, paid no heed. Hurricane Hazel was forming but she was 2,500 miles away and no one imagined she would come this way.

Hazel moved up fast from the Caribbean and appeared to be blowing herself out in the United States. By Oct. 15 she was only a rowdy, rulnous rainstorm but behind her was a trail of death and destruction—100 killed in Haiti, 20 in New England. Winds at one time were 130 miles an hour at the centre.

She pushed a rain front into southern Ontario. That met an eastbound cold front. Said a weather office observer at the time:

"It was like two huge pitchers of water crashing against each other, shattering and dumping their contents."

Rain — the heaviest in recorded history—fell on the Toronto area. It was as if a small lake suddenly had been dumped into the west-end Humber River Valley.

RIVER ROSE

Destruction was sudden, tragic, complete. Eighty - two persons died. Whole streets were swept away. Damage in the Toronto area alone was placed at $24,000,000.

Other parts of southern Ontario were hit but the Humber Valley took the brunt of the blow.

Toronto was a city where "hurricanes never happen" the night of Friday, Oct. 15 1954. Rain was falling, so heavily that thousands of downtown workers took three and four hours to reach their homes in the suburbs. But it was only an inconvenience.

Tragedy was building up in the west. Rain during the preceding 48 hours had saturated the Humber Valley. The hard-clay shallow bowl in which the Humber River rises absorbed the first heavy rainfall and the river rose with misleading slowness.

Then the clay could absorb no more water. Eight inches of rain came down on Friday, Oct 15. It poured instantly into the river channel and the Humber, normally placid, went wild. In the early hours of Saturday morning the flood descended upon the sleeping western suburbs on its 70-mile course to Lake Ontario.

DIED IN SLEEP

Almost all the casualties were in Toronto's western suburbs. Thirty-seven were on a single, riverside street, Raymore Drive, in Etobicoke where every house was swept away. There had been no warning. Many residents were trapped and drowned in their beds.

There was a macabre touch to the scene as dawn broke over the stricken valley. Ghouls were seen robbing the dead as police firemen, troops and relief fought to save the living. Looters entered shops and homes.

North through Thistletown and Woodbridge and up through the Holland Marsh area north of the city floods took their toll in property damage. On the east of Toronto, the Don River swept a destructive course to Lake Ontario. Forty bridges in the metropolitan area were washed out.

Other Ontario centres were hit. At Beeton, on the upper watershed of the Humber west of the Holland Marsh, four persons were drowned. A thousand people, the entire population were forced from their homes in the Holland Marsh market garden area. Fifty houses were flooded in New Hamburg. Damage was heavy everywhere.

1,200 HOMELESS

But it was Metropolitan Toronto, particularly Etobicoke and Woodbridge, that suffered most. Apart from the heavy loss of life, miles of valley roads and parkland were obliterated. On the Humber alone, more than 1,200 families were left homeless. A fire hydrant was the only evidence that Raymore Drive had ever existed.

From the flood, as always when tragedy strikes, emerged stories of heroism and heartbreak. One elderly couple lost a daughter, a son and his wife and six grandchildren. Nancy Thorpe, four months old that day, lost her father, mother, brother and grandmother. She now lives with an aunt. One hero was swept away after giving warning of the flood to residents on his street.

The flood and storm subsided quickly. Aid poured into the stricken area. A disaster fund was established. British Columbia sent $100,000, the Pope $10,000, the British government $70,000. The Ontario Hurricane Relief Fund at the end paid out more than $5,000,000 to flood victims.

WIDOWS AIDED

Widows still are receiving $100-a-month annuities plus $50 monthly for each child. All flood orphans will receive $2,500 when they reach 21 years of age. Ontario and federal government payments to restore lost homes and businesses totalled $2,800,000.

Can such a disaster strike again?

Toronto has taken steps to ensure that it doesn't. The first move was to expropriate 337 houses in low - lying danger areas and to ban future housing developments there.

Then it set up the Metropolitan Toronto and Region Conservation Authority which in 1959 approved $38,000,000 flood-control program for the 1,000-square-mile region. It is being carried out over a 10-year period.

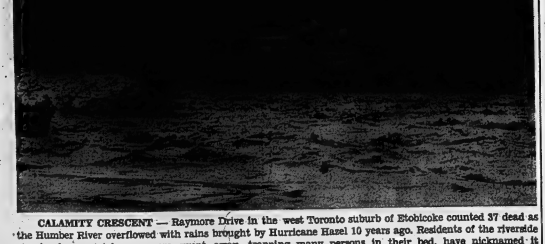
Many reservoirs and concrete flood channels have been completed and eventually, 13 dams and reservoirs will ring Metro Toronto. They will confine and channel flood waters harmlessly into Lake Ontario through regulated river systems.

OPEN NEW DAM

A major dam in the system, Claireville, 20 miles northwest of Toronto, was opened by Ontario Premier John Roberts and Arthur L. Laing, federal minister of northern affairs, Sept. 16. Ontario and the federal government are sharing the cost of the system.

The Claireville dam, like some of the others, creates a 380-acre storage reservoir and a 130-acre lake which will be used as a recreational facility during summer months. It is typical of post - Hazel conservation areas around Metro that have hundreds of thousands throughout the summer.

Other preventive steps have been taken. Storm-warning and flood-forecasting facilities have been improved. The department of transport has assigned a full-time meteorologist to the job.



Only bad memories remain of Hurricane Hazel. Mrs. J. A. Ward, who spent seven hours clinging to the rooftop of her house before being rescued by helicopter, doesn't like to think of Oct. 15, 1954. "You'd go crazy brooding over it," she says.

Today, Raymore Drive lives again. It has been rebuilt—on safer ground—but is a third shorter than it was 10 years ago. Much of it now is a park.

Its survivors have nicknamed it Calamity Crescent.

CALAMITY CRESCENT — Raymore Drive in the west Toronto suburb of Etobicoke counted 37 dead as the Humber River overflowed with rains brought by Hurricane Hazel 10 years ago. Indians Agree To Rent Lake Simcoe Reserve

GEORGINA ISLAND, Ont. (CP)—The Ojibway Indians on Georgina Island have agreed in principle to rent their Lake Simcoe reserve to H. A. W. Pinzino, a Toronto developer, who said he plans a $130,000,000 luxury project.

The development would include a $2,000,000 causeway linking the island to the mainland, an airstrip, private and public golf courses, shopping centres and a marina.

The heating system for your home is a big investment. Will you put your money on claims or facts?

Claims:	Facts:
Electric heating costs no more than other fuels.	1 cent of electricity produces 3,413 British Thermal Units of heat. 1 cent of Natural Gas produces 10,000 British Thermal Units of heat. Almost three times as much.
Electric heating has the convenience of individual room thermostats.	Natural Gas is so economical you need only one thermostat. You can heat the whole house evenly, including basement. No closed off rooms, no juggling room temperatures.
Electric heating costs no more to install than other heating systems.	Electric heating requires extra thick insulation in walls and ceiling, including basement walls if you intend to heat your basement. Extra care must be taken with storm windows and doors. Any heat loss is critical. If Natural Gas were put in a home with the extra added expense of insulating, to electric heating requirements, the savings would be phenomenal.
Electric heating is cleaner than other forms of heating.	Electric heating elements incinerate the dust in the air and the evidence is on the walls and drapes above every heating unit. Natural Gas burns clean. Its entire volume is turned into heat energy. No soot. No greasy deposits. Forced Air Gas Systems filter and circulate warm air evenly throughout the entire home.
Electric heating is healthy heat.	Outside of the natural air currents, electric heating offers no opportunity to circulate the air. Undisturbed air is stale air. Natural Gas Forced Air systems circulate, filter and humidify the air in every room. Distributes heat evenly.
"Flameless" electric heating is safer.	The Ontario Fire Marshal's Report shows that electricity leads all other forms of energy in the causes of fires. Natural Gas properly installed with Automatic shut-off and other modern features is as safe a heating system as you will find anywhere.
Electric heating is quiet.	Yes, electric heating is quiet...

Ramos Clips Tigers Twice ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Yanks Finger-Tip Flag; Two Will Do

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

The corkscrews are out and the champagne's on ice. Today could be the day for Phil Linz to toot his harmonica again and this time he can play Yankee Doodle Dandy.

New York Yankees are on the threshold of their 29th American League pennant today after a twi-night doubleheader sweep Wednesday against Detroit cut the magic number over the idle Chicago White Sox to two. The scores were 7-5 and 11-8. Another sweep against the Tigers today would end it.

Linz, who was fined $200 for tooting his harmonica during a Yankee slump in August, has promised not to play again until the clinching party. The fining was the low point of the Yankee season and the club seemed to jell immediately after it happened.

The double sweep against the Tigers climaxed a 22-9 September for the Yankees during which they left the White Sox and Baltimore Orioles behind and broke open what had been a tight pennant scramble.

Pete Ramos, who has been manager Yoki Berra's bullpen stopper since coming to the Yankees from Cleveland Sept. 5, came on to finish the Tigers off in both ends of Wednesday's twinbill. Ramos has eight saves and one victory as a Yankee.

Roger Maris and Elston Howard each had three hits and three runs batted in in the night cap after homers by Mickey Mantle (No. 35) and Joe Pepitone (No. 28) had helped win the opener. Tom Tresh had a two-run home run in the second game.

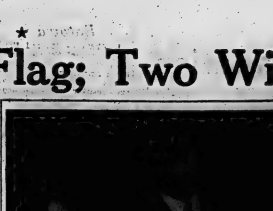
Baltimore's dwindling hopes got another jolt when the Washington Senators whipped the Orioles 6-3 in the second game of a twi-nighter. The Orioles won the opener 6-4 for rookie Wally Bunker's 19th victory.

Elsewhere in the American League, Cleveland beat Boston 3-0 and 3-0 and Minnesota whipped Kansas City 6-1.

The Yankees, who have won 13 on their last 14, are 28-10 since the Linz incident.

The pitching game, whether it comes today or later in the week, will mark the Yankees' 14th pennant in 16 years and the first under Berra.

The manager has set up his pitching rotation to have ace left-hander Whitey Ford hurl Friday. That would give him a full four days rest for the World Series opener scheduled for next Wednesday.



Baltimore's Jerry Adair poked two homers and Jackie Brandt had a two-run shot to back up Bunker's 19th victory in the opener. But the Orioles slipped against Claudio Osteen, who got relief help from Steve Ridzik to win his 15th in the nightcap.

Louis Tiant and Sam McDowell fashioned the shutouts for the Indians, fanning 18 between them as the Cleveland pitching staff set a major league record with 1,150 strikeouts for the season.

Jimmie Hall and Don Mincher homered for the Twins as Jim Grant handcuffed the Athletics.

SEEKING TRANSFER

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Business and civic leaders here sent a series of telegrams Wednesday in support of a bid seeking the transfer of Cleveland Indians baseball team to this city. Fourteen messages went to Cleveland president and general manager Gabe Paul and to William R. Daley, chairman of the board of directors. Jim Stockman, chairman of a group which bid $6,500,000 for the American League club, has offered to fly Paul and Daley to Oakland to study the proposal.

NHL Exhibition Results

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Boston Bruins were one goal down within six seconds of the start of the game but came back to defeat New York Rangers 6-2 in a National Hockey League exhibition game at Winnipeg Wednesday night.

Jean Ratelle scored the opening goal for the Rangers, but Bruins retaliated with two goals by Ab McDonald and singles by Johnny Bucyk, Bob Leiter, Murray Oliver and Ron Schock.

Val Fonteyne scored the other Ranger goal.

It was Boston's fifth victory in 10 exhibition starts. New York has won three and lost two pre-season games.

Montreal Canadiens of the NHL downed their farm team, Omaha Knights of the Central Professional League, 3-2 in an exhibition game at Drummondville, Que.

The Canadiens also came from behind to win. Norm Denis and Roy Brinkworth scored for Omaha in the first period. Ralph Backstrom, Bobby Rousseau and Henri Richard tipped the scales for Montreal in the second.

HOWE GETS TWO

Gordie Howe fired two goals and led Detroit Red Wings to a 3-2 exhibition victory at Leamington, Ont., over the combines Pittsburgh - Memphis minor league farm clubs of the Detroit team.

Al Langlois also scored for the Wings, while Andre Pronovost and Lowell MacDonald tallied for the farm team.

Sid Abel, manager-coach of the Red Wings, announced Wednesday that centre Norm Ullman had signed his contract for the coming NHL season.

In Seattle, Toronto Maple Leafs swamped Seattle Totems of the Western League 7-1 in an exhibition game.

George Armstrong, Ron Ellis, Frank Mahovlich, Bill Harris and Ron Stewart opened a 5-1 lead for the Leafs in the second period. Two more Leaf goals by Mahovlich and Andy Bathgate, came in the third.

Gerry Leonard fired in the loan Seattle goal, in the final period.

He May Need It In Boston

MIAMI (AP) — Heavyweight champion Cassius Clay has bought a gun.

Police records show that Clay purchased a .22 calibre pistol Sept. 19 at a pawnshop. All gun sellers must report transactions to police.

The owner of the pawnshop said the gun was a Derringer.

"It only shoots one shot," he said. "It's more a toy than a real gun. He (Clay) bought two boxes of blanks to go with it."

Clay said he was looking for kicks not for protection.

"I just saw that old gun and wanted it," he said. "That's my hobby, raving old things. I got a copie of old elephant tusks, and I got a big old stone from Egypt." The big stone is a two-ton brick from a pyramid.

Clay is scheduled to fight Sonny Liston in Boston Nov. 16.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARTER, Sports Editor

The barbed shafts of criticism have been levelled at the Belleville Minor Hockey Association in newspaper columns the past week or so.

This because the registration fees of minor players have been set at $3.00 per player or $6.00 per family of two boys and over.

This department is in receipt of a number of letters of protest, two of which have been published. All ask the same question, why the amount and where does the money go, and for what.

The Minor Hockey Association may be right in upping its registration dues—but it is up to them to come out publicly why the increase.

So far it has issued no reason—at least to this newspaper.

A number of the letters are from parents who state they want their boys to play hockey—but they cannot afford the new tab of $3.00 and $6.00.

Why, they want to know, should a boy whose parents are financially unable to pay the registration tab, be deprived of the privilege of playing.

One wrote: "I believe parents on the whole are fairminded. They pay their just bills because they know where the money is going. But this hockey business is just a boy tax with no published statement why and where the money goes."

Another letter says: "In former years some 1,200 youngsters played organized hockey under the BMHA, thanks to sponsors, coaches, managers and the city council. I understood the ice time for the kids was a gift from the city through its arena commission."

Norm Carter, assistant recreation commissioner here, in a written statement to this department says: "In a recent survey made by this department, in only one instance, namely Belleville, does the Municipal Recreation Commission pay for ALL Minor hockey ice rentals."

"In only two other instances does the M.R.C. subsidize minor hockey ice rentals. In other municipalities payment of these rentals are the sole responsibility of the minor hockey association or the sponsors."

"These rentals range from $3.00 to $15.00 per hour and in seven cases they are reduced rates. Six other cases are regular rates and one is donated by the Arena Commission."

"Minor hockey associations who pay for ice rentals raise the money by registration fees ranging from $1.00 to $6.00 per boy and in four instances an additional charge of 25 to 30 cents per game per boy."

Mr. Carter quotes figures of various arena commissions and minor hockey associations.

Oshawa, for instance, charges $5.00 per year and 25 cents per game. St. Catharines charges six dollars. Kenora gets $2.00 per year but the minor association gets a city grant of $300.

Peterborough charges $5.00 but the recreation commission gives a grant of $600. Sarnia charges one dollar per year and 25 cents per game. Others range from $3.00 per year to one dollar.

But in most cases and Carter's survey covered 11 cities, the ice rentals are paid by the local minor hockey associations. These range from $10 to $15 per hour and only in one case is free time given (24 hours per week) and that in Woodstock.

Ice rentals is perhaps the reason the Belleville Minor Hockey Association has raised its player dues. However it should come out with a clear statement as to what the money is needed for.

Not so Mr. Carter states: "only in one instance, namely, Belleville, does the Municipal Recreation Commission pay for ALL ice rentals of minor hockey.

Nicholson Defeats Albert 25-0

A tremendous scoring performance by Mike Cook gave Nicholson Catholic College a 25-0 victory over Albert College in a Bay of Quinte COSSA Senior "B", southern section, fame here yesterday.

Cook scored all four touchdowns, one of them converted, in a rugged contest.

The teams battled through two scoreless quarters before Cook took a pass on his own 15-yard line and raced 66 yards for the game's opening score in the third. Frank Farrell converted for a 7-0 Nicholson lead.

It was all Cook in the final stanza, as he ran 35 yards after gathering in another pass to make it 13-0.

The Nicholson star collected his third major on a single reverse.

With about three minutes left to play Cook got excellent blocking and swept 40 yards around left end to complete the scoring.

A number of players were shaken up in the contest with three of them receiving hospital care. Doug Meagher of Nicholson suffered a badly cut leg and teammate Jim Bonn had a mild concussion. An unidentified Albert College player was also taken to the hospital.

This was the opening league game for both clubs.

Cards Whip Phils; Bucs Shade Reds

One Up, Three To Go

By MIKE RATH'S
Associated Press Sports Writer

"I'd rather play anytime than watch or listen," said Ken Boyer of St. Louis Cardinals.

"I'm more nervous now than I was on the field."

Boyer and the rest of the Cardinals had just trooped into the dressing room after their eighth consecutive victory, an 8-5 decision over Philadelphia Phillies that gave St. Louis a one-game National League lead over Cincinnati Reds by the end of a long, long night.

Now the Cardinals huddled around a radio, their bodies hunched forward anxiously as they listened to the Cincinnati-Pittsburgh Pirates game.

Not until the 16th inning—after four hours, 14 minutes and 18 men left on base—did the Reds finally lose as Jerry May dropped a successful squeeze bunt down the third base line that gave the Pirates a 1-0 victory.

The Cardinals now hold a one-game lead over Reds with only three games remaining.

And even cautious Johnny Keane, the St. Louis manager, had to admit: "I like our position."

ONLY METS NOW

The three games the Cardinals have left are all against New York Mets. The Reds meet Pittsburgh once more, then wind up with two games against the Phillies who lost their 10th straight and fell 2½ games back and almost out of contention.

While the leaders were batting, San Francisco Giants retained a mathematical chance at the title by edging Houston Colts 2-1 in 11 innings, Milwaukee Braves nipped New York 6-5 in 12 innings and John Purdin of Los Angeles Dodgers stopped Chicago Cubs 2-0 on two hits in his first major league start.

Alex Johnson homered and the Phillies scored again in the eighth and finally chased Curt Simmons in the ninth when Ron Taylor and Gordon Richardson put down the final Philadelphia rally.

In the Cardinals' 16-hit attack Tim McCarver hit a homer and joined with Bill White to share four runs batted in.

PIRATES MAKE BREAK

At Cincinnati, the Pirates finally broke through in the marathon game after the Reds had failed to score for the 32nd straight inning.

Don Cleudenon got the Pirates started in the 16th with a double, the first extra-base hit of the game and only the fourth hit for Pittsburgh. Bill Mazeroski sacrificed Cleudenon to third and he raced home with the decisive run as May beat out a bunt down the third base line.

The Giants scored the winning run against the Colts in the 11th when Tom Haller walked, moved to second on a single by Orlando Cepeda and came home on errors by Joe Morgan and Eddie Kasko.

Denny Menke's home-run in the 12th inning gave the Braves their victory over the Mets and enabled them to tie the NL record of five players with 20 or more homers.

Purdin allowed the Colts only singles by Dick Bertell in the third and fifth innings. Willies Davis proved the key for the Dodgers' single run in the first inning and then scored the second run in the third and he raced home with it.

NFL Scoring

Unitas, Brown Top List

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim Brown and Johnny Unitas, a couple of old familiar faces, are atop the standings in the individual statistics released Wednesday by the National Football League.

Brown, Cleveland Browns fullback who ran for 194 yards against Philadelphia Sunday, has moved into first place in the ground - gaining race, displacing another Brown, Bill, of Minnesota Vikings. The Vikings' Brown was handicapped by injuries last week and dropped to fourth place, gaining only 20 yards.

Don Perkins of Dallas Cowboys charged into second position with a season total of 241 yards and Jim Taylor of Green Bay Packers was third with 227 yards.

Unitas, who hit with 21 of 32 passes in Baltimore Colts' rout of Chicago Bears, moved into undisputed possession of the passing lead, figured on a completed system of efficiency in four fields.

Despite the Bears' disaster in Baltimore, fullback Johnny Morris of Chicago leads the pass receivers with 28 for 251 yards.

Sam Huff, former New York Giant now the middle linebacker for Washington Redskins, is showing the ways in interceptions with three.

Don Chandler of the Giants has the best punting average, 48.8 yards.

LIONS REGAIN OHLER

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions gave up one Canadian tackle and one American tackle to Winnipeg Blue Bombers Wednesday to secure Canadian quarterback Pete Ohler. The top team in the Western Football Conference sacrificed the services of Canadian Wayne Dennis and import Ray Osbourne to shore up a position weakened by an injury. Ohler, a graduate of the University of Washington, was picked up by Winnipeg in the WFC player equalization draft this year but refused to report.

Whip Tweed 8-2 In 7th Game

Ellis Jrs. Double Champions

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

MADOC — Ellis Juniors completed a clean sweep of Belleville and District Softball League honors here last night when they captured the playoff title and the Bill Ott Trophy.

The Juniors outslugged Tweed Lumbards 8-2 to win the best-of-three utility series four games to three.

Cold weather, hostile rock-throwing fans, disputed calls and the ejection from the game of Tweed coach Jack Fisher added to the excitement before a fair crowd last night.

Junior pitcher Bob Ehlier, who has not had a ball in his hands since losing to Brockville in OASA playdowns nearly three weeks ago, pitched strong, eight-hit ball to get the victory. Meanwhile his mates unloaded a 13-hit attack against an off color Blaine Healey on the losers' hilltop. And the winners made nearly every hit count, using the clutch blows to build a 3-0 lead after three innings. Tweed plated singletons in the fourth and fifth innings but the winners added a run in each of the fourth, sixth and eighth innings.

Ehlier struck out 11 Tweed batters and issued five walks, leaving 13 Tweed runners stranded. Healey nipped 13 on third strikes and walked only one but did not display his earlier form.

The disputed calls, mainly at first base, helped warm up the cool evening and set 10 Fisher's early shower. He got the bounce after shoving base umpire Austin Watkin during a shouting match in the fifth frame. Fisher was arguing an interference call against batter Doug Cotton.

It took some time to get Fisher off the field. He also had "words" with third base umpire Jim Tebworth on the way out and a fan rushed on to the field to join the battle. Later, fists back of third base peppered the official and players with stones, almost causing an early ending to the game. Feelings ran high from start to finish.

A hit batter, Soule's base hit and Boomhower's perfect sacrifice bunt got the Junior's initial run home in the second. Ehlier made it 3-0 by slamming a solid home run down the left field line.

Moon was ruled safe on an error, which ignited the first argument, in the third. Muirhead followed with a single and Boyle doubled both across.

Tweed loaded the bases on B. LeSage's hit, an error and a walk in the fourth but got only one run, that on T. LeSage's single off Ehlier's glove. The Juniors got that back on doubles by Boomhower and Gardiner. Malloy doubled and scored on Moon's single in the sixth. They made it 8-1 on McKibbon's hit, two passed balls and Moon's ground out.

Lombardo's final run was a low, sinking homer by Gray, to left field.

Stu Malloy, with a homer and double, Bob Moon and Carl Boomhower, each with a double and single, Stu Muirhead and Bob Moon, with two singles apiece, led the Ellis hit parade. Gardiner's double and singles by Larry Soule and John McKibbon completed the attack.

Terry LeSage and Bert Sherry collected two hits apiece for Tweed. Eldon Grey's homer and singles by Blaine Healey, Garry Gorr and Ray LeSage rounded out the hit total.

Yesterday's Stars

Pitching—Bob Veale, Pittsburgh Pirates, struck out 16 batters and allowed seven hits in 12 1-3 innings as the Pirates edged Cincinnati 1 - 0 and dropped the Reds one game behind National League leading St. Louis Cardinals.

Batting—Elston Howard, New York, rapped four hits and drove in three runs in the Yankees' 7-4 and 11-8 doubleheader sweep of Detroit Tigers that carried the winners two steps closer to the American League pennant.

TORONTO (CP) — Fishing prospects are dim for Ontario anglers this week, with most districts reporting only fair conditions for most species.

Several areas noted that because of cooler weather, many sportsmen were turning to hunting as fishing interest decreased.

The department of lands and forests, in its weekly report on fishing conditions said pickerel fishing was excellent at Sioux Lookout.

Fishing in other Northern Ontario areas was fair to good for most other species.

This week's report, as of Wednesday, covered 18 of the province's 22 districts.

Horse Goes Berserk On Aircraft

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States Olympic team lost one of its top horses Wednesday when Markham, a veteran performer on the team, was destroyed on an airplane en route to Tokyo.

The 11-year-old brown gelding was loaded aboard a chartered plane along with 10 other horses and became unmanageable about an hour after the noon takeoff.

With the plane at 12,000 feet, Markham went berserk and attempted to break out of his stall.

Team veterinarian Joseph O'Dea of Avon, N.Y., was forced to destroy the horse by an injection when the animal threatened the safety of the aircraft.

The dead horse was removed from the plane at Chicago.

Markham, ridden by Michael Plumb of Syosset, N.Y., finished 15th in the 1960 Olympics in Rome and was a member of the Pan-American gold medal winning team of 1959 and 1963.

Al Lopez Signs With Sox

CHICAGO (AP) — Manager Al Lopez signed a new two-year contract Wednesday to remain in charge of Chicago White Sox, still nursing a glimmer of an American League pennant chance this dying season.

The fact that Lopez agreed to a second successive two - year p.. t, for 1965 and 1966, came as a slight surprise. It had been rumored recently that, at best, the veteran manager would agree to continue only one more season.

Terms were not disclosed, but it was assumed Lopez would continue to receive approximately $40,000 a year.

General manager Ed Short said: "We are delighted that Lopez has decided to continue his excellent work with a young ball club and one we believe will be in contention for years to come."

Modestly Confident

Canadians Leave For Olympics

By ED SIMON

TORONTO (CP) — The main body of Canada's 1964 Olympic team leaves for Tokyo today by chartered aircraft modestly confident of its ability to improve on the record of its immediate predecessor and with a few potential gold-medal winners in its ranks.

The Olympic aircraft has a passenger list of 131 athletes and officials, embodying Canada's chief hopes for glory at the Games, which opens in the Japanese capital Oct. 10.

Another 14 athletes have preceded them to Japan, although they aren't sure yet whether they'll still be there when the Olympic torch is set alight. They are members of Canada's basketball team, currently engaged in a round-robin preliminary tournament at Yokohama to decide the last two qualifying berths for Olympic competition.

Few world-shattering achievements are needed to better the Canadian record at the Rome Olympics of 1960, when only a second-place finish by the University of British Columbia's eight - oared crew prevented Canada from being shut out of the first three in every event on the agenda.

In the unofficial point standings, based on a 10-5-4-3-2-1 count for the first six in each event, the 1960 Canadians placed 26th among the 84 countries competing with 16 points. This compares with the 807½ amassed by the first - place Russians.

EXPECT BETTER SHOW

Even the most pessimistic forecasts of Canada's 1964 showing anticipate a better performance in this month's two-week competition.

Track and field, which contributed only one point to the 1960 totals — a sixth - place finish by Alex Oakley of Oshawa in the 50-kilometre walk—offers brighter prospects this time. Three Canadians are given a chance for a gold medal on the track.

One of them is Harry Jerome, the Vancouver sprinter who was Canada's hottest prospect and biggest disappointment in Rome, where he pulled up lame in the semi-final of the 100 metres.

Bill Crothers, the 24-year-old Markham, Ont., pharmacist who has dominated North American in the middle distances, is rated among the top four in the 800 metres and Bruce Kidd, 21-year-old Toronto prodigy, is rounding into the best shape of his career in a bid for glory in the 10,000 metres and marathon.

Dianne Gerace, 20 - year - old receptionist from Trail, B.C., is a prospect in the women's high jump.

ALSO HIGHLY RATED

Jenny Wingerson of Toronto in the 80-metre hurdles and sprinter Irene Piotrowski of Vancouver are others seen as possibilities to make the first six in their events.

Mary Stewart of Vancouver, a courageous finalist in the 100-metre freestyle at Rome at the age of 14, is rated high on the Canadian swimming team. She is back for an effort to regain the world record she set in the 100-metre butterfly two years ago.

Lack of international experience clouds the prospects of other Canadians.

The shooting team includes two international medallists, Gary McMahon of Dartmouth, N.S., won a second-place silver and a third-place bronze in the two pistol events of last year's Pan-American competition and rifleman Gil Boa of St. Catharines was a bronze-medal winner in the 1956 Olympics at Melbourne.

Argo Back Out 3 Weeks

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonaut Mike Campbell will be on the injury list for a minimum of three weeks, coach Nobby Wirkowski said Wednesday.

Campbell, a corner linebacker, suffered what was first thought to be a fractured left ankle after attempting a tackle during the Argos' 30-25 loss to Calgary Stampeders Tuesday.

However, on closer examination it was learned the former United States decathlon champion had suffered a bad bruise to the left tibia.

Murtaugh Leaves Pirates

CINCINNATI (AP) — Danny Murtaugh announced today he is resigning as manager of Pittsburgh Pirates "because of health."

Murtaugh said his resignation from the job he has held since 1957 will become effective with the end of the 1964 baseball season.

Murtaugh will remain with the Pirates in an administrative capacity. He will do scouting work and work for the club's minor league farm teams, Joe E. Brown, general manager of the club, said.

Murtaugh reached the pinnacle of success in 1960 when Pittsburgh beat New York Yankees in the World Series.

Olympics Track Preview

Thinks Americans Are Cinches For Relay

Written for the AP
By BERT NELSON

NEW YORK (AP)—Two more victories are in store for the United States in the Olympic relay events but a Briton and an Italian are the likely winners in the walking races.

The American 400 - metre quartet has lost only twice, being disqualified in 1912 and 1960 for running out of the passing zone. Only another bad baton exchange can thwart a U.S. victory this year.

There are so many fine American sprinters they could field two squads capable of running away from the rest of the world. But only one team can be entered and that likely will be composed of Bob Hayes, Trenton Jackson, Mel Pender and Gerry Ashworth.

Reasonably good baton work should give them a world record. But sloppy work could see them beaten by Poland, France, Italy, Germany or Russia. Venezuela also has good sprinters as has Australia, claimant of a world 440-yard relay mark of 39.9 seconds.

U.S. TO WIN

My picks, in order of finish: United States, Poland, France, Venezuela, Russia and Italy.

Barring injuries, the U.S. has no worries in the longer relay, in which each man runs 400 metres and baton exchange is no problem.

Mike Larrabee (44.9), Ulis Williams (45.0), Ollan Cassell (45.6) and probably Rex Cawley, new record-holder in the 400 hurdles and a fine quarter-miler should be unbeatable.

Great Britain (3:05.0) carries Europe's No. 1 hope, backed by Germany (3:03.5 last year), Poland (3:06.3) and Czechoslovakia, (3:07.2) are prospective finalists.

The biggest threat to the U.S. however, may come from the Caribbean. Both tiny Trinidad and Jamaica have powerful foursomes.

Trinidad features three fine sprinters. Wendell Mottley has done 45.8 (45.3 in practice). Kent Bernard, 45.7, and Edwin Roberts ran 46.3 last year. Edwin Skinner can break 47.

Jamaica boasts a fine quarter-miling reputation and won a thriller in world record time in the 1952 games. George Kerr, Keith Brooks medalist at 800 metres, leads the team.

My pick: United States Trinidad, Britain, Jamaica, Germany, Poland.

LAIRD'S CHANCE

Ron Laird is the only American walker given a chance to make the first six in either the 20-kilometre road walk or the 50-kilometre event. Laird was only a minute back of the Russians at 20 in July and if he can improve on that showing he could score.

Vladimir Golubnichiy (1:30:17.2) is back to defend his 20 kilo title but rates on a time basis behind Hana-George Reimann (1:27:46.8) of Germany, Ken Matthews (1:28:45.8) Britain's European champion; Dieter Lindner (1:29:00.8) of Germany and fellow-Russian Genedy Agopov (1:30:09.0).

My pick: Matthews, Golubnichiy, Reimann, Noel Freeman of Australia, Lindner, Agopov.

World - record holder Abdon Pamich (4:08:30) of Italy is the big favorite at 50,000 metres. Behind him I pick: Christoph Hohne (4:12:49.2) of Germany, Paul Nihill (4:17:10) of Britain, Sergey Lyungin, (4:13:15) of Russia, Bob Gardiner (4:24:19) of Australia and Don Thompson (4:21:58) of Britain, the defending Olympic champion.

ROUGHIES SIGN CRAIN

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan Roughriders Wednesday announced the signing of all-star import centre Mid Crain, cut earlier this season by Montreal Alouettes. The Western Football Conference Roughriders, who meet Hamilton Tiger-Cats in Hamilton Sunday, also announced that end Dick Cline suffered two broken ribs in the game against Edmonton Eskimos and may go on the 30-day injured list.

By WALTER KREVENCHUK

WINNIPEG (CP) — Want to play for Canada's national hockey team?

You must be a good player; have a boss willing to give you a fair amount of time off; be willing to glide some 10 hours a week from time spent with your family; adjust your university studies to a 44-game exhibition schedule and a four-week trip to Europe.

There are 36 players here and four at the University of British Columbia able and willing to meet the qualifications—all for a chance at a berth on the team that will carry Canada's colors in the 1965 world amateur championships at Helsinki, Finland.

For example, Bill Johnson, 26 - year - old defenceman, is squeezing in two-hour, after-work sessions on the ice around duties as a sporting goods salesman and father of four.

Jim MacKenzie, 34, sees little of his four children as he divides his day between a job as steel company sales representative and team forward.

Elliott Chorley, 33, who plays right wing, is a brewery representative and father of three.

WORKS AS PLUMBER

Danny Summers, 39-year-old plumber with two children, plays defence.

Goalie Don Collins, 31, is a railway office clerk with two children.

Bernie Grebisnky, 31-year-old defenceman from Foam Lake, Sask., works as a brewery sales representative to feed a family of three.

Reg Abbott, 34, a centre, works as an insurance sales agent. He has three children.

Fred Dunsmore, 34 year old comptroller with a cement contracting firm and father of two, is another forward

All are members of last season's senior Winnipeg Maroons.

Students at the University of Manitoba are centre Roger Bourbonnais, right-wing Marshall Johnston and defencemen Paul Conlin and Terry O'Malley, members of Canada's first experiment with a national team — the young 1964 Olympic squad that finished fourth.

Goaltender Ken Broderick and forwards Bob Forhan, Barry McKenzie and Brian Conacher are UBC students who will commute for weekend exhibition games.

"They're good boys," says Coach Gordie Simpson, 35-year old father of two and assistant credit manager with a cement contracting firm.

Simpson, who was chosen to handle the national team after directing Maroons to the Allan Cup last spring, is optimistic.

BEST OF BOTH

"We are combining the best of two teams," he says, referring to the 18 former Maroons whose experience will be mixed with the zest of eight young Olympic holdovers.

"This team will have an excellent chance. It should be four or five goals better than the Olympic team."

Simpson says scoring punch was the Olympic team's lacked and he believes such former Maroons as Al Johnson (who saw NHL duty with Detroit Red Wings), Abbott, Dunsmore and Gary Aldcorn will provide it.

In the first two weeks of practice Simpson stressed basic hockey—"to cure them of bad habits." Then comes exhibition play in which he will try to set up "three good-scoring lines." His only firm decision so far is to keep Bourbonnais and Johnston together.

Simpson's only regret is that soon he must tell some of his Maroons they won't be on the team. This will be a sad chore because many friends are among them.

SHAPING the EARTH

WHAT MADE PETROLEUM?

There is normal water flow in the upper part, but that at the bottom becomes stale and CRYPTEN DISAPPEARS. Fish seven down too deep, suffocate and sink, to become part of the mud on the bottom. Without oxygen there is NO REAL PUTREFACTION, but certain processes of decay do occur.

Petroleum come from ANIMALS and PLANT REMAINS in the ocean, where they were preserved from normal putrefaction. It happened in certain sea basins, as Restricted, mostly out of from the sea by a wall rising from the ocean floor.

Enormous quantities of MICRO-ORGANISMS have also contributed to the composition of oil.

Such basins are the Black Sea, the mouth of the Potomac river and several off the California coast.

Some Pads, Helmets Dangerous

VINELAND, Ont. (CP)—Protective padding and helmets worn by some university and high school players are dangerous to their safety, says Dr. Ian Macnab of Toronto.

Speaking to 500 doctors attending an Ontario chapter meeting of the College of General Practice of Canada, Dr. Macnab said it would be safer in some cases for players not to wear protective gear.

He said three university students in Kingston alone broke their necks because of face masks on their helmets during the 1961 season.

The players were knocked flat on their faces after a tackle but their bodies cart-wheeled, said Dr. Macnab. "The helmet acted as a sort of wheel and, as they rolled over on their heads, the back of the helmet snapped their necks."

The Toronto doctor also said that shoulder pads could cause serious injuries and if high school students started wearing spikes, then the danger was dreadful.

He suggested that protective equipment be designed for safety precaution and not an offensive danger.

Nats Make Draw For Playoffs

CINCINNATI (AP) — Drawings for possible two or three-team playoffs for the National League pennant race will be made today in the league office here.

Because Cincinnati, St. Louis and Philadelphia are so tightly bunched in the race, league president Warren Giles said, it will be necessary to conduct three drawings to cover two-team ties and one for a possible three-team deadlock.

Giles said there will be no off days in any playoffs and all games will be played in the daytime. There will be one day off between the end of the playoffs and the start of the World Series.

Hank Bauer Signs With Baltimore

BALTIMORE (AP) — Manager Hank Bauer, 42, who has kept the Baltimore Orioles in contention for the American League pennant down to the final week of the season, was rewarded today with a two-year contract by Oriole president Lee MacPhail.

MacPhail didn't reveal Bauer's salary, but the one-time New York Yankees outfielder is believed to have signed for about $35,000. In his debut as Oriole skipper this season... i game at Los Angeles. He has seen action only off and on since then.

Canadians Eliminate Malaysia

YOKOHAMA (CP-AP)—Canada moved into strong contention for a berth in the Olympic men's basketball tournament in Tokyo this month by routing Malaysia 88-43 today in the pre-Olympic qualifying tournament.

The Canadians, made up mainly of players from Toronto Vikings, last year's Canadian senior champions, scored their fourth victory in six games while eliminating Malaysia from the running for one of the four qualifying berths.

Even if Malaysia should win its three remaining games in the 10-country tournament, the six consecutive losses suffered so far would not give the Malaysians enough points in the standing to make the grade.

Two points are awarded for wins and Canada has eight points to remain near the top. The team still must play Formosa, Cuba and the Philippines.

The four countries qualifying here will join 12 other national teams who were seeded directly into the Olympics proper.

UNDERGOES OPERATION

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Willie Stargell of Pittsburgh Pirates underwent a knee operation Wednesday and doctors said his chances of recovery are excellent. The outfielder - infielder twisted his left knee May 16 in Oriole skipper this season... i game at Los Angeles. He has seen action only off and on since then.

Airborne Thermometer Used Takes Ocean Temperatures

NANAIMO, B.C. (CP) — Scientists have found the best way to measure ocean temperatures is from the air.

Dr. John Tully, head of the Pacific Oceanographic Group here, is perfecting an airborne thermometer which already can determine the temperature of the ocean surface within a degree by use of infra-red rays.

Five prototypes are in service, two on the east coast and one at the federal biological station which houses the POG.

Until the development, ocean temperature surveys had to be made from reports by ships.

"It was a bit like having four people on bicycles riding around North America observing the weather," Dr. Tully says. "It wasn't adequate."

Knowledge of the existing temperature structure of the oceans is vital to certain fishing and military operations.

The air thermometer was the product of four years' research sponsored by the Defence Research Board and the transport department's meteorological service.

All the instruments except the one at the station here are mounted on maritime air patrol craft. A special tower is being built for the one here.

Dr. Tully said the devices has already been shown to be an improvement over previous methods of measuring water temperatures and that further research is "adding decimal points."

"We're within a degree now of the right answer, but we want to get it down to a tenth of a degree."

Now's the Time To Hit Hollywood

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Young man, if you want to storm the gates of Hollywood, now is your time to march.

"Young people are welcome now, because everybody's real lines we must have new blood," said veteran producer-director Fred Zinnemann.

"Talent is the thing. If you have talent, you are very much needed. If not, you can't go as well head and your head against a wall."

There was no welcome mat out for Zinneman when he went to the West Coast film colony from Vienna after he abandoned earlier plans to become either a concert violinist or a lawyer.

"When I first set foot in Los Angeles," he recalled, "there was still an endless ordinance in effect making it illegal to shoot rabbits from the rear platform of a street car.

"It was very hard to become a director then. Everything was channelled. The big studios weren't taking chances on young people. Now it's completely changed now. There is no real studio system. Everything is more wide open."

Fred himself started as an extra in Ali Quiet on the Western Front. He also worked as a script clerk.

Although he won an Academy Award in 1938 for a film short called That Mothers Might Live, it wasn't until 1941 with The Search in 1948 that his directorial genius was fully recognized—10 long years after he arrived in Hollywood with high hopes and empty pockets.

His hopes are still as high but his pockets are no longer empty. Today the slender grizzle-haired, 56-year-old director is regarded as one of the half dozen or so master magicians of screen drama—sensitive, poetic, imaginative.

Among his outstanding films —his latest is Behold a Pale Horse—have been The Men High Noon, Member of the Wedding, From Here to Eternity, and Oklahoma!

Fred said his to film making he isn't particularly trying to prove anything to anyone.

"I am not old and too confused to define the meaning of life," he remarked. "Life has many meanings and too many levels.

"Nor can I put my philosophy into words. I try to put it into my pictures. Essentially, I suppose it is this: A man has to live up to the decisions in this world—or be lost."

AT THE BELLE — Britain's famous funny man Peter Sellers plays the virile and a comedy role in the new screen incredible "The Pink Panther", co-starring David Niven, Capucine and Claudia Cardinale. "The Pink Panther", in Technicolor and Technirama, is Now in its 6th and final fun-filled day at the Belle Theatre in Belleville.

Defends Right of Actors To Become Sick on the Job

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Last May Joseph Cotten began work on a movie which he expected to take two months. He hopes to finish the job this month.

The movie is Hush . . . Hush Sweet Charlotte (the studio's punctuation). It's the one which was supposed to repeat Bette Davis's and Joan Crawford's success with Whatever Happened to Baby Jane, only Miss Crawford became sick and had to be replaced by Ouvia deHavilland.

Joan Crawford has recovered enough to sign for another movie to start this month.

Cotten took time from the set to defend the actor's right to get sick.

"I've never been able to understand this business about the show must go on," he said. "It's absolute nonsense. People in other lines of work are allowed to be sick now and then. Why shouldn't actors?

MUST GET WELL

"If we owe anything to the theatre —and I've never been convinced of that—it's to get well so we can give a good performance. Isn't it better to stay home and take care of yourself rather than to perform with a bad throat and a temperature?

"Joan had to be sick—you can bet the insurance doctors wouldn't have advised her to—placement if she wasn't. The only sensible thing to do was to hire someone else, because the company couldn't wait for her any longer."

Last year Cotten and his wife, Patricia Medina were playing in Calculated Risk on Broadway. She had the flu, but still insisted on the play.

"I wouldn't let her do it," he said. "And I can tell you this: It would much rather make love to her on the stage than to her understudy."

Knocking on the nearest wood, Cotten said he has never missed a curtain although there have been nights when he didn't feel up to snuff. And he has only been absent on one movie, "but I recovered and finished the picture."

LIFT BAN

OTTAWA (CP) — The local federation of musicians has lifted its ban on symphony orchestras playing in Ottawa. The Philharmonic Society's concerts by the Warsaw and New York Philharmonic Orchestras last year was lifted when the Montreal Symphony Orchestra gave its first concert of the season Sunday night. The orchestra escaped the ruling by giving up sponsorship by the Ottawa Philharmonic Society, which is on the federation's black list.

Ex-Pork Packer, Salesman Stars in Genghis Klan Film

By MARGARET NESS

BELGRADE (CP) — If he didn't have to ride a horse that hates him and steals scenes to boot, Canadian Don Borisenko would be unreservedly happy about his work in a British film on Genghis Khan being shot on the first Yugoslavian steppes.

For one thing, the former Toronto pork packer and brush salesman is the only general, who's alive in the picture. Also, the pay rests that part of his first horseback opus made around Orangeville, Ont., about four years ago.

He has thankfully forgotten the name of that western. He was making a dud called Ivy League Killers in Toronto when the last selling coffee to the actors promised to star him in a picture some day. Sure enough, when he came up with enough money for a low, low-budget western.

Borisenko horsed around in knee-deep snow for 3½ weeks, lunching mainly on frozen peanut butter sandwiches. His pay was $500 plus an enormous percentage of the profits, of which there weren't any. But he did learn to ride.

'HE HATES ME'

"The good I did," he said over dinner in Belgrade's elegant Metropol Hotel. "In Genghis Khan I've got a brute of a horse. I tried to be friendly since we have to work so long and so closely together. But he hates me."

Borisenko has been here since July 1, working in an Irving-Allen production starring James Mason and Omar Sharif. He made it in Lawrence of Arabia. The film won't be finished until mid-November, and after that he goes to Norway for a Second World War Resistance picture.

Borisenko, son of Russian-born parents living in New Toronto, became a movie actor in desperation. About seven years ago he was averaging $6 a week selling brushes from door to door in the Toronto suburbs when he heard Canadian company was auditioning for a film in a downtown studio.

He quit his job and got a role in how that April's Here. But after this and his other two undistinguished Toronto pictures, he had to go to work packing pork in a meat plant there. He was rescued by Sidney Furie, a Toronto movie man now working in England, who had seen him in one of the pictures and found him a small part.

WORKED FOR BBC

Since then he worked in India in Nine Hours to Rama, a movie about Gandhi; spent three months as a contract player in Hollywood, but without ever getting a picture; and played a number of leads for the BBC and ITV.

Last spring he did a five 90-minute show for the BBC, a Klas Before Bedtime in Toronto actress Toby Robins as co-star.

"Funny thing," he said. "Back home I'd never met Toby or Toronto. But Fred Freedman. We found out that Toby and I were born on the same street in Toronto. When I was four my family moved to Long Branch (a Toronto suburb). Bill's married to the former Verna Triller of Port Credit, Ont., who went to school with Toby and they have a 3½-year-old son.

SKIING NEXT

The next now 25, has worked steadily since landing in England. "These are my breaks and I'm grateful. Few actors get a chance at anything big until they are 28 or more." Actually, he's not a "general" like acting. "But I learned the trade and some day I hope to direct."

The Genghis Khan film's outdoor sequences should end in October, following by at least three weeks of shooting in a Berlin studio.

"These epics are mostly alting around on a chair or a horse," Borisenko said. "And my wretched animal is sure to steal every scene from me. He tells out a huge belch now and rolls wicked eyes every time there's a close-up of us."

The Norman film is due to start in December. It calls for skiing, which Borisenko hasn't learned yet. He's going over early to take some concentrated lessons from a pro. "After all, I'd never ridden a horse before I made that Toronto western."

Every year, Red Cross Volunteer Hospital Visitors make hundreds of thousands of bedside visits to veterans in hospitals across Canada. In many communities you can support the Red Cross through your donations to the United Community Fund campaign.

Danny Kaye Show Is Back With Humor, Spirit Intact

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)— One of television's happiest sours of last season is back and, judging from a Wednesday night's show, with its humor and spirit intact.

It is, of course, The Danny Kaye Show, on CBS. The show, second of the new season's debuts, was not one of the most memorable ones. Perhaps it was partly because Miss Kaye's fine guest star. is a brash aggressive comic with a style that doesn't mix too well with Kaye's genius more whimsical approach.

Another fine comedy program returning for another season is The Dick Van Dyke show, but Wednesday night's edition, too, seemed to be having a hard time hunting for laughs. It was a tired, phoney story that had the four principals of the show spending the night in a western cottage that was supposed to be haunted.

However, The Beverly Hillbillies haven't changed a bit since last season—and who's going to fool around with a winner? Seems that Jed Clampett bought a failing movie studio because his banker friend wanted to turn it into a real estate development. Jed and Granny promptly fell in love with the rustic set and the western under the impression it was a nice little town and decided to move there from Beverly Hills.

RECOMMENDED TONIGHT:

Perry Mason, CBS, 8-9—An actress in the long-playing series starring Raymond Burr as the indomitable lawyer; Bewitched, ABC, 9-9:30 — Comedy fantasy about a pretty enchantress married to a mere mortal; Suspense Theatre, NBC, 10 - 11— Starting its second season with a drama starring Sal Mineo and Albert Dekker.

Fair Stands the Breeze for Nova Scotia

Proud Province on the Move

Bounded by scenic beauty, foaming Atlantic rollers and the surge of great tides, Canada's year-round eastern threshold — Nova Scotia — is full away for the future. With course drawn clear on a brand-new, multi-hued chart of industry and business, the province's 760,000 population is producing more than ever before. As new vigor and outlook spur technological advance and resource development, the province's steel, fish, auto, agricultural, mineral, electronics, construction, forestry and other varied industries have boosted Nova Scotia's total value of production to $1,000,000,000, — solid economic indication that this picturesque province looks attractive also to hard-headed businessmen and modern industrialists. In Nova Scotia the tide of business is on the flood, the engines of industry at full-ahead.

New Volvo automobile plant in Dartmouth employs 115 local workers who have developed new skills and craftsmanship to produce 3,000 cars per year.

Halifax Shopping Centre, above, is ultra-modern with enclosed shopping arcades, banks, department stores and supermarkets. Buying power of Nova Scotians is increasing sharply as per-capita incomes rise.

Diefenbaker Charges Gordon Not Realistic

PORT CREDIT, Ont. (CP)—Opposition Leader Diefenbaker said Wednesday night Finance Minister Gordon's description of the Canadian economy as "doing fine" is a flight away from reality.

In the last three days, Mr. Diefenbaker said, the bureau of statistics has reported rising prices, a slowdown in labor income, a sharp slump in residential construction, a fall-off in new orders, declines in capital formation, and a balance of payments deficit in the first six months of 1964, 14 per cent higher than last year.

He said that on Tuesday, Mr. Gordon had made "rosy statements regarding the state of the economy — the economy is doing fine."

Mr. Diefenbaker said that Trade Minister Sharp, "who occasionally deviates into reality," had earlier this month said that the period of economic expansion started three years ago, when the Conservatives were in power.

Now, the Conservative leader added, the upward trend started under the Conservative regime has turned downward.

The remarks were included in the text of his speech to the Peel Progressive Conservative Association.

Privateer Was Outwitted By Wily Fish Merchant

By ED WALTERS

TRINITY, Nfld. (CP) — The story is still told in this ancient town of how the warmth of wine saved it from destruction by a marauding French admiral. A ruined stone house which can be seen today is the only reminder of a time when hospitality saved the day.

Benjamin Lester, wily English fishing merchant, spent his summers in Trinity to oversee his great fishing operation. In 1762, the last year of the Seven Years' War between France and England, most of the town's 2,500 inhabitants depended on him for a living.

The tattered records say that fishing was good that summer. Lester's stores were laden with salt cod awaiting shipment to European markets.

The defences on the Fort Point protecting the three arms of this superbly land locked harbor had been allowed to fall into disrepair. Lester's rich trade and town were ripe for plucking by one Chevalier De Ternay, who in late spring was already off the east coast of Newfoundland.

ELUDES BLOCKADE

De Ternay had sneaked out of Brest, France, with his four ships May 8, eluding a blockading British squadron commanded by Admiral Hawke under cover of fog.

Sitting in the spacious cabin of Robuste, a 74-gun ship of the line, De Ternay laid his plans carefully when the lookout reported Cape Bonavista on the starboard bow. With him were Eville of 64 guns, Garron with 36 and the frigate Acorn of 28. On board were 870 French soldiers, including 270 crack grenadiers. There were 500 sailors in Robuste and about 400 in Eville. Some 300 manned the other ships.

The town of Bonavista was first to fall before cannon and sword and then was put to the torch. Survivors footed it over 25 miles of rugged country to warn Trinity that it was De Ternay's next target.

Most of the inhabitants fled with their valuables in shallops and schooners to the deep fjords at the bottom of Trinity Bay where they buried or lost treasure. People today still hunt for it.

But Benjamin Lester apparently was made of sterner stuff. He was fluent in French, the result of a careful education by his wealthy parents who also had made fortunes in the Newfoundland trade.

SEES WAY OUT

His new stone mansion was just finished. The building and all his possessions would be lost. There were not enough men to fight the French but the mind of the man who was used to reaping gold from the fish trade grasped the only solution.

Acorn came in first. Robuste, with every one of her 74 cannon manned, slid in under topsails and mizzen, rounded into the wind and cast anchor.

Before the other two vessels had entered, a row boat containing a shivering manservant of Lester's came under Robuste's stern. The servant asked for the commander.

When De Ternay was told that the principal merchant of the place was inviting him and his officers to dine, he laughed. Then the idea of a sea-hawk dining with the victim caught his fancy and he agreed.

This was what Lester had counted on. That night De Ternay and his sailing masters, lieutenants, captains and military commanders rowed ashore to Lester's new mansion.

Not losing a bet, Lester had rounded up all the serving girls he could find, raided his wife's wardrobe for suitable apparel and had them come dramatically down the staircase into the dining hall, aglow with chandeliers. As the night progressed, the comely Devonshire and Somerset maidens made welcome dancing partners for the sea-weary French.

WINE FLOWS FREELY

Lester sat at the head of his new dining table, but lately brought from England, plying De Ternay with wines from Portugal, Italy and even some vintage grape from the south of France.

De Ternay got drunker and profusely thanked Lester for his hospitality. It was strange to find this gracious living so far from Europe.

Then Lester, his heart in his throat, told De Ternay what thanks he wanted.

Would the Chevalier De Ternay, a gentleman and an honorable enemy, condescend to spare Lester's property?

It is said that De Ternay did not hesitate. He agreed to spare everything owned by Lester. He asked the Englishman to send a servant in the morning, to show him where the property lay.

In the morning De Ternay found to his dismay that, with the exception of one small shipyard where a schooner was being built, Lester owned all the buildings in the town.

SPARED PROPERTY

De Ternay ordinarily was the gentleman Lester believed him to be. He touched nothing belonging to Lester during his 14 days here. The new schooner which did not belong to Lester was sawn in half.

De Ternay went on to capture St. John's, which he soon lost to Rear-Admiral Lord Colville who brought his North American squadron from Halifax.

The tale is said to be supported by Lester's diary still in existence in England and jealously guarded by a descendant. Lord Colville's dispatches and old mercantile records lend substance to it.

Trinity's population has dwindled to 400 but there still are people here whose great-great-grandfathers were present when De Ternay arrived.

It is said that on dark nights the light shines through the empty windows of the old house, and the sound of revelry can be heard.

Many are afraid to pass along by the ruins after dark.

For October 2

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Maintain steady pace. Guard health. Don't upset yourself through needless concern. Realistic friend who complains merely needs encouragement. By being diplomatic, you can "win the day."

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): Check reliable sources. Then move ahead in familiar area. Don't attempt projects which are "far out." Be practical. Avoid self-deception. Heed advice offered by experienced individual.

Gemini (May 21 to June 20): Contacts made in past one rushing to forefront. You can solidify plans, arrangements. Long-distance call could contain encouraging news. You are capable of more than you might realize!

Cancer (June 21 to July 22): Be thorough. Current financial pressure is temporary. Key is calm approach. Finish project. Then begin examining possibilities for exciting, new venture. Cycle continues high.

Leo (July 23 to Aug. 22): Your judgment is requested by two sources. Size with youth originality, independence. Get in on "ground floor." Money situation improves. Natural showmanship comes to forefront.

Virgo (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22): Cycle moves up. No need to fear the unknown. Your ideas are solid. They will "work." You will soon receive opportunity to test theories. Fine evening for night out!

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Be aware, ready to handle "surprises." Excellent day for socializing, developing new contacts. Friend due to enter scene this evening. Plans discussed are important, can prove fruitful.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): There are details to be ironed out. There are persons to contact. Know this and be patient. Don't attempt to do too much at one sitting. Member of your own family has doubts. Listen!

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): What others say they will do . . . and what they actually accomplish not the same. Realize that small talk does not amount to a contract. Wait for weekend to pass. Then make real overtures.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19): Review current situation, indications. You could be working against your own best interests. Stop and think. Stress maturity, understanding and diplomacy. Obtain hint from today's Scorpio message.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18): Many may insist you are overly cautious. But your own hunch serves as most reliable guide. Day to analyze . . . make deductions. Then act according to dictates of conscience!

Pisces (Feb. 19 to Mar. 20): There are work pressures indicated. But they are temporary. Key is self-control. Don't permit irritable moment to explode into emotional bombshell! Play waiting game. Time is definitely on your side.

If today is your birthday . . . you are musically inclined. You respond to those who possess creative abilities. Would make excellent critic, actor, artist.

General Tendencies: Cycle high for Virgo, Libra, Scorpio. Special word to Pisces: If called upon to handle added responsibility, say yes.

WON'T GIVE AMNESTY

OTTAWA (CP)—The government has decided in line with a decision by the former Conservative government that visits by the Queen to Canada will not be marked by amnesty decrees or prisoners in Canadian jails or penitentiaries. Justice Minister Favreau said Tuesday part of the reason is that parole legislation now provides for reduction in prison terms.

All Quiet on London's Docks

By HAROLD MORRISON

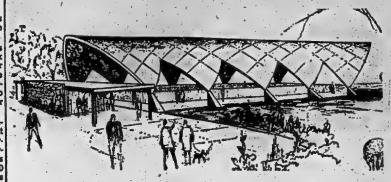
LONDON (CP) — Hour by hour, the lineup of trucks waiting to unload their precious export cargoes grows longer. Soon the line stretches a mile back from London's huge and congested docks. Truckers play cards, snooze or sun - bathe. Their cargoes remain unloaded.

This is part of the problem facing Britain's crucial export trade. The London docks usually handle about one-third of all Britain's exports but a shortage of dock labor, complicated by a wage dispute, has caused a massive cargo-handling delay.

"I was turned away four times last week because they couldn't deal with my load in time," said one trucker, part of a number who spend their time hauling loads to the docks and then hauling them away, waiting for the day when their cargoes can be unloaded and shipped aboard a waiting armada of ocean-going freighters.

Meanwhile, Britain's international payments deficit deepens under a widening trade gap. Exporters cry that they must export to live and that failure to bring a major and permanent change on the docks could place Britain in grave danger.

WAIT FOR WEEKS



"At this moment, the docks are certainly not being properly run," says the London Evening News. "Conditions are chaotic—worse than for years. Up to 1,000 lorries queue up every day, waiting to unload. Goods for export lie around for as long as three weeks. Storage is congested with millions of pounds worth of stuff which should be on its way overseas."

One part of the problem is that about 2,000 of the dock workers are still on summer vacation. Until they return, the handling of cargoes may worsen, forcing dock authorities to divert more ships to other ports.

Another is that Britain's 65,000 organized dockers want higher pay. A dock worker currently averages about the equivalent of $46 a week; the dockers want an increase of about $3.70 a week while management has offered about $1.80.

This wage dispute now has reached the stage where a national dock strike is considered a possibility. This could result in virtual strangulation of Britain's export drive.

Federal Labor Code Is Placed Before Commons

Minimum Wage of $1.25 Is Proposed Under Bill

By BEN WARD

OTTAWA (CP) — A federal minimum wage of $1.25 an hour for workers 17 years of age and over was proposed to Parliament Thursday by Labor Minister MacEachen.

The wage law is the key section of a 21-page bill Mr. MacEachen introduced in the Commons setting up the much-heralded federal labor code. The bill was given first reading without debate.

It would come into effect Jan. 1 and cover 556,000 workers in industries under federal jurisdiction — mainly transportation and communications companies, banks, radio stations and certain crown agencies.

Although these workers make up less than nine per cent of the work force, the code is expected to have far wider influence. It would put heavy pressure on the provinces to raise their minimum standards affecting the rest of Canadian industry.

Provincial minimum wage laws now vary widely, from 30 cents an hour for men in Newfoundland to $1 an hour in Ontario's main industrial region.

Other provisions in the code set a standard eight-hour day and 40-hour week, two weeks vacation with pay after one year, seven paid statutory holidays and time-and-a-half for overtime work.

Immediate application of the wage law would raise the pay of an estimated 50,000 workers, including about 17,000 federal government employees, among those covered by federal labor laws.

There is no reliable estimate of how many would be affected if the rate was applied to the entire labor force, but the most recent figures on income tax show that 802,856 wage-earners reported over $2,000 a year—equal to $1.25 an hour—in tax returns filed during 1962.

A spokesman for the Canadian Labor Congress, which advocates a $1.50 minimum wage law, welcomed the move.

Joe Morris, executive vice-president of the CLC, described the bill as "a step in the right direction."

He urged the Commons committee study of the bill with labor organizations and other interested parties invited to give their views.

MP's State Navy Needs New Ships

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) —The navy, after being knocked about from booy to jetty for the last year, has finally found a friend: the Commons defence committee.

In a report to the Commons Thursday, the committee recommended that the government provide all kinds of things for the senior service, from new antisubmarine and transport ships to nuclear propulsion and better housing.

The navy has been feeling its lumps since Defence Minister Hellyer cancelled the previous Conservative government's program for construction of eight super-frigates and retired Commodore James Plomer accused the officer corps of running the service like an exclusive club.

The committee obliquely criticized Mr. Hellyer for junking the frigate program when it said the navy needs new anti-submarine ships and an air defence system for the fleet. The frigates were to have carried anti-aircraft missiles.

The committee called for an early government decision on a ship construction program and recommended that priority be given to transport vessels for United Nations peacekeeping and similar operations.

It proposed studies on nuclear propulsion for ships and said intensive research and development of more effective anti submarine weapons should be pressed without delay.

HOUSING INADEQUATE

The committee also said housing for naval personnel in the Halifax area is "grossly inadequate."

The navy didn't escape scot-free in the report.

The committee said there is "considerable doubt" about the serviceability of the navy's 2.7-inch gun. During exercises off Bermuda, released by the committee, "several failures"

Dangers of Queen's Visit Here Stressed by British Newspapers

LONDON (CP) — The dangers of the Queen's visit to Canada are stressed by British newspapers today.

"A Grim Warning", is the main frontpage headline in the mass-circulation Daily Express over a Montreal story quoting Marcel Chaput, separatist spokesman.

Veteran Express reporter Rene MacColl quotes Chaput as saying in an interview:

"I fear that her safety simply cannot be guaranteed while she is in Quebec.

"If it should come to an assassination then it would be simply the assassination of a symbol, not of a woman."

The Daily Mail carries a story from its reporter, Vincent Mulchrone, stating: "The plain, insane truth about next week's royal visit is that somebody may try to kill the Queen. And the fact that the risk is minimal is cold comfort to those Canadians charged with her safety."

The Daily Telegraph says in an Ottawa dispatch from its correspondent, Edwin Tetlow:

"There is undoubtedly some feeling against Canada, as there is elsewhere within the Commonwealth, that the visit might have been cancelled at the first whispers of threats from French-Canadian extremists.

"If Canadians are rallying impressively behind Mr Pearson and his government to support him in welcoming the Queen."

One of the few letters-to-the-editor on the Queen's trip in the tabloid Daily Sketch. E. Lewis Barnstead, Surrey, suggests that "we all offer a prayer" for the Queen's safety.

Canada's Trade Expands

By ROBERT MacKENZIE

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's present position in national and international commerce is excellent, Trade Minister Sharp told the Commons Thursday, but "we must remain competitive" to maintain and expand our place in world markets.

Keener competition can be expected in the near future, he said, as his departmental spending appropriations of more than $83,000,000 were introduced.

"We should set our sights on meeting this keener competition."

Canada's export trade has grown 10 per cent a year since 1960, and is up 23 per cent so far this year, he said. Even without the big wheat sales exports were 17 per cent higher than last year.

Marcel Lambert (PC — Edmonton West) urged the government to hold an export promotion conference along the lines of one called by the former Conservative government when trade department officers abroad were called home to meet Canadian manufacturers.

Mr. Lambert also asked what was being done by the National Economic Council the Liberals had set up to find "the secret formula" for prosperity.

H. A. Olson (SC — Medicine Hat) said Canada should insist the United States buy more Canadian goods to balance 60 cent of Canadian purchases and all interest and dividends paid to the U.S. He also expressed fear that Canada might lose traditional wheat markets while selling wheat to Communist nations.

Steve Otto (L—York East) said the tariff incentives for export of auto parts should be expanded to cover other manufactured products and the government should strive for a trade balance in terms of labor content.

Terrorist Paper Urges Protest Aimed at Queen

MONTREAL (CP)—A terrorist front for Liberation Quebecois (FLQ) news sheet advises supporters to greet the Queen next week "in a big but peaceful if not violent, demonstration.

La Cognee, (The Hatchet) a mimeographed publication distributed in the thousands, said in its Aug. 29 issue separatist rallies to protest Oct. 10-11 visit by peaceful protests so should aim at "creating a riot or getting at least a show of force."

Anti - terrorist police forces have been aware the news sheet has been circulated for several months but can't find the authors or their machines. They have seized several thousand copies of La Cognee in raids.

The issue concentrated on agitator tactics, including distribution of bricks, stones and egg- to demonstrators and what to do in case the police open fire.

However, La Cognee made no mention of barming the Queen.

The pamphlet said agitators should concentrate the attention of the crowd on a specific target and said this was done in the U.S. against demonstration against CNR president Donald Gordon. The article said the crowd was instructed to attack the doors of the Queen Elizabeth Hotel.

The agitator must remain calm in the hysterical crowd in order to dominate and direct it. While passing out missiles to the crowd, the agitator himself must not participate in throwing them.

The pamphlet said agitators must isolate and neutralize counter - demonstrator agents whose main aim is to break up the crowd.

FEATHERS WERE FLYING over the city yesterday afternoon after Mayor Jack R. Ellis, (above with plane just before take-off time), flew over the city and dropped a bundle of red feathers to kick-off the 1964 United Appeal Campaign. Mayor Ellis was accompanied in the Prince Edward Flying Club aircraft by P.E.F.C. instructor Murray Clapp.

Judge Says He Never Got Inducements to Help NONG

SUDBURY, (CP) — Former mayor Leo Landreville of Sudbury says he never received inducements from Northern Ontario Natural Gas Company "or anyone else" for the granting of a gas franchise in Sudbury in 1956.

The statement was made by the former mayor—now a justice of the Ontario Supreme Court—at a hearing of the Ontario Securities Commission into NONG stock transactions in October, 1962, and now has become part of the evidence at Mr. Justice Landreville's preliminary hearing on charges of municipal corruption.

About half of the 180-page transcript of Mr. Justice Landreville's statement to the securities commission hearing was read in court Thursday before the hearing was adjourned until next Tuesday.

The court also heard Thursday that the former mayor had become a friend of Ralph K. Farris of Vancouver, NONG president, when the two met in December, 1955.

"I respected and admired Farris, but never conceded to him any point of value because of our friendship," Mr. Justice Landreville testified before the securities commission.

He said in the transcript that Farris had never interfered with the mayor's office and that at no time did anyone else from NONG suggest that the mayor accept NONG shares in return for certain favors.

Mr. Justice Landreville, who left the Sudbury mayoralty late in 1956 when he was appointed to the bench, is accused of accepting NONG shares as a consideration for getting the NONG gas franchise through city coun-

U. S., Britain Draft Treaty To Stop Spread of A-Arms

MANCHESTER, England (Reuters) — Britain and the United States have drawn up a draft treaty to halt the spread of nuclear weapons which can be produced "any moment it is wanted," Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home said today.

Douglas-Home, revealing the existence of the draft treaty in a campaign speech here, said he thought it would be possible "to get the Russians to agree" and that he hopes France would also agree.

(In Washington, it was authoritatively learned that the Soviet Union rebuffed an approach by the United States last year to draw up joint plans to prevent China from developing a nuclear capability.)

The prime minister said the draft treaty was based on a resolution made by Ireland at the United Nations.

"This is one positive move which can be made in the months ahead," he said. But he said he doubted that "any practical steps can be taken on this until after the American election."

"But I hope it will be quickly after that," the prime minister said.

The prime minister was making a speech in a parking lot to an audience of about 1,000 persons. The only real interruption from the crowd came when he said that in no circumstances would he allow Britain's destiny to be in the hands of another country.

Shouts of "It already is!" and "Hear, Hear," came from the crowd at this point.

Douglas-Home conceded that the Russians were "not in the mood" for a disarmament agreement at the moment.

Orders Strike Ended

NEW YORK (AP)—A federal judge, acting on a national emergency declaration by President Johnson, has ordered 60,000 longshoremen to end their strike in Atlantic and Gulf of Mexico ports.

U.S. officials here said there never had been such speed in strike injunction action as far as they could remember.

But it appeared that most of the strikers would not be so speedy in returning to docks from Maine to Texas.

Thomas W. (Teddy) Gleason, president of the International Longshoremen's Association (AFL-CIO) said the men would obey the restraining order issued Thursday night by U.S. District Judge Frederick vanPelt Bryan.

The regular work day in New York starts at 8 a.m.—just 12 hours after the judge signed the papers aimed at an 80-day cooling off period to allow time for further efforts to break the three-month-deadlock in negotiations on a new contract.

Union leaders, however, did not immediately issue back-to-work orders to the men, who went on strike at midnight Wednesday night.

A spokesman for Gleason said he would call a meeting of union officials this morning to make preparations to get the men back on the job in the port of New York.

In some other ports, Monday was considered the most likely time for resumption of work. In still other ports, union officials said work might resume today or tonight.

CONDUCTOR APPOINTED

OTTAWA (CP) — Nicholas Goldschmidt, 55, of Toronto, well-known conductor and director of music, has been appointed senior performing arts officer with the national centennial commission, it was announced today.

Found Relaxing Aboard Yacht Off Brooklyn

Former Waterfront Boss Beyond Canada's Reach

OTTAWA (CP)—Former waterfront baron Hal Banks apparently was relaxing aboard a yacht in Mill Basin, Brooklyn Thursday while officials in Ottawa debated angrily over whose fault it was he wasn't behind bars.

Banks, whose name has adorned the parliamentary record almost daily for weeks, was reported by the Toronto Star to be in the United States. That would put him out of reach of Canadian law which sentenced him to five years in penitentiary for conspiring to beat a rival union organizer.

The 59-year-old former Canadian head of the Seafarers' International Union disappeared in July and efforts to find him have proven fruitless.

Pearson Rejects Probe on Banks

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson today flatly rejected an opposition MP's suggestion for a special Judge-ordered inquiry into Hal Banks' flight to the United States. No such inquiry is necessary, Mr. Pearson said.

"The facts are quite clear," he added. Another investigation would serve no useful purpose.

Star reporter Robert Reguly blew the political coutroversy over Banks even higher with his copyrighted article saying it took only two hours in New York to locate the former SIU boss.

Justice Minister Favreau, who had an angry exchange in the House of Commons with Opposition Leader Diefenbaker earlier in the day, said the newspaper story would be checked through official channels for any new information that could be put on the Banks file.

Mr. Diefenbaker said the discovery of Banks by a reporter was "further evidence of complete indifference and lethargy" and "gross negligence" on the part of the federal government.

'PAMPERED PET'

Before news of the discovery, the opposition leader had charged in the Commons that Banks was the pampered pet of Liberalism." The government had charged him with an offence for which normal extradition provisions did not apply. Then it let him escape to the United States where he would be safe.

Mr. Favreau had said in the House that he was unable to give a precise answer to Mr. Diefenbaker's queries about Banks' whereabouts.

T. C. Douglas, leader of the New Democrats, did not think the search for Banks could

First - day campaign results at the United Appeal office show collections of $6,738, but the amount is only part of the story. Most of the money now at the campaign office came from national corporations, with only a few small private and business donations, and one payroll-giving group, having reported so far.

Among the unreported inplant industrial campaigns, where most of the money is expected to come from, the Canadian National Railways campaign probably leads the city, with nearly $3,000 collected so far.

Computer May Provide Answers For New Law Regarding Mergers

OTTAWA (CP) — The long search for an enforceable Canadian law on mergers has led to a computer. Its answers may help determine the government's amending legislation.

Behind the computer is general dissatisfaction in both government and industry with the present anti-merger provisions in the Combines Investigation Act.

The courts have interpreted the present law to mean that a merger is illegal only if it results in eliminating practically all competition, that is, a virtual monopoly.

Because of this the justice department now regards the law as almost unenforceable.

For more than two years the combines branch here has been collecting data on post war mergers and their economic effects.

Informants said Thursday some data still has not been received, but most of the information now is at hand. Next step will be to transfer some of this data to punch cards and feed them to a computer.

However, it is expected to be another year before the branch commits its findings to writing.

It is regarded as unlikely that the government would be prepared to introduce amending legislation before then.

Wallowing in Mexican Gulf Hilda Seems Seeking Target

By BEN THOMAS

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Hurricane Hilda sought a target for the fury of her 150-mile-an-hour winds early today as she wallowed in the Gulf of Mexico, lashing at the deserted offshore oil rigs off the Louisiana coast.

Thousands of refugees fled the swamps, marshes of Louisiana's Cajun country for the safety of the interior as they remembered killer hurricanes of the past.

More severe than any of her Atlantic sisters, Hilda — first gulf hurricane of the season — continued to move in a northwesterly direction at a snail's pace through the night.

The weather bureau early today placed the hurricane's eye — the low pressure centre which spawns its howling winds—at about 300 miles south - southwest of New Orleans.

For more than 24 hours, the weather bureau had been predicting a northward turn by Hilda and the latest advisory still said a slow turn "to a more northerly course is indicated."

Hurricane warning flags were hoisted along all of the Louisiana coast west of the mouth of the Mississippi River.

WINDS 75 M.P.H.

Hurricane force winds — 75 m.p.h. or higher — extended out 80 miles from Hilda's centre with gale winds between 39 and 74 m.p.h. 200 miles to the north and east and 100 miles to the southwest of the eye.

Residents of the Texas coastal areas, uncertain where Hilda would hit, planned to flee their homes.

"Come hell or high water, there will never be another hurricane Audrey," said George Duris, 64-year-old Cameron, La., farmer.

Duris was one of thousands of Cameron Parish folks trapped by the high waters pushed ashore by hurricane Audrey in the pre-dawn hours of June 27, 1957.

Duris survived but more than 500 of his friends and neighbors died.

Man Wanted 'Pen' Sentence, Request Denied

Peter Walker of Peterborough was sentenced to an Ontario Reformatory by magistrate T. Y. Wills this morning. Sentenced in magistrate's court this morning on six charges of theft, Walker asked that one day be added to the sentence on a charge of stealing a car in Belleville, in order that he might be sent to penitentiary. The request was denied.

Sentence on the car theft was two years less one day definite, plus one indefinite. Walker was also given concurrent sentences of three months on each of three charges of theft in Trenton and three months on each of two charges of theft in Peterborough.

Unemployment Shows Decline In City, Area

The number of job seekers in Belleville and in the area served by the Belleville employment office at the end of September was down by about nine per cent compared with last year.

Cecil Hiuser, manager of the local employment office, said today the number of claimed applicants at the month end was 945, made up of 528 men and 417 women. The corresponding number a year ago was 1030.

At the same time the number of persons receiving benefits was down about 12 per cent.

Postal clearances for 347 and local claims 323 for a total of 670. Last year there were 760 claimants at the end of September.

Benefit applications during the month totalled 209—a drop of 34 per cent from a year ago to 362, or an increase of about 20 per cent.

"We feel last month's employment picture was quite good, even with the closure of the uranium mine at Bancroft," Mr Hiuser said.

New Island Will Aid Traffic Control

The intersection of North Front and Dundas streets has taken on a new look with the placement of a triangular traffic island by the city works department.

The island will serve to better control traffic at this busy intersection which during rush hours sees congested conditions and long line-ups of cars waiting to go through the traffic lights.

Girly Clubs Succeed Where Hitler Failed

LONDON (AP) — London's girly strip clubs Thursday succeeded where Adolf Hitler's bombers failed. They rang down the curtain on the capital's oldest nude show, the Windmill Theatre.

Its non-stop performances during the German air raids of the Second World War earned it the proud motto "We never closed."

But where the bombs failed, rival strippers have won.

Sheila Van Damm, managing director of the 32 year-old theatre, told reporters that, due to falling attendances, she has been forced to sell out to a cinema firm.

The theatre, known in hundreds of thousands of Commonwealth and U.S. servicemen for its high - kicking chorus line and statuesque nudes, will show movies after Oct. 31.

"We began to lose business almost immediately after the strip clubs opened in London in 1956," Miss Van Damm told a press conference

"The girls in the clubs can move. As a theatre our nudes were bound by law to stand still."

Foul Language Costs Youth Fine of $25

Foul language on Front St. last month cost a Belleville youth a $25 fine this morning. Ralph Patrick Langstaff pleaded guilty in magistrate's court this morning to a charge of foul language, within hearing distance of police constable Jaquet, on Saturday morning, Sept. 19.

Fire Hazard High in Bush In This Area

Rainfall of less than an inch last month has left Tweed area forests in a dangerously dry condition, the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests warned today. Normal rainfall for September is more than three-and-a-half inches. If the low rainfall mark compares as it usually does, the year may set a record.

One hundred and forty-four brush and forest fires have been reported so far, in the Tweed district, compared with 119 to the end of October last year. Two fires have been reported since Friday, one starting now in the Tweed District, two of them blamed on hunters and one blamed on a fisherman. Careless hunters are blamed for a small fire in South Canonto and a fisherman for a fire in Raglan township, a dangerous garbage dump is burning in Gratton township.

Council Votes To Write Off Back Taxes

City council this week voted to "write off" an amount of something over $5,000 in back taxes as recommended by the court of revision.

The "write-offs" okayed by council were for $223.59 of the 1960 special levy, and $4,903.38 of the business taxes for the same year.

But Alderman Ben Corke, chairman of the finance committee, told council that these were "write-offs" merely meant the accounts were no longer on the current tax files.

The alderman called for more detail about the back tax accounts when they were recommended for write-off action.

He said that in some instances taxes have been claimed to be uncollectible and yet later it had been determined the debtor was living in an expensive house in another city.

He suggested that with the city tax department now having been completely re-organized it should be possible to cut down on tax write-offs in future years.

Oak Hills 'Pig Street' Gets Face Lift

The Sidney township road in the Oak Hills will known for its curious name "Pig Street" is getting a face lifting.

This summer road crews have been engaged in widening the roadway and building up the low areas to make the artery safer to drive.

Due to the fact that it bypasses Stirling and also because it is a direct artery between Highways 33 and 14, "Pig Street" is much travelled, but with the possible exception of old timers, few may know the origin of the roadway's quaint name.

The story is that the road got its name about 100 years ago following a pig shooting incident.

It seems that a farmer on the roadway owned a number of pigs that had a habit of roaming through the woods in search of beechnuts as food.

The wandering pigs so irked one of the neighbors that he got out his rifle and shot at them, killing one and injuring two others.

One of the wounded pigs ran home leaving a trail of blood which was later back-tracked to identify the offending farmer.

Since then the Oak Hills road has been known as "Pig Street."

Night Football Makes Debut At Fairgrounds

Tonight marks another first for the Belleville area when high school football will be played under the lights at the fairgrounds. Both Moira Secondary School and Belleville Collegiate will play their home games on Friday nights.

The first game to be played at the fairgrounds will be between Moira Secondary School and Prince Edward Collegiate with the junior encounter to get underway at 6.30 p.m. Following this game, last year's senior runner-up team from Moira will take on their counterparts from Picton.

To entertain between games the cross country teams from Trenton, Picton, OSD, Campbellford, BCI and Moira will compete in a 2 mile run on the fairground track.

One of the advantages of having these games at night is the fact that parents and other adults can see some of the fine football players being produced here. Several local boys are now playing at the University level and a few, including Bob Bailey presently playing at Moira have attended the Ottawa Roughrider spring training camp.

To help defray expenses, there will be an admission charge of 25c for children and 35c for adults.

Builders Group Visits Kingston

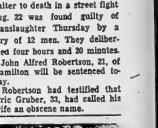
Youth Enjoyed Govt.-Sponsored Trip to West

TRENTON — This summer, Wayne Myles, 16, the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Myles, Carrying Place Road, spent two weeks in Western Canada, as the guest of the federal and provincial governments. Wayne was one of 144 Ontario students to come under the Centennial Youth Travel Program, and, at showing 10,000 students parts of Canada, other than their home areas, before 1967. Twenty-four went from Central Ontario, and they achieved this honor by academic standing and good school citizenship.

Wayne's group, 15 boys and nine girls, and two chaperones, visited Prince George, the fastest growing city in North America); Prince Rupert, Fort St. John, Dawson Creek and Terrace, all British Columbia communities, and all in the northern part of the province.

The youths were billeted in private homes, or slept in motels. They saw fisheries, saw mills, industries, hot springs (at Terrace), and one memorable sight, the Del Rio Ranch, a 160,000 acre farm — the largest in North America. They also visited the Peace River dam, between Prince George and Fort St. John.



Wayne said yesterday he enjoyed meeting people of B.C. the most — they are friendlier than easterners, according to him — and he still keeps up an active correspondence with some of the friends he made on the visit.

Bad News for the World

The United States expects that China will test its first atomic bomb any day now.

This is bad news for the world, the whole world, including China.

Every new nation which acquires nuclear arms increases the risk of these arms being used in a war.

The risk, however, does not grow in simple arithmetical proportion. The character of the nation joining the nuclear club, and the characters of its potential enemies, must be taken into consideration.

In the case of China, it is the political outlook of its leaders, as much as the development of the bomb, which will cause uneasiness.

The Chinese Reds have time and again taunted Khrushchev with timidity in his policies towards the United States, maintaining that he shows too much awe of American nuclear power, that the U.S. is a "paper tiger."

They have hinted they believe that in any nuclear war their weight of numbers, the colossal size of China's population, would enable it to survive.

It was good, under circumstances like these, to have the facts of modern war recalled to us by an unruffled Dean Rusk—and to be reminded these facts diminished the significance of China's development of an atomic weapon of her own.

It is not enough to possess such weapons. Means must be found to deliver them into the camp of the enemy. And there must be enough of them on hand to complete the job of destruction.

Today China lacks both the means of delivery and the ability to acquire an adequate stockpile. Her acquisition of big bombs is an immediate threat to our security, nor to the security of her other potential enemies.

That does not mean we have any reason to view the development with complacence. Given time, China will almost certainly arm herself with enough bombs and adequate means of delivery.

Some may think that there is a grave danger that Russia may consider a preventive war—for despite the ideological ties between the two countries there is little doubt but that the existence of China's vast reservoir of manpower next to the sparsely-settled Asiatic regions of the Soviet Union will eventually bring these two nations into conflict of some kind.

For the time being, paradoxically enough, their development of an atmoic bomb may induce the Chinese Reds to tread more softly. They must be aware of the temptation on both the U.S. and Russia to settle affairs with China while that can be done without exposing themselves to nuclear assault. The Chinese would have to be very rash indeed to deliberately push either of these powers, the only truly nuclear-armed nations in the world today, into the use of these weapons.

But we can no longer look forward so hopefully to the future bringing an eventual accommodation between the rival great powers. When and if the Chinese communists acquire a nuclear capacity matching that of th U.S. and Russia, the peace of the world will be very shaky, indeed.

Bull of a Different Color

The House of Commons, having but lately got rid of a problem involving a lot of bull by detouring the flag dispute to a committee, is now faced with a bull problem of a different color.

It has given second reading to a bill under which the government would guarantee loans to groups of farmers for machinery-buying purposes.

Jack Horner, Progressive Conservative member for Acadia, wanted to know what was the definition of machinery.

Could farmers get a loan to import a purebred bull to improve their strain of cattle, he asked. He argued that such a bull should be classed as farm machinery.

Agriculture Minister Hays did not reply.

Apparently nobody sought an expression of opinion from the obvious expert on this problem, a pure-bred bull.

We have a hunch that any self-respecting bull, pure-bred or not, would consider being classified as farm machinery as carrying automation a step too far, even in this day and age when computers threaten to replace people.

In my youth I thought of writing a satire on mankind; but now in my age I think I should write an apology for them.—Horace Walpole.

Ontario Liberals' Record

Hamilton Spectator

The task facing Andrew Thompson as leader of the Ontario Liberal Party is one that would daunt the bravest. The party cry is for unity, for leadership and for the sweet taste of election victory. For more than twenty years, the provincial Liberals have had little enough of the first two and none of the last.

Since then there have been seventeen provincial elections in Ontario and in only two, 1934 and 1937, have the Liberals been victorious. In 1919, although they obtained 36 members, they shared the government with the United Farmers of Ontario.

* * *

The Thirties were the years in the sun for the Ontario Liberal Party. And they owed it to one man. If, in the two terms he was premier, Mitchell Hepburn made himself at one and the same time ardently admired and intensely disliked, he did pull the party out of the wilderness in which it had been wandering—for nearly thirty years. He sold Liberalism on the hustings and he attracted to the party bright and ambitious men.

But if "Mitch" Hepburn pulled the party out of oblivion, it was also he who sowed the dragon's teeth that were to send it back whence it had come. In 1937, he declared he was not a "Mackenzie King Liberal." In those days, this was close to treason, at least in Liberal circles. King and Hepburn had not seen eye to eye on several of the fundamental issues of the day. Hepburn lacked the political canniness of King and his temperament belied his heresy by declaring publicly that he regretted having supported King in the 1935 election.

Thus opened the chasm between the provincial and the federal Liberals. In an entirely different political climate today, when provincial consciousness is developing at a rapid rate, such an issue would not have such far-reaching consequences as it had in the late Thirties. Indeed, for the provincial party to be the domaicon of the federal Liberals today might prove an embarrassment to the federal wheelhorse in Ontario.

Hepburn's damage to his party was not limited to his split with King. He quarrelled with organized labor and closing his leadership the Ontario Liberal Association withered. No convention was called for ten years.

* * *

The story of the Ontario Liberal Party after Hepburn is a sorry one of disunity, leadership swivelling and crushing defeats. In October, 1942, he resigned and chose Gordon Conant as his successor. The following May, Harry Nixon was elected leader and became premier. In the provincial election August of that year, the Progressive Conservatives carried the province with 38 seats. The CCF became the official opposition with 34 and the Liberals trailed with 16. Nixon resigned as House leader in December, 1946, and the following year Hepburn was back again as temporary leader pending a convention.

At the 1945 election the PCs swept in with 66 seats, the Liberals with 14 and the CCF with eight. So was set the postwar pattern in the Legislature. The PCs firmly in power and the Liberals, with widely varying fortunes, as the official opposition.

In the twelve years that followed, Farquhar Oliver was chosen House leader for two years and then was elected Liberal leader and twice resigned. There was an interregnum between November, 1950, and November, 1952, when Walter Thompson was Liberal leader.

* * *

Through all this period, the Liberals faced a dynamic Conservative party, first under George Drew's and then Leslie Frost's leadership. In April, 1958, when John Wintermeyer became leader, Liberal fortunes were at a low ebb. A tireless campaigner and a devout believer in the principles of his party, Mr. Wintermeyer managed to pull up its representation in the Legislature into the more respectable twenties in the two elections he fought. But when he was defeated last year, he resigned.

Now it is Mr. Thompson's turn. The air is as thick with challenges as it is with questions. The PCs are well dug in with 77 seats. It may be four years before there is another election. Will Mr. Thompson be able to unify his party and rebuild it on the ruins of the past into a formidable fighting machine? That is the biggest of all the questions.

Strictly Personal
Things Are Rarely What They Seem

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

"You must be feeling good," said a colleague who was following me by a few paces in the hall. "Why?" I turned and asked. "You're humming so happily," he said.

I wasn't aware that I was humming, although I do it all the time. As a matter of fact, I wasn't feeling especially good: th- vacation bills had just come in, tuitions had to be paid, and my throat was flirting with some seductive staphylococci.

But there I was, humming merrily through the halls. And it occurred to me that such unconscious habits often reflect the reverse of what they seem: seem is be. I hum when I'm trying to get rid of worries, not when feeling carefree.

In the strange mirror-world that Freud has bequeathed us as a legacy, we are literally that left is often right and right is often left. As W. S. Gilbert anticipated Freud by a generation: "Things are rarely what they seem. Skim milk masquerades as cream."

We know now that the "loving" parent may also be hostile to the child; that the "easy-going" man may fear and despise women and have an unconscious homosexual bias; that the "successful man" may be riddled with insecurities and a failure in his personal relations.

All these have become culture-al platitudes in our time, at least among the sophisticated. Arrogance is weakness, martyrdom is a death - wish, snobbery is an inferiority complex, inordinate gaiety is a way of warding off fears.

What has happened in this vulgarization of Freudian insight is that the conventional wisdom of the past has, in part, replaced by the topsy-turvy wisdom of the new psychology. This is not a gain in understanding — but it must be approached with caution, modesty, and considerable skepticism.

Mankind spins dizzily from one extreme of dogma to the other: and what follows a revolutionary approach soon becomes hardened and codified and just as dangerously restrictive as the beliefs it has replaced. It is the fate of every prophet to be misunderstood, and by to become, if successful, a tyrant in himself, despite himself.

It is hard to handle new knowledge delicately and tactfully. The valuable truth in Freudian insight must not be blunted by using it where it does not belong, or by trying to explain and explain too much with it. True enough, the great unsaid may not yet come up to this knowledge; but the vocal minority who live in the Freudian world are charged with a responsibility not to make excessive claims for it, or to reduce it into a parlor game for the edification of their egos. Freud never did.

Professor Is a Dreamer

Toronto Telegram

Dean H. Woods of the Faculty of Arts and Science at McGill University gave this advice to freshmen students: "Please, above all, don't fall in love."

You're absolutely right, professor, but what a dreamer you are. Reason and good sense are on your side but the ineluctable shaping of circumstances that leads to love and romance on the campus is against you.

Many a university student, caught in the love trap, has found it impossible to extricate himself for the serious business of preparing for a career, as the knowledgeable dean knows.

Tell a student that he should leave to his elders to determine whether he is ready for love and marriage and he will regard you as some misguided visitor from some other planet or century.

No citizen in the public life of Canada and Ontario had seen so much progress in the people of the nation and of the world as Sir William Mulock, who witnessed the march of development fo. generations as he moved on to the great age of 101 years. Will, the calm wisdom born of his long years he could look back upon a life worthily spent, a career of service for the Dominion and this Province and for British institutions, the like of which few can ever hope to be privileged to enjoy and to give. Good health and an active interest in life were two assets which he possessed of the greatest importance to a man who had come to know public life as he did and who looked upon it as an avenue of service to his country. He was an honor to Canada and Ontario, the pride of the land and to the Canadian people.

Prime Minister King's tribute to this great Canadian praised him as one "who through his long and vigorous and active life has been a champion of the rights of the oppressed, a lover of liberty, a champion of freedom, and one who held high the standards of right and truth and justice."

To Your Good Health
Rehabilitation Centre Helpful to Stroke Victim

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I read your article in reference to the person who had a stroke on the right side. I had one on that side a year ago.

I have my own first-floor apartment. My son took me over to his home for three weeks. I stayed in bed there for several days, but always had someone lead me into the bathroom.

My doctor told me how to exercise my arm and leg so they would not become stiff. After three weeks I entered the Rehabilitation Centre for 28 days.

They gave me physical and occupational therapy. The first thing was to strap a weight on my right hand and I had to practice writing. Then I had to punch things out of metal with my right hand. It was not easy but it loosened up my hand, although it is still a little swollen, especially in damp weather.

In physical therapy they exercised my arm and leg. They put sand bags on a cane and I had to raise it in front of me as far as I could. They had an exercicer like a bicycle to strengthen my leg.

And steps to teach you to walk up and down curbs. It is a most wonderful place. Everyone covered the payments. Otherwise it is $35 a day.

I have asthma and diabetes, one bad eye and a cataract removed from the other.

When I came home to my apartment I cooked my own meals. I have a cleaning woman once a month, do my personal wash and iron my dresses.

I never use a cane inside the house, but I use the commission to go out alone; someone goes with me. But I thought you might be interested in my report about the rehabilitation centre. I never heard of it until I was taken ill. It takes time to do things for yourself, but that is what helps you. It was seven months before I could bend my knee. I hope that other stroke patients get along as well.

This has all been written with my right hand.—Mrs. R. S.

One letter like this will probably tell you more than several articles on what is involved, these days, in helping people recover from strokes.

Most of us have acquired, over the years, a healthy fear of having a stroke and becoming "helpless." Yet if wise treatment begins at once, and patients realize how much can be done by physical and occupational therapy, amazing recovery is possible.

It is only in fairly recent years that rehabilitation centres have come into widespread use.

K.B.S. never heard about the centre where she went, until after she had fled her stroke. But see what she says about it!

They make you work. They make you try. That's part of the "secret" of their success.

In her case, insurance covered the cost. Some coverage will vary from state to state and company to company, and policy to policy, so it is always well to generalize. But if someone has a stroke in your family, do not forget this letter from K.B.S. Great things are being done.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is monosodium glutamate salt? I am not supposed to use salt in my food —M. F.

As far as you are concerned it might as well be, because it's here not listed as one that needs to be avoided in your diet. And monosodium glutamate, as the name implies, contains sodium.

Note to Mrs. R. R.: No, nasafras tea won't correct anemia.

Changing of the Red Guard

Montreal Gazette

The Old Guard of the Communist empire will soon have vanished.

Stalin himself was the first to go. Many of his associates followed. Rebellion in Poland and Hungary emptied the ranks further. Now has swept away important Communist figures like Thorez of France, Togliatti of Italy, and recently, Otto Grotewohl of East Germany.

Even amongst those who have held out, reform and reviving nationalism have brought many changes. The path marked out by Russia under Khrushchev has been followed more closely by the satellite states. It is once again possible to speak of a Poland, a Hungary and a Rumania as something more than provinces of the Soviet Union. The conquerers are slowly being absorbed by the conquered.

Also in a country like Czechoslovakia, where much of the Stalinist heritage remains, the leaders coo like doves and try to act like humanitarian progressives. In this country there is no more than Khrushchev himself has done. Once known only as more than a henchman himself has done. Once known as "the butcher of the Ukraine," the Soviet Premier is today the loudest denouncer of Stalinism.

In many of these countries there has been an actual change of personnel since the postwar Stalinist era, through death or retirement. The basic reason is simple — survival. The Communist regimes have to make their countries work, and they have to find some sort of support in the population. Terror did not succeed. It was a short - term, not a long - term answer. And it is, in any event, now going out of style in the Soviet Union itself. Almost all the Communist regimes have made reforms and appealed to the nationalism of the people as they can.

Amongst the satellites, Poland was for several years the leader in both reform and nationalism. In recent years it has tended to stagnate. Hungary is currently the leader in reform, and Rumania the leader in nationalism. Rumania has even gone to the extent of carrying out an anti - Soviet campaign, removing as far as possible the traces of Russian influence.

* * *

This process can hardly be stopped now, except by war. This certainly does not mean that these countries are becoming Western or liberal or free enterprise. It means that the emphasis is shifting from ideals. Ideal purity to practical usefulness in making these countries viable.

In Hungary under the Stalinist Rakosi, the slogan was "whoever is not with us, is against us." Kadar, the present leader, has turned this around: "whoever is not against us is with us." That is the difference between fanaticism and pragmatism.

Naturally, these regimes have not ceased to call themselves Communist. And no doubt many of the leading figures genuinely believe in Communism. But Communism as a pseudo-religion has declined. Increasingly irrelevant to the problems these regimes have to solve.

Given enough intelligence and experience, any man, whether Christian, Communist, Moslem, or Buddhist can command a steel complex. Communists who are thinking rather than dreaming can make steel complexes work efficiently, or make farms grow enough wheat to find little or more than inspiration in the books of Lenin—if they take the trouble to read them. Their job is to manage, not to spread a cause.

* * *

This change was probably inevitable once it became clear that Communism was going to be at the mercy of the world cease to be inevitable only in the event of a new attempt to spread Communism by military conquest. Then ideological purity would again be demanded.

The dying away in actual fact of so many leading figures of the Communist Old Guard—such as Grotewohl of East Germany —is only putting the final seal on the dying away of the Old Guard in spirit, power and usefulness. For in the present task of making countries like Poland, Rumania, Hungary and Russia itself function as modern states, the old hacks have nothing to offer—unless, like Khrushchev, they learn how to change and adapt.

Businessman Draws $50 Fine

A Belleville businessman was fined $50 this morning, for failing to have up-to-date unemployment insurance books for two of his employees.

Donald G. Kleinsteuber, an excavating contractor, was warned by magistrate T. Y. Wills that another such offence may be much more expensive.

R. A. Moon of the Unemployment Insurance Commission testified that during an audit of Kleinsteuber's books July 10 he found the books were missing. He told the court that while Kleinsteuber had been deducting the employees' share of the unemployment insurance premiums from their pay, he had not purchased the unemployment insurance stamps, and without the books would be unable to keep the employees' insurance up to date. He told the court that the law demands that stamps be purchased and placed in the books within three days of each payday. He said Kleinsteuber had been convicted of a similar offence before, under a different section of the code.

Kleinsteuber argued that keeping the books up to date was the duty of his part-time bookkeeper. He said he had been out of town at the time the offence was committed.

After passing sentence, the magistrate told Kleinsteuber that the money deducted from an employees' pay was held in trust, and that employers had a duty to buy the stamps immediately.

He set fine at $25 for each of the two missing books.

Hastings, Prince Ed. Regt. Marks Command Change And 'Laying-up of Colors'

The year 1964 will go down in the archives of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment as the "Year of the Milestones".

Last May the regiment was officially presented with the new Queen's and regimental colors.

Tomorrow the unit will mark the "Laying Up of Colors" and the regimental change-of-command ceremonies.

The depositing of the colors, or "laying-up" as it is termed, takes place at the Anglican St. Mary Magdalen Church in Picton where officers and color party will formally request the rector to receive them for safekeeping.

LT.-COL J. B. BLACK

There will be a church service and the colors placed in the chancel. Thirty years ago they were presented by Lieut. General Sir Archibald McDonell and consecrated by the then Bishop of Ontario, the Rt. Rev. John Lyons.

At 2:30 p.m., Lieut. Col. J. B. Black, will formally hand over the command of the regiment to his successor Lieut. Colonel K. D. H. Willcocks at a special parade at the Shopping Plaza east of the city.

LT.-COL K. D. H. WILLCOCKS

The inspecting officer for the parade will be Brigadier M. E. Clarke, ED commander 13 Militia Group, Peterborough. The salute will be followed by the inspection and regimental march - past.

The climax comes when Col. Black bids his farewell to the regiment he has served efficiently for the past 25 years. Then comes the introduction of the new commanding officer by the brigadier.

Following the final march-past which will pay tribute to Col. Black the regiment will exercise its new freedom of the city presented to it last May by Mayor Jack Ellis.

With bayonets fixed, drums beating and colors flying the regiment will march the length of Bridge St. to the armouries for dismissal.

Only the officers and escort of the old colors will travel to Picton for the "laying-up" ceremonies and service.

The regiment will concentrate at the Bridge St. East Plaza at 8:45 a.m. with a practice for the change of command parade scheduled for 9-10:15.

Receptions will be held in the officers and sergeants' messes with refreshment served in the men's canteen.

Many out-of-town military and municipal officials as well as Mayor Jack Ellis and city dignitaries will attend the functions.

FIRST FEATHER FINDER — Carl McFarlane, 16, a grade 11A student at BCI and VS is shown above receiving two tickets to the Dave Clarke Five Show in Toronto from United Appeal executive manager L. Gnaedinger. Carl was the first student to arrive at the Kiwanis Centre with a red feather after they were dropped by Mayor Jack Ellis from an aircraft yesterday afternoon.

'Red Feather' Touch Won Boy Tickets to Music Show

A red feather that dropped on his head yesterday won Carl McFarlane of Foster Ave. two tickets to a Toronto music show. Carl told Belleville United Appeal officials he had been watching a football game during the afternoon, and was crossing the schoolyard at Queen Alexandra School when Mayor Jack Ellis flew over in a light plane, dropping feathers for a Belleville United Appeal promotion. He wasn't watching the plane, but when one of the feathers landed on his head, he was just a short dash from the Belleville United Appeal office. He arrived at the office seconds ahead of four other high school students, who had found feathers along Dundas Street. For being the first to return one of the feathers to the office, he won the tickets offered as a prize by radio station C.J.B.Q.

Four thousand of the feathers were dropped yesterday the first day of the United Appeal campaign in Belleville. Supplied by the United Appeal office, the feathers were dropped from a plane supplied by Prince Edward Flying Club and flown by Mayor Jack Ellis. Prince Edward Flying Club operator Murray Clapp, also in the plane, dropped the feathers.

The plane's progress over the city was radioed direct to radio station C.J.B.Q. and rebroadcast by the radio station to thousands of listeners in the city. Thousands of students looked for the feathers, hundreds found them, and dozens brought feathers to the United Appeal office.

Drop Probe Of Treatment Given Pacifists

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister Hellyer said Thursday the government has decided against further investigation into complaints by demonstrators of rough handling by RCAF personnel at the La Macaza, Que., Bomarc base on Labor Day.

Mr. Hellyer told the Commons the "useful purpose" would be served by a further investigation and Prime Minister Pearson had agreed with this decision.

He said that since New Democratic Party Leader Douglas first raised the issue in the Commons, Associate Defence Minister Lucien Cardin had interviewed the base commander Wing Cmdr. A. A. Russell.

Mr. Cardin was told all personnel had been instructed to use "minimum force" to remove demonstrators blocking base entrances in protest against the stationing of nuclear - armed BOMARC missiles there, Mr. Hellyer added.

He said the defence department has received no complaints, and no reports of complaints or reports of injuries at the time of the demonstration.

WENT LIMP

The defence minister said the demonstrators deliberately tried to provoke an incident and when RCAF personnel tried to remove them from the entrances they "went limp."

In an adjournment debate, NDP Leader T. C. Douglas said Mr. Hellyer's statement was completely unsatisfactory and a "travesty."

He called for an independent, objective inquiry by a judge into the complaints of RCAF brutality.

RCAF police should be trained to avoid violence and the government should give an assurance to the Commons that the Labor Day incidents will not be repeated.

Mr. Douglas said Canada will take a step on the slippery road toward a police state if it allows policemen to decide whether they can resort to violence against pacifists.

Man Abducted, Then Released, Said Terrorist

PRETORIA (AP) — White teacher Dennis Higgs, recently abducted to South Africa from Bechuanaland, was released today as being partly responsible for the Johannesburg railway station bomb blast in which an elderly white woman was fatally wounded and several others injured.

The allegation against Higgs, who now is in Britain, was made in an indictment against five white men who appeared in Pretoria Supreme Court on 24 charges of sabotage involving illegal possession of explosives and use of time bombs.

The indictment charges that Higgs and others unknown to the prosecution prepared timing devices from cooking timers, alarm clocks and pocket watches, to be used for detonating explosives.

Higgs was also specifically mentioned in connection with preparing explosives to blow up power masts and a railway signal cabin.

Higgs was held briefly by South African police after his abduction from Northern Rhodesia. He was released after representations by the British government and is currently in Britain with his Negro wife and children.

South African Premier Hendrik Verwoerd has insisted that his government still wants Higgs extradited to stand trial here on charges relating to the station bomb explosion.

Low Bank Pay Is Criticized In Theft Case

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP)—A former Royal Bank of Canada branch manager Thursday was sentenced to three years in the theft after the Crown attorney criticized low bank salaries as being partly responsible.

Crown Counsel William D. Maclaine said in his address that "to some extent begging for his own misfortune" by paying the manager an annual salary of only $3,600 a year and expecting him to mingle with customers earning $10,000 and more.

Streetsville residents have started up a collection to help MacPherson make restitution.

King Saud's Lost Jewelry Recovered

CUENO, Italy (AP) — Police reported today they have recovered many hundred thousand dollars worth of jewelry lost last year in the crash of Saudi Arabian King Saud's jetliner along the Alpine border between France and Italy.

Police said they stopped two youths and a man in the turin railway station Thursday, found part of the jewels on them and recovered the rest from their homes in Cuneo.

The jewelry included 100 diamonds, 230 white and colored semi-precious stones, two gold bracelets, a diamond - studded armband and two jeweled gold wristwatches. Police said it was of "immense value."

The jewels were found in the possession of Pietro Giacchi, 18; Marco Marchisio, 17, and Guido Gosso, 57. One of them told the police:

"We found the jewels while mountain climbing this summer and we thought we could keep them. We did not know of any obligation to turn them over to the authorities."

Police arrested Giacchi. The other two were released.

The Saudi Arabian king's Comet IV crashed March 20, 1963, on a 10,000-foot rock wall in the mountains.

Bell Telephone Private Bill Is Blockaded

OTTAWA (CP) — A routine private bill sought by the Bell Telephone Company of Canada has run into a determined blockade in the Commons that could continue until the end of the session.

The bill, which simply would add five directors to Bell's present 15-member board, was talked out again Thursday in the single hour set aside each week for private bills.

The blockade leader, Arnold Peters (NDP — Timiskaming), told a reporter outside the House later his group will keep the debate going "for a while." He indicated the "while" will last several weeks.

Bell has been attacked by some members of all parties, particularly , New Democrats and Creditistes, for allegedly abusing its monopoly position in the rich Quebec-Ontario urban market.

The bill has been bottled up in the Commons since mid-June and NDP members say Thursday it would be wrong to pass it before the board of transport commissioners for Canada holds hearings on Bell's whole financial operations and rates.

NO DATE SET

No dates have been set for the hearings, but board officials expect they will open in January.

Mr. Peters said in Thursday's debate the Quebec government is actively studying the possibility of taking over Bell's Quebec operations and setting up a small telephone companies that operate in rural areas of the province.

Bell might stave off this nationalisation by accepting his amendment to the private bill, he said.

Mr. Peters' amendment would authorize the directors of Bell to name three directors to Bell's board to protect the public interest.

He said Bell rates are "far too high," double those of small companies in the Maritimes. The company was "a pretty vicious monopoly" that dealt arbitrarily with its captive subscribers and ignored their complaints.

The bill's sponsor, James Brown (L — Brantford) said the Peters amendment would constitute an infringement of property rights, which was a field of provincial jurisdiction in any event.

It was a "wholly unwarranted intrusion by the private business of some of her majesty's subjects." All shares in the company were in private hands and the government had no right to interfere with the management of the company.

Would Stop Heckling of 'Long Hairs'

LONDON (AP)—Anthony Chenevix-Trench, headmaster of Eton school, the incubator of many prime ministers, says adults should stop heckling boys who wear their hair so long they look like girls.

"Not all long-haired men are effeminate," Chenevix-Trench told a conference of teachers Thursday. "Teachers should not make hair changes in fashion just because they dislike them."

He added that boys must not weaken our position by petulant reactions against mere changes in fashion that happen to offend our prejudices."

Rhodesian Government Ups Majority

From Reuter-AP

SALISBURY (CP) — Prime Minister Ian Smith's white ruled government in Southern Rhodesia has increased its parliamentary majority to nine seats in by-elections that spelled a decisive defeat for former prime minister Sir Roy Welensky.

Smith hailed the outcome of the two by-elections his party won in Thursday's vote as a vote of confidence for his plan to get independence from Britain. Welensky's United Federal minority still has the upper hand.

"This day a new Rhodesia has been born," Smith told a cheering crowd.

Welensky, former prime minister of the now-defunct Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland, was beaten by Deputy Prime Minister Clifford Dupont by a vote of 1,079 to 1,042.

White voters predominated in both contests since most Negroes don't have the vote.

PREVIOUSLY OPPOSITION

The Smith party has been won comfortably by the opposition in the previous election. About 80 per cent of the voters went to the polls.

Welensky would have preferred Britain to grant independence to his Party if elected. The two elections were regarded as tests of public support for Smith's determination to win independence for Southern Rhodesia under the present constitution.

The constitution has given most of the votes to white Rhodesians, although Negroes by a about 15 times as numerous.

Political observers were astonished at the size of the government majorities, particularly in view of Welensky's personal popularity.

Smith's major problem now is to win the support of Negroes on the independence issue despite lack of voting power.

Says Minister Discussed Police Probe Possibility

CHATHAM (CP) — A woman witness says Rev. Russell D. Hordorph had discussed the possibility of a police investigation against himself as long ago as last April.

The 65 - year - old pastor of Park Street United Church has denied not guilty to eight charges of contributing to juvenile delinquency.

The defence witness, under cross-examination by Crown attorney Blake Ward, said that at the time she spoke about it on the telephone to Mr. Hjersburg they knew that "this fuss was coming up" and that the police had started their investigation.

Mr. Ward asked the woman if she was telling him that the police investigation was going on at that time? The starting date of the police inquiry has not been disclosed at the trial.

"Well, Mr. Horsburgh knew something was going on," she said. "He told me that questions were being asked."

A 17-year-old girl also admitted to Mr. Ward he had been shocked at a Sunday night party in the Chatham district when a girl, fastening her open blouse, emerged from a room with a young man.

HEARD RUMORS

The grade 10 student said he had heard "rumors" about what had been going on at the apartment party but had not believed until he arrived that night. Earlier he admitted giving a statement to Inspector Ellis in which said he had never seen anything improper happen at the party.

A school teacher, and parttime chaperon at the church's Friday night socials, said that he had never heard Mr Horsburgh discuss sex with teenagers in his office or use coarse language of any kind.

He said that on one occasion he found a couple kissing in the parlor of the church, but after he knocked on the door key from Mr. Horsburgh came the answer there was no place around the church to "neck" in private.

Another 17-year-old who testified Thursday said Mr. Horsburgh did not overemphasize premarital sex in a lecture series he gave on sex and morals. The youth said that the lectures by Mr. agers who caused trouble at the dances were members of a small group who called themselves "Hoodlums."

A man who said he had been a member of the Park Street Church for 15 years said he had never heard of factions in the church—one which opposed Mr. Horsburgh and one which favored him—as earlier witnesses had indicated.

In a sidelight to Thursday's proceedings, Mr. Horsburgh officiated at a wedding during the noon recess of the trial. He married Jack Kusch, a Chatham radio reporter, and Ann Zeidler at the Park Street Church.

Goldwater Launches New Johnson Attack

CAIRO, Ill. (AP) — Senator Barry Goldwater took his whistle-stopping trail into Illinois today with a fresh assault on President Johnson as a "Lyndon-come-lately," fist discovering a disarray in U.S. alliances.

The Republican presidential nominee, proclaiming himself a man of "peace through strength," criticized Johnson's announced intention to visit Europe after the November election to confer with heads of North Atlantic Treaty Organization states about mutual defence problems.

"I have news for Lyndon-come-lately," Goldwater said in remarks prepared for a Cairo, Ill., audience. "There is one thing that can be done to help NATO. Elect a president of the United States who believes in NATO — and reject the president who didn't even act at Nassau to keep the alliance until Republicans forced him to act differently."

He charged the president "has to wait for the latest poll to tell him what to do and what the next step ought to be."

Fighting hard to rub out the "trigger - happy" label Democrats have tried to hang on him, the Republican presidential nominee pounded away on it there and elsewhere. Democratic presidents have always occupied the White House in the 20th century when the country was involved in war.

Pronouncing Johnson "dead-wrong" if he believes "peace will prevail if we are nice to the Communists," Goldwater said he and Republican Representative William E. Miller, "certainly are men of peace." He added they would "never intentionally start an atomic war."

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

Mr. Donald Irish of Oak Lake, is a patient in Belleville General Hospital.

Mrs. W. Whalen, Doris and Bill and Mrs. Harry Hawkshaw were in Toronto on Thursday where they attended the funeral of Mrs. George Brown.

Registrations Set Record At Convention

Over 100 delegates, visitors and members set a record attendance at Ontario Provincial Convention meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliaries ANAFVC held in Belleville last Saturday.

As Comrade President Elizabeth Buckley, No. 49 was also an officer of Provincial Command, Comrade Gladys Fitzgerald, 1st vice-president, assumed the presidential duties of opening the meeting and extending sincere greetings to all assembled. Sgt. at Arms presented the Provincial Commander executive to the dias, and President Comrade Toni Rochefort conducted further business. Two distinguished guests were present, Comrade Jack Boyle, president of No. 201 Belleville graciously welcomed the visiting auxiliaries and trusted the outcome of the day's deliberations would be satisfactory. Comrade J. C. Lundberg, president of Provincial Command of A.N.A.F.V.C., a well known figure of activity was introduced. Comrade J.C. Lundberg, honorable credits administered by the Veterans' Organizations of countries other than his own.

NEW CONSTITUTION

Numerous subjects were discussed with satisfactory views and opinions voiced. Each auxiliary having a delegate present was entitled to the privilege of putting forward or discarding subjects not clearly understood concerning the constitution, or anything for the maintainment, so with the expectations of a new and revised constitution and by-laws. It is hoped these will clarify all questionable clauses.

One of the subjects given much thought and consideration was of the many ways the Units and Auxiliaries have of being instrumental in giving assistance without the least intention of being proclaimed, however it now advised that this information and report of each Auxiliary will in the future submit a statement of this to the Secretary, ANAFVC in Ottawa for compiling purposes.

With the conclusion of business nominations and election of officers for the ensuing two years took place as follows:

Elected were as follows:

President, Mary Rogers, Lansdown No. 34, Toronto; past president, Toni Rochefort, Lakeview No. 62, Toronto; 1st vice-president, E. Smith, Colchester No. 306; 2nd vice-president, A. Fenwick, London No. 229; secretary, Mrs. Cook, Fairbanks No. 82, Toronto; treasurer, M. Goodwin, Ottawa No. 72.

With-the elected officers duly installed the meeting was open for new business. The next meeting will be held in London, Ontario, the guests of No. 229 Auxiliary, Jan. 30th, 1965.

During the recess period draws were conducted and each recipient was elated with her luck. At the conclusion of the meeting tables were set up for an inviting and appetizing dinner which was arranged by the entertainment committee chairman and her assistants Following dinner an hilarious chit was enacted with Jack Fitzgerald doing his version of "It's in the Book." The accompanying group lent much to humor involved and with fun and laughter drawing such a fine day to a close, Belleville will be on the lips of many for months to come.

During the dance period many valuable prizes were presented to the winners and the Auxiliary is grateful to all donors.

GREGORY BUTLER

CARS Presents Gregory Butler In Recital

Belleville's own concert pianist, Gregory Butler, will be appearing in a recital at the Collegiate auditorium on Wednesday evening under the sponsorship of the Women's Auxiliary of the Canadian Artrists and Rheumatism Society.

Gregory Butler is son of Mr. and Mrs. Ormonde E. Butler, and was born in Belleville and received his education here. His musical education was with Mona Bates, Toronto, and at the Eastman School of Music in Rochester. He and his sister Cara, now Mrs. Robert Carson Allen, Toronto, gave duo recitals for some years, but now Gregory is doing solo appearances.

WON COMPETITION

Mr. Butler was chosen to appear as soloist in the four Western provinces after winning the Eastern Canada competition of the Young Artist Series sponsored by the Federation of Music Teachers' Association of Canada.

Music critics were unanimous in acclaiming him a front rank performer with a maturity of interpretation, fresh and meaningful with consistently thoughtful approaches, free from all self-conscious display.

Belleville has produced a young pianist who has added lustre to the name of the city, and to its musical horizons of the future.

PROVIDES SERVICES

The Women's Auxiliary of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism society, Belleville branch who are sponsoring the concert provides volunteer services by driving severely disabled persons to the treatment centre; visiting homebound patients to bring outside contacts to them; organizing outings, shopping trips, teas, Arthritis parties and movie parties. They also encourage patients to develop skills by giving instruction in handwork.

Self - help equipment is provided including devices such as braces, wheel chairs, crutches, long - handled shoe horns and combs and plastic shoe laces. Homemaker services are provided for patients in special need.

LOAN CUPBOARD

The Belleville Auxiliary maintains a loan cupboard of glider chairs, walkers, exercise bicycles, intra - red lamps which are loaned for periods of three months or more on the recommendation of the patient's doctor.

The Auxiliary supplies volunteers to help the physiotherapist at the treatment centre operated by CARS twice a week at the Belleville General Hospital.

In cases where the patient was unable to buy orthopedic shoes these have been purchased. Sometimes where the bread earner was arthritic and unable to work, groceries have been supplied to the family. While the routine check was made by the Welfare Department the Auxiliary filled the gap until the family could receive welfare from the municipality.

The Auxiliary promotes educational programs, and supplements and enhances the Society's treatment.

MR. AND MRS. MICHAEL JOHN FOXON

Foxon – Parks

Cooper United Church was the scene of an autumn wedding when Gloria Ann Parks, daughter of Mrs. Arthur Parks, Cooper, Ont., and the late Mr. Arthur Parks, became the bride of Michael John Foxon, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Foxon, Belleville, Ont.

Rev. George Ambury, Redperville, was the officiating minister for the double-ring ceremony, before a background of white gladioli, rose zinnias, and baskets of rose and white asters.

Tall white candles in candelabra adorned the altar.

White satin bows centred with rose flowers and sprigs of fern graced the pulpit pews.

The wedding hymns were played by the church pianist, Mrs. Fred Baltley, who also accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Hamilton in their vocal renditions.

Given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Mr. Glen Watson, the bride wore an original sheath gown of white peau-de-soie with flowing chapel train and long lily-point sleeves.

Appliques of re-embroidered French lace with sequins and pearls outlined the front and the scooped neckline.

Her four-tiered scalloped shoulder-length veil was centred with a circlet rose of silk organza and she carried a white Bible crested with rose shaded sensation roses, with buds knotted in trailing streamers.

Miss Nancy Reynolds, cousin of the bride, was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Elizabeth Rollins, cousin of the bride, and Miss Myra Moorcroft. They were similarly attired in floor-length gowns of fiesta rose of crushed tulle.

The fitted bodices had scooped necklines and three-quarter-length scalloped sleeves. Double pleated panels were attached to the necklines by tiny bows. Their headpieces of fiesta rose organza were circlet roses with semi-short veils. Each carried a classic bouquet of triple white chrysanthemums.

Miss Heather Parks, cousin of the bride was flower girl, gowned in a white nylon dress with bouffant skirt the lace edged collar extended to the waist with velvet roses attaching the sash. She wore a white frilled hat of nylon trimmed with rose velvet flowers and carried a basket bracket of rose - lined baby 'mums.

The cake was topped with a miniature bride and bridegroom and misted at the base with white tulle and rosebuds. Rose candles in silver candelabra and the flowers of the bridal party added to the nuptial setting.

The bride's mother received the guests wearing a navy corded shantung dress and jacket with navy and white accessories and corsage of pink feathered carnations.

For their wedding trip to Niagara Falls and other points, the bride chose a two-piece suit of Dior blue boucle with Paris pink accessories and a corsage of pink feathered carnations.

Guests were present from Oshawa, Peterboro, Cobourg, Ottawa, Napanee, Redpperville, Trenton, Belleville, Wallbridge, Northbrook and Foxboro.

Previous to her marriage the bride was honored at a miscellaneous shower at the home of Mrs. William Mallory which was attended by the staff of the Department of Psychology, Belleville General Hospital, where the bride is employed.

A miscellaneous shower was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Moorcroft and Myra.

The bridegroom was given a presentation by his co-workers at Morch Manufacturing. A party and presentation of a coffee table and cushion was given by Cooper and Remington communities.

Ann Landers

'Motel Entertainment' Not Appropriate Choice

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I know this doesn't sound very good, but the only way I can get straight advice is to tell you the whole truth, so I will.

My boss, who is an important executive, is separated but not divorced. He has taken an interest in me and wants to get to know me better. We can't talk in the office for obvious reasons. He says it would be damaging to my reputation if I were seen in public with him since he is still married. Last week he suggested we have dinner in a small motel outside the city limits and just talk. I agreed.

We have gone to this motel twice. You may my word nothing out of the way has happened. I think it is wonderful of him to be so considerate of my reputation but I feel uncomfortable checking into a motel with a man, even though I know in my heart I am not doing anything wrong.

I am reluctant to tell him "no more motel" because he may stop seeing me and I've grown fond of him. I need your help. — DOLLY.

* * *

HELLO DOLLY — I have often wondered what happened to Sir Galahad. Now I know. You've got him. How lucky can one girl get! It's not every man who will invest in a motel room to protect a girl's reputation.

Naturally everyone in the world is blind so no one sees you go into the motel or leave. His car, of course, is invisible, so no one sees that either.

Now it's your turn to be considerate of him. Tell him you are concerned about HIS reputation and that after-hours friendship is off until he is free.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My husband's sister has been married to a loafer for 19 years.

He will not try to get a steady job and every few months he walks out and moves in with his mother. She has been going on for years but today was the last straw. He left his family with no food and no electricity.

I want to call the relief department and get help for the children. My sister-in-law doesn't want the "disgrace" of being on welfare. Would I be justified in calling them anyway?

We have a family of our own and can't support their family too. But the sight of those children makes me sick. — CONCERNED.

* * *

DEAR CONCERNED — Don't call the welfare agency over the objections of your husband's sister. Try to persuade her to ask for help. And talk to your brother-in-law, too. Let him know there is a law which says a man must support his family.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I will be 13 years old soon. I act older and am considered mature. My sister, who will be 16 next month, is very jealous of me because I am prettier than she is.

My sister gets to have a boy-girl party on her 16th birthday. I am allowed to say hello to the guests and stay in the living room with them for 30 minutes. Then I have to go to my room.

Isn't this the meanest thing you ever heard in your whole life? I am sure my sister is afraid I will take some attention away from her. Please be on my side. — MISS PERSECUTED.

* * *

DEAR MISS — A 12-year-old does not belong at a party for 16-year-olds, even though she considereds herself mature.

Being an older sister means added responsibilities and extra privileges. Your mother has shown good judgment.

When you are 16 and have a boy-girl party you won't want any 12-year-olds present. Then I'll be on your side.

* * *

ANN LANDERS' booklet, "How To Be Date Bait," gives sound and solid rules for teen-age dating. To receive a copy, enclose with your request 25c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

LETTER:

I hesitate about sending you recipe because yours are all so good — fee. it is sort of carrying coals to Newcastle, but thought that if you did not have too one for Breakfast Buns you might like to try them. The time element involved makes them handy for a breakfast or a luncheon . . . Ida B.

BREAKFAST BUNS (courtesy Ida B.):

About 6:30 or 7 p.m. soak 1 package granular yeast in ¼ cup warm water 30 minutes. In a large mixing bowl put 2 eggs, ⅔ cup sugar, 1 teaspoon salt and ¼ cup cooking oil. Beat well with electric mixer or egg beater. Add 2 cups cold (see Emem note below) water and 2 cups unsifted flour. Beat to mix. Add yeast liquid and beat again very well. Gradually add 6 more cups unsifted flour, using beater as long as possible and then spoon finally turning out on board and kneading with hands. Let rise 3 to 4 hours' in greased bowl. Shape into buns and put in greased muffin tins or on greased cookie sheets. Make rather small as they rise considerably. (Should be about 42 to 48 buns.) Let rise overnight and bake first thing in the morning for about 15 minutes at 225 deg. Fahr. I usually save a couple of muffin tins and a large cookie sheet so I bake those on the coolest shelf first.

ANSWER:

I tried them and they were excellent. I changed the timing a little and substituted 3 cups whole wheat flour for 2 cups of the white flour. I also used 2 cups warm water instead of 2 cups cold water. Ida B. says to let rise 3 or 5 hours. This I took to mean 3 hours and I was amazing buns at 11:00 p.m. So instead, I let the dough rise in the beater bowl, covered, overnight, in my cool kitchen and went to bed. In the morning I shaped the buns, and put them in the refrigerator to delay rising. Three hours before suppertime I took them out of the refrigerator to rise until they were more than doubled and baked them 20 minutes at 350 deg. Fahr. — a little longer and in a hotter oven than Ida B. specified.

They were a sensation at a backyard barbecue supper, but how can you miss when you serve yeast rolls hot from the oven, dripping with butter?

Thank you, Ida B.

Women of India Becoming Powerful Political Force

By RUKMINI DEVI
Canadian Press Correspondent

BOMBAY (CP)—The women of India are emerging as a powerful force in the politics of the country.

It no longer is true to say of them that they are disinterested in politics, totally obedient to their husbands and coy in the presence of men.

Indian opposition parties are attaching more importance to the participation of women in anti - government rallies and processions. Some parties have organized special women's branches.

Of the 18,000 Communists arrested recently during a "passive resistance" campaign to bring down food prices, as many as 3,000 were women.

The Democratic Socialists have started a drive to enlist feminine support. The party has 200 full-time women workers in Bombay alone.

WOMEN DEMONSTRATE

The right - wing Hindu Jana Sangh claims it can throw between 3,000 and 10,000 New Delhi women into agitations any time it wants. To demonstrate this, the Jana Sangh recently kept up a seven-day round-the-clock hunger strike by some 200 housewives outside the residence of Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri.

Armed with broomsticks, Calcutta's women recently surrounded municipal officials, demanding better sanitary services.

Not to be left behind, the ruling Congress party is making a major effort to streamline its women's branch. It has initiated plans for recruiting 20,000 women workers to counter Communist and Socialist anti-government propaganda.

Indian political parties think women are valuable as agitators for more than one reason.

A Communist politician here said women demonstrators are "more disciplined." A Hindu Jana Sangh leader thought that "women understand basic political issues better than the average male."

Congress party members feel, however, that the opposition groups are recruiting women because the deployment of women in demonstrations has greater publicity value.

FLY BY SCRUBBING

EDMONTON (CP)—A former test pilot who scrubbed tearoom floors to pay for flying lessons now is Edmonton's only woman flying instructor. Vera Dowling, 46, tested reconditioned planes in England during the Second World War. For two post-war years she was one of the world's few women bush pilots, ferrying supplies into Sweden's northern logging camps.

Nine U.C.W. Groups Enjoy Dessert Tea

Scott's United Church Women held a successful dessert tea in the church and hall on September 30. Nearly 90 ladies were present from nine societies.

Mrs. Maurice Dafoe after words of greeting opened the program with a short worship service. Mrs. Ross Dafoe presided at the piano. The visitors provided the following program: solo from Marsh Hill U.C.W. by Mrs. David Lisle; reading from Aikens and Zion by Mrs. P. Hamilton and Mrs. Chase; solo from Centenary by Mrs. Sutherland and a trio from White's by Meadowes Bilham, Albert Jones, Eric Jones.

GUEST SPEAKER

Mrs. Cameron Sine introduced the guest speaker, the vice-president for West Hastings, Mrs. Sine. In part she said, "In our new curriculum we believe the Bible is still the word of God. We are trying to approach its study in a new way to bring about a closer unity and a clearer perspective of what God has done for us, and what God expects of us. We learn this through the history of the Israelites, their temptations, their falls and returns; the laws and the prophets, the poetry, the hymns and the symbols; and then the climax, the coming to earth, God in the form of man, Jesus Christ. God has prepared our way of return to Him, all we have to do is accept it."

The dining hall was a sea of color. Each table had its decoration of colored fall flowers on a white cloth. The visiting ladies helped themselves to desserts and were served tea or coffee. A happy social hour was spent, many reunions were made and everyone felt that it was an afternoon well worthwhile from many standpoints.

STUDIES FAMILIES

MONTREAL (CP) — Professor William Westley of McGill University has completed a five-year study of a healthy family, but his own family was "not much help at all." Mrs. Westley, an international relations graduate, said she had tired with the study for five years . . . but none of us ever became involved in it."

Successful Living

Gambling Is a Symptom Of Deep Frustrations

DEAR DORIS — My husband plays poker and loses money. We could use that money as we have four little kids. I would like to know how I could stop him. I nag of course but that doesn't help.

I tried involving the police; I even tried to leave him and that didn't work. He didn't play before we were married. He started after my brother took him over there and after that, believe me, he knew the way — STYMIED.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR STYMIED — Gambling can be just as bad a disease as alcoholism. A man gambles for hope of magic, unearned rewards; an answer to frustrations.

Get him to add up the bills; get him to share the planning. When he sees where the money goes — and doesn't go — he may revise his priorities. And how about filling up some of his spare time with fun and games in your own living room, with mutual friends?

* * *

DEAR DORIS — Several times this summer we caught our five-and-six-year-olds and their friends (boys and girls) from different families with their pants down looking at each other and showing off.

We talked to them. One mother spanked her child for it. I kept mine in our yard for two days, but this morning they had another two-year-old boy involved in their little game.

If you have any suggestions on how to stop this, please let us know. We don't want to make a big issue out of it or make a body sound dirty, but it has to stop somehow. — STUMBLING MOTHERS.

DEAR MOTHERS — Childish curiosity about the anatomy is normal; as the psychologists see it, we are the queer ones with our social taboos. Brothers and sisters are lucky because such curiosity can be satisfied without any guilt feelings.

Each mother ought to take her child home, explain that we don't think it polite for people to uncover themselves, and that she will be glad to answer any questions, at any time.

And let it go at that. No spankings.

DEAR DORIS — My husband is teaching me how to drive the car. Believe me, what a difficult task that is! He gets very angry, snaps at me every time. He doesn't express his thoughts and expects me to do what he is thinking. In two minutes he says, "What are you mad about? I was only telling you in a nice way." He says that a person should learn how to drive a car just by watching him when he drives.

I have had few opportunities to drive and I am trying my best. What am I going to do? — AT WIT'S END AND DESPERATE.

DEAR WIT'S END — Rule Number One: Husbands should not teach wives to drive cars.

Rule Number Two: Teachers should not become angry. It only frightens the pupil and makes it impossible to concentrate.

Rule Number Three: A good teacher does not expect a pupil to do what the teacher is thinking. Few are mind readers.

Take your lessons from a driving school and save some hurt feelings. And here's a desirable plus value: If someone else teaches you, your husband will not get the idea he has to instruct you in driving from now on for the rest of your life.

ST. ANDREW'S PRESBYTERIAN WOMEN'S GUILD

A potluck supper opened the fall meeting of St. Andrew's Women's Guild with a good attendance. Grace was said by Rev. L. Sutherland.

Following the supper a brief business meeting was conducted by the president, Mrs. G. Durno. A minute's silence was observed in memory of Mrs. Gordon Robertson, a former president of the Guild.

The treasurer, Mrs. H. Elvidge, gave a satisfactory report of the various groups' givings for the past three months. Several items of business were discussed regarding banquets, weddings in the near future, also a discussion on adequate parking around the church.

Mrs. H. MacKay gave a brief report on the fall bazaar scheduled for late in November, committees to be named at the next regular meeting.

The ladies were reminded to keep saving labels for the Golden Book of Charity, and meeting closed with a lively sing-song with Miss Kathleen McCullough at the piano.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

WHAT'S YOUR E. Q.?

It's fun to renew auld acquaintances. But when you reminisce with an old friend, especially in front of others, are you tactful about what you dredge up out of the past? For instance, do you refrain from:

1. Mention of old flames, especially when the husband or wife of the long-lost friend is all ears?

2. Bringing up an old nickname your friend once was known by but would rather forget?

3. Recalling how much thinner he or she used to be 30 years ago?

4. Asking if said friend still has some "amusing" habit like drinking a glass of water while standing on his head?

5. Recalling past indiscretions or mistakes he'd rather you didn't?

7. Dwelling on "funny" incident that only make "old buddy" look foolish in the telling?

8. Asking what happened to that wonderful crop of hair he used to be famous for?

8. Telling about how you came to the rescue with a blind date when blushing Bessie here was stood up the night of the school dance?

10. In short, telling tales out of school that put an old friend in an embarrassing new light in front of his friends and family?

Sunday School Lesson
Pastor Writes to Pastors

By CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

On one of his travels, the late Dr. Jesse Bader was surprised to see a church with a sign over its door that read, "The Church is the Way." Many people today feel that this is what many churches have become. Instead of providing the drive that sends people out to love and serve, too many churches seem to stand in the way of a courageous challenge to the social and moral ills of our day.

Whether a church is a dynamic force in its community and world depends largely on its pastoral and lay leadership. This has always been true, and this is why the pastoral epistles of the New Testament are so important, for they are letters of a great religious leader to pastors, and deal primarily with the pastoral function of church leaders.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for October 4: "The Pastoral Epistles." I Timothy 1:1-11; II Timothy, 1:1-2; Titus 1:1a, 4.

Almost every church wants to consider itself a New Testament church. Many churches pride themselves on following the New Testament pattern. But what were New Testament churches like? This is not always easy to determine. They were groups of people drawn together by a common faith in Christ. But there was not one set pattern to which all churches had to conform. The situation was too fluid. The tides of the Spirit were still running strong. There was no stifling conformity. Instead there was variety. Organizations developed to meet specific needs. The unity of the churches resided in their common faith in Christ as Lord and Savior.

Nevertheless, certain guidelines began to emerge. There had to be some organization and delegation of responsibility. What kinds of leaders did the churches develop, and what were their functions and duties?

One of the best places to look for answers to these questions is in the "pastoral letters", so-called because they were written by a pastor to pastors. Not like other letters in the New Testament, these were not written to churches, but to individuals concerning the oversight of the churches.

PAUL OR "PAUL"?

One problem concerning these letters is whether they were written by Paul himself to two of his converts and fellow-workers, or whether they were written at a later date by someone who used these names as attention-getters, and to win a wider acceptance for his message. Those who contend for Paul's authorship point to many personal references. It would be difficult for a later writer to make. Those who argue for a later authorship claim that parts of these letters deal with conditions in the churches that did not develop until the second century.

Whether they were written by Paul to his proteges, or by a later writer to church leaders in general, they deal with certain great issues: the responsibilities of church leaders, the teaching of sound doctrine, the combatting of heresies, and above all, the examples required of Christian leaders.

Concerning church leaders, several kinds are mentioned. They include bishops (I Timothy 3:27; Titus 1:7-9), elders (I Timothy 5:17-22), and deacons (I Timothy 3:8-13). Unfortunately, what is said about them is not so much a job-description, but a reminder of areas in which they must be a good example as Christian leaders.

These letters contain the advice of an older servant of Christ to those who must carry on His work. He had fought a good fight, but had about finished the race (II Timothy 4:6-7). Now he writes to men he has fathered in the faith (I Timothy 1:2; Titus 1:4). Timothy is still young enough to be told, "Let no man despise your youth." (I Timothy 4:12). Nevertheless, both Timothy and Titus had acquired considerable experience and influence in the churches. They had a wonderful combination. To Timothy was born of a Jewish mother and Titus was a Gentile. Both were devoted to Paul who had led them into the Christian faith.

EXPERIENCE VERSUS SPIRIT

Two problems confronted them in their pastoral ministry. One was the rise of false doctrine. Many tried to restate the Christian message in terms more suitable to their own ideas. Much of this only worsened the Christian message. That message must constantly be reinterpreted but it cannot be changed. Essentially it remains the same from age to age.

Second, there was the need to state Christian truth in sound doctrine. They had experienced new faith and hope through Christ. Now they tried to express the living truth revealed in him in doctrines by which this truth could be preserved and taught. Their problem was to put the message into doctrine, and to create organization to carry on their work. The problem today is just the opposite. Churches have organization and doctrine. They need to get hold of these to the reality these seek to express. In this, pastor and people together must seek the guidance of God's Holy Spirit.

New Look In Skid Row Work

MISSION, B.C. (CP)—Miracle Valley is true to its name for scores of men who are using this route out of skid road.

The 160-acre wooded resort opened a year ago by the Salvation Army under another name, came back to fight again for the soul of their ancestors.

Now known as Royal 22nd Regiment.

Fifty years later, with three full battalions and three in reserve, the Van Doos are usually the first place other than their Laurentian training camp at nearby Valcartier. The 1st battalion has spent most of the year on UN duty in Cyprus.

Such figures as Georges Vanier, Johnny Bourque, Laureat Rancourt, Pte. Joseph Keable, Lieut. Jean Brillant infused the infant battalion with their spirit.

By GERARD McNEIL

QUEBEC (CP) — When the Canadians from Quebec landed at Boulogne, France, Sept. 15, 1915, it was like Kelly's return to Cork.

Laureat Rancourt, now 73, one of the original members of the 22nd Battalion that later became the Royal 22nd Regiment —the Van Doos — remembers the surprise of the French population at hearing their own language spoken by troops in British-style uniform.

"The Tommies speak French," they were saying.

We began singing the old songs—"Il y a longtemps que je t'aime, Jamais je ne t'oublierai —and they joined us," Mr. Rancourt recalls.

The Van Doos later had trouble with the French spoken in Belgium and in the French province of Picardy. But old chords were struck in Normandy. The morale of French and Quebecer alike was lifted by their arrival.

Mr. Rancourt, a big, cheerful oak of a grandfather whose ancestors came to Quebec in 1646, enlisted Oct. 23, 1914, two days after recruiting began for the French-Canadian 22nd battalion.

He clearly remembers its birth 50 years ago, as do such other originals as Governor-General Georges Vanier, 76, and retired Quebec notitician John S. Bourque, 70, of Sherbrooke.

PRESSED BORDEN

The 22nd had to fight its way into being. Late summer of 1914 found prominent Montreal officers in Ottawa on an unscrupulous Sir Robert Borden's government a French - Canadian battalion should be raised.

The First World War seemed to be racing toward a conclusion and Laureat Rancourt, then 23, was beside himself at the thought of missing a chance to fight.

The young stonemason was pinned down by the notion that was going into a famous Catholic church at St. Louis de Kamouraska. As the first Canadian left for overseas, contractor was holding back two weeks' pay until the church was finished.

Ottawa gave the go-ahead for the 22nd just as the last stone was placed, and the cheers at Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Sir Lomer Gouin told a Montreal rally the news echoed to St. Louis.

Stonemason Rancourt stopped off in the Beauce Valley long enough to say goodbye to his family, headed for Montreal to enlist. But from his seat on the train he saw a recruiting station in Sherbrooke and moments later pounded into the office of Sgt. Johnny Bourque to become Private Rancourt.

'TWIST THEIR TONGUES'

He was schooled in the ways of war by Georges Vanier, then a lieutenant who had left Montreal law practice to enlist.

When the Van Doos arrived in England in May, 1915, a flustered British sergeant major growled:

"They got me, these blokes. They twist their tongues to the right and they speak French. They twist them to the left and they speak English."

Sir Max Aitken, later Lord Beaverbrook, caught the significance of the 1915 landing at Boulogne in a book titled "The Canadians in Flanders."

"History offers no example comparable in the annals of those who, with Champlain in the first years of the 17th century, founded Fort Royal and Quebec, and after three centuries of absence, of which 150 years were spent under another flag, came back to fight again for the soil of their ancestors."

Such was the Royal 22nd Regiment.

Fifty years later, with three full battalions and three in reserve, the Van Doos are usually the first place other than their Laurentian training camp at nearby Valcartier. The 1st battalion has spent most of the year on UN duty in Cyprus.

Such figures as Georges Vanier, Johnny Bourque, Laureat Rancourt, Pte. Joseph Keable, Lieut. Jean Brillant infused the infant battalion with their spirit.

Mr. Rancourt, who retired from the Van Doos in 1946 with the rank of warrant officer first class, recalls Maj.-Gen. Tremblay, commander during much of the First World War, as a smiling figure seldom depressed by trench warfare.

"Look here, boys, we're all French-Canadians and we have to do this. Come on."

This was the Tremblay approach and the camaraderie of the unit—the bond between officers and men and their obvers in any situation—now is legendary.

LIKED ROSS RIFLE

Even Sam Ross's infamous rifle couldn't get them down.

"Actually, I liked it," says Mr. Rancourt. We were all hunters and it was a great rifle for accuracy."

Lt. Col. Aitken book mentions Lieut. Vanier and Cpl. Rancourt for a night patrol in which they blew up a machine-gun nest in no man's land. Cpl. Rancourt and two others spent three hours cutting barbed wire, then the big corporal carried 15 pounds of gun cotton —later withdrawn from use because it was so dangerous—across icy fields and the lieutenant set the charge.

Lieut. Vanier won the Military Cross and Cpl. Rancourt the Military Medal for the exploit.

Of 244 officers and 5,075 men to join the 22nd during the First World War, 99 officers and 972 men were killed and 168 officers and 2,762 men wounded.

At Courcelette in 1916 the wounded Vanier was being carried from the field when a shell killed a stretcher bearer and practically tore off his right leg. In that battle all 22 Van Doos officers were killed or wounded and only 40 of the 660 men emerged unhurt.

Johnny Bourque was wounded at Vimy and left the field a major. He later became one of the most popular figures in the cabinet of the late Maurice Duplessis.

TWO WON VCS

Two Van Doos won the Victoria Cross. Joseph Keable, a young mechanic died the day after holding a position alone, despite multiple injuries, including a broken leg, against waves of attacking Germans.

Lieut. Brillant, 28, also died winning the honor. On Aug. 9, 1918, he was wounded in the left arm capturing a German machine-gun alone, but refused to leave his company. He then led a grenade and bayonet attack, capturing 15 machine-guns and 150 prisoners, between Rozieres and Ervly. Despite further injuries, he led an attack on a four-inch German gun. He was struck in the abdomen during the 800-yard charge but led his men 200 yards farther, his hand covering the wound, before falling.

In the Second World War, the VanDoos went through Sicily with the 1st Division in 1943, landed at Reggio, Italy, in September, and fought at Ortona and Casa Berardi.

The story is told that Brig. Chris Vokes, after a look at a field map showing the Van Doos' position, told Col (later Maj.-Gen.) Paul Bernatcher:

"The information on that position can't be right. There are Germans all around it."

"That's the way it is," replied the laconic colonel, who this month succeeds Governor-General Vanier as regimental colonel.

At Casa Berardi, Maj. Paul Triquet, third Van Doo to win the VC, found half his company dead or wounded, the rest surrounded.

MOVED FORWARD

"There are enemies before us, behind us and on our flanks," he told them. "The only sure place is our objective."

He led an attack that took the company into the suburbs of Casa Berardi, where with two sergeants and 15 men he repulsed a counter-attack.

Later, en route to Belgium the Van Doos were forbidden to speak French for security reasons. They were so well known by then that their movement might have given the show away.

The 22nd reached full regiment strength for the Korean War and its three battalions rotated on duty between 1951 and 1953.

At Hill 227, 40 Van Doos with six mortars held on for three November days until the Amer

SPIRIT OF BATTLE — The French-Canadian troops comprising the 22nd Battalion were known for their tenacity in holding a position and the spirit with which they took an objective. During the Second World Wars, when a company of Van Doos found itself surrounded by enemy troops, Maj. Income Tax Explained

By C. A. MILLER

There are many employees of construction companies who move from contract to contract and are necessarily away from home most of the time. The employers in most cases, give the employees an additional allowance to compensate for the increased expenses incurred by the employee due to his living away from home.

These additional amounts will show on the T4 slips under the heading Taxable Allowances. These do not have to be added to income by the employee when he files his return, if he can qualify under the three headings listed below.

He must be a married man, maintaining a dwelling for his wife and family.

He must be away from home for over 36 consecutive hours.

A single man, maintaining a dwelling in which he supports a dependant, on whom he claims the equivalent to married status that is $1,000 for such dependant.

A single person with no dependants must include any taxable allowance he receives in his total income for the year.

Key personnel of contractors such as superintendents and timekeepers, who travel to and from various contracts in their own cars and their agreement with the employer is that they bear their own expenses, without an allowance from the employer, may deduct a reasonable amount for such outlays. If the taxpayer has an allowable deduction for a car expense, he may also claim depreciation on his car at 30 percent of its cost to the extent that the car was used on his employer's business.

For personal replies pertaining to income tax problems, please enclose a self-addressed, five cent stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin for each question you wish answered.

QUESTION: I am a construction worker, single with no dependants. I receive a taxable allowance. Must I have to include it in my income, when my brother, who is married does not do so?

ANSWER: Yes, as a single person have no additional exemptions. Whether you stay in your home town or away from it, as you only support yourself.

QUESTION: I am a mechanic (married) on heavy construction equipment. I could go home nights but my employer insists I live near the job as I am on call day and night. Do I have to add in the taxable allowance I get?

ANSWER: No. Your agreement with your employer is such that you are away for over 36 hours. .....

Upper Canada Village Official Faces Charge

TORONTO (CP)—An official of Upper Canada Village at Morrisburg, Ont., was arrested here early today and charged with stealing $1,860 in admission money.

David Blake Livingston was taken into custody by Inspector J. S. Smith of the provincial police while other police officers searched for him in the Mereal area.

Livingston was suspended from his job as assistant supervisor of sales while provincial police investigated a shortage of funds at the village, which depicts pioneer life in the St. Lawrence Valley.

Although nearly $10,000 was found to be missing, Livingston is charged only with the theft of $1,860.

Livingston's wife and two children reside in Brockville.

cil, and of agreeing to accept NONG shares for signing the agreement.

When asked how he happened to come into possession of 7,500 NONG shares, the commission's transcript had Mr. Justice Landreville replying that he thought the investment would be a good one.

"It was a gamble, but looked like a good investment," he said. He thought it was obvious NONG would need lawyers in the Sudbury area, and if it had shares in the company his law firm might stand a good chance of getting the job.

WHY WITHOUT COST?

Asked by the securities commission why he should be given the shares without cost, Mr. Justice Landreville had replied that he was unable to answer except that perhaps NONG may have felt he could be of some service to the company after he left the mayoralty.

In connection with a July 20, 1956, letter from Ferris, offering Mr. Justice Landreville 10,000 shares of NONG stock at $2.50 each, the judge was quoted as saying he had acknowledged the letter and then felt obligated to buy it.

He also said he believed NONG was obligated to sell him the shares at that price because the words "firm offer" had been included in the letter.

Asked if he had told anyone about receiving the shares, Mr. Justice Landreville replied he was under the impression he had told some close friends, including Judge J. M. Cooper, a former law partner, and City Clerk-Comptroller F. H. Murphy.

In testimony Wednesday Mr. Murphy denied having been told of any stock transaction between NONG and Mr. Justice Landreville.

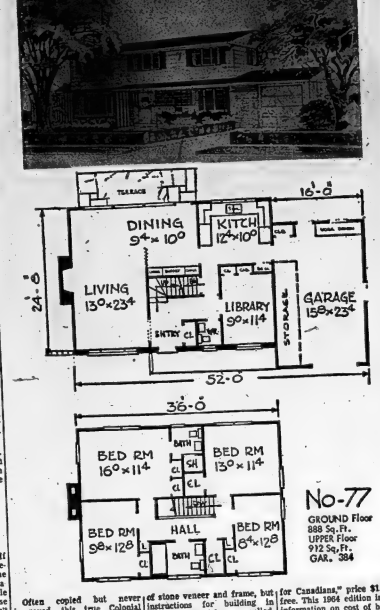
Banks' disappearance in July came after a civil warrant was sworn out at Montreal to jail him for 30 days on a contempt charge for having a court injunction in a ship walkout. On Sept. 15 the Quebec Supreme Court set aside the jail award against conviction for conspiracy in the assault on Henry F. Hall of Owen Sound, Ont. His bail of $25,000 was forfeited.

Banks was charged by the SIU by a gunman instead of the SIU by a government - appointed board of trustees which in turn was announced by union officials in the U.S. earlier this week he had resigned his vice presidency of the parent union.

Paul Hall, the union's president said in a Washington interview with the Globe and Mail Thursday night it was no secret Banks had been in and out of New York since leaving Canada. But Banks was reported to have commandeered yacht on which the Toronto Star reporter saw him. Banks had brought his own yacht from Montreal, he said.

Says Goldwater Knows He Is Beaten

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Senator Robert H. Humphrey said today that Senator Goldwater "knows he faces a crushing defeat" and is "desperately looking for an issue that will strike lightning."



Humphrey, in remarks prepared for delivery at the University of Southern California, charged that the Republican presidential candidate plunged "to the depths of political cynicism" by accusing the Johnson administration of being soft on communism.

"This is the cry of a desperate political man," said the Democratic vice - presidential nominee. "This is the cry of a man who knows he faces a crushing defeat."

Humphrey said Goldwater has admitted to reporters that he brought up the charge to seek for reaction before deciding whether to exploit it for political gain."

U. S.-Wide Strike Impact Being Felt in Communities

DETROIT (AP)—A U.S.-wide strike by the United Auto Workers union against General Motors entered its second week today amid signs that its impact was beginning to be felt in some communities.

Negotiators seeking to end the walkout reported slow progress in efforts to resolve nearly 17,000 local plant demands, the bulk of which apparently must be settled before striking workers return to their jobs.

An Associated Press survey indicated that if the dispute continues for another week the economic effect will start to be felt from coast to coast.

Since the GM payroll lags a week behind the work period, however, most of the strikers had another paycheque coming this week.

More than 250,000 UAW members were ordered off GM assembly lines in 16 states last Friday when bargainers failed to reach agreement on national "pace-economics" issues for a new three-year labor contract.

Immediately, production of new 1965 Chevrolets, Buicks, Oldsmobiles, Pontiacs and Cadillacs came to a halt.

But the UAW instructed workers to continue on the job at GM factories which turn out parts and accessories sold to the giant auto-maker's chief competitors—Ford and Chrysler.

Accessories destined for GM automobiles began to fill all available storage space, however, and the company ordered a cut in production.

By the end of the week, layoffs of non-striking workers totalled nearly 15,000 in New York, Indiana, Connecticut, Ohio and Michigan. More were expected next week.

GM said the strike is costing hourly-rated employees more than $7,000,000 daily in wages, and that the figure could rise to $9,000,000 as more layoffs are made.

The UAW has a $67,000,000 strike fund, from which workers will start collecting benefits next week ranging from $20 weekly for a single employee to $25 for a married couple to $30 for a family.

Automobile production for the industry as a whole fell off from last week's 150,924 to 88,762.

Wall Street brokers said the GM strike has had a dampening effect on the stock market, reflected in a slower trading pace and some signs of retreat.

General Motors stock itself, however, remained close to $100 a share, just under its all-time record level.

Argentina Seeks Record Trade Surplus

By FRANK N. MANITZAS

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Argentina aims to make 1964 its biggest trade year in history with a booming $470,000,000 surplus.

It might hit the target after last year's $384,500,000 mark, the highest ever recorded. Key factors are whether the rich pampas can bring out the cattle and produce the sugar with the terms of trade remaining so favorable as they have been so far this year.

The government's Central Bank thinks so. It estimates exports will hit $1,400,000,000 and imports $990,000,000, compared with $1,365,500,000 and $980,300,000 in 1963.

Private economists feel the government is overly optimistic. But they are quick to add: "The surplus should hit $300,000,000."

Figuring a major role in this country's commerce is the European nation which has more kinsfolk here than any other — Italy.

"At least 50 per cent of the Argentines can find some Italian in their bloodstreams," says Count Ernesto Riccardi, director of the Argentine-Italian Chamber of Commerce here.

"That's why they seem to be able to sell us more," he says, then adds, smiling: "That's why we are selling more to them."

Provisional figures for trade the first six months this year add to the happy picture. Sales are running 17 per cent higher than 1963, and Argentina is $746,300,000, and Argentina is buying more too, $468,000,000. The $278,300,000 surplus through June is $100,000,000 better than the trade picture at this time last year.

Italy's 1963 trade with Argentina is more impressive when compared with 1962. Exports increased from $212,500,000—a booming 52 per - cent increase over 1962. Imports from Argentina increased five per cent to $127,500,000. Every other country sold less than the year before while the Toronto Star reporter was in Italy's purchases shattered records. Even the U.S. customer's position held by British. She only bought $200,000,000 worth of products — mainly meat—in 1963.

And in sales, Italy grabbed 37 per cent of the Argentine market—compared with nine per cent in 1962—while the U.S. dropped to 12. United States watched her share drop from 29 to 24 per cent to a total $241,000,000.

Argentina still finds her neighbors are good customers. She increased exports to Latin America 30 per cent last year.

had been experienced with the gun.

The committee, headed by Liberal David Hahn, Toronto Broadview, also had criticisms for the Emergency Measures Organization and the reserve forces.

It said the government's program to induce Canadians to build fallout shelters is a failure and should be abandoned. There had been no national civil defence exercise for years and no federal-provincial meeting on emergency planning since 1962.

Administration of the reserve forces was antiquated, cumbersome, restrictive and petty. The militia would be unable to carry out its assigned roles if the government carried out its intention to reduce militia strength to 30,000 from 45,000 personnel.

Hospital Appeals to County For Financial Assistance

PICTON (Staff) — Construction work on the extension to the Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital has now reached the stage where it is expected that the additional accommodation and facilities will be ready for use during the early part of 1965.

The new wing includes seven four-bed wards for an increased accommodation of 28 medical and surgical patients together with an expanded pediatric department to a total of 12 beds. The new wing also includes new laboratory and pharmacy departments and an enlargement to the present out-patient service facilities. Plans are now being scrutinized for the inclusion of an isolation care unit, which is a special area set aside for concentrated nursing care of critically ill patients. This is a reasonably new concept in nursing services and is the means by which the critically ill are treated by the use of specialized equipment under the supervision of highly qualified nursing staff. In addition to the foregoing, several other necessary service areas have been provided for in the new wing.

The anticipated cost of this total project is in the neighborhood of some $500,000.00. The Board of Governors have forwarded a deficit of $27,000 which is the amount necessary to purchase the furnishings and equipment in the new wing. An appeal is now being made to the County Council of Prince Edward County to subscribe this amount in order that the hospital may be opened for service at the earliest possible date and, at the same time, all indebtedness will be fully liquidated.

It is estimated that the cost of providing one ward bed plus all of the additional related furnishings is $750.00, or a contribution of $2,500 would complete furnish one four-bed ward. Such memorials would be recognized by having a suitably engraved plaque placed on the doors of the patient or service rooms. All contributions or arrangements or pledges may be directed to the Administrator of the hospital or any member of the Board of Governors.

This appeal is now being made by the Board of Governors in an attempt to insure that the local hospital is completed and opened at the earliest possible date and that the entire project will be free of any incumbrances of indebtedness. We feel certain the people of Prince Edward County will wish to take their part in providing the best possible hospital facilities within the community.

OUTPUT DROPS

Canadian production of refined beet and cane sugar in the first eight months of this year was down 6.1 per cent to 644,625,000 pounds from 1,006,532,000 a year earlier. However, with sales up slightly, company-held stocks at Aug. 31 were 18-per-cent smaller than a year earlier at 174,694,000 pounds as against 213,040,000.

MANY VISITS

Since August, 1961, almost 5,000,000 West Germans have visited East Germany, the German Democratic Republic says.

MR. MELTZER ON REAL ESTATE
"What's Your Problem?"

By BERNARD C. MELTZER

It is a common assumption when renting a house or an apartment, that the landlord is automatically required to make all repairs. This is not true. The relationship between landlord and tenant and the assignments of obligations and responsibilities are spelled out in the terms of the lease. Don't assume all leases are alike, as did Mr. and Mrs. H. B. M.

• • •

Dear Mr. Meltzer: Isn't a landlord required to make all repairs when you rent a house? I always thought so. At least that has been my experience for the past 11 years that we have been renting. This time, however, we have a landlord who refuses to fix our broken oil burner and claims it is our responsibility. My husband refuses to agree to this. He is stubborn — but so is the landlord. It is still warm, but winter is on the way. I want to get this settled now. Can you help me? Enclosed is a copy of our lease.—Mrs. H. B. M.

Answer: In this case the landlord is correct. Your husband may not like it, but unless you arrange to fix the oil burner your long hot summer will be followed by a long cold winter.

The lease you signed obligates you to make all repairs. This is not an uncommon feature of leases — especially for houses. Many landlords voluntarily assume responsibility for all repairs to insure the maintenance and condition of their property. This is, of course, reflected in the rentals.

Your experience should be a warning to our readers (and you in the future) to carefully review a lease to determine who is responsible for repairs before signing.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: What can one do with a house that just won't sell? I have had my house up for sale for a month. Rightfree, prospective buyers have inspected it and I have yet to get one serious (or anywhere near acceptable) offer.

Two real estate brokers have assured me the house is priced right. I'm at my wit's end What can I do? — H. L. L.

Answer: Let me approach this question in four parts.

1. The house has not been on the market long enough to warrant panic. It is common for a house to be for sale for 60 to 90 days.

2. The considerable number of prospects is encouraging as it indicates a strong market for a house like yours.

3. On the other hand, if not one of the 18 prospects came up with a satisfactory offer, perhaps the house is not priced right. Confirm this by enlisting the services of a qualified professional appraiser.

4. It is possible that the financing terms — down payment required or length of mortgage — are not suitable to the market you are attracting. Discuss this with your realtor or the mortgage loan officer in your local bank. Perhaps use of an FHA, a V.A., or a privately insured high ratio mortgage is indicated.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: We dread the very thought of winter — but realize we must plan ahead. We have an impossible heating problem. Ours is a large ranch type house (8 rooms and two baths). We have a hot water heating system with a circulating pump.

The room with the heating equipment is next to the kitchen and the hot water pipe goes to that radiator first and then goes from room to room through the house and back to the heater.

The kitchen is hot, the next three rooms comfortable, the next two a bit cool, and the last two absolutely frigid. To our embarrassment and social detriment, the last two are the living and dining rooms, and on occasion dinner guests have actually had to eat in their overcoats.

Please tell me if there is anything we can do (that isn't prohibitively expensive) before another winter comes. — Mrs. K. N.

Answer: When you advise guests to "Dress For Dinner," you aren't kidding! The solution to this problem, however, is simple and, compared to freezing, relatively inexpensive (about $200.).

Your one pipe heating system as you have discovered, is not suitable to a large house. The hot water starts in the kitchen, and as it passes through each consecutive radiator, more of its heat is radiated out, and used up. By the time it reaches the last two rooms, the water has simply run out of heat energy.

You can solve this problem by converting to a "Two-zone System". Cut the pipe after the first four rooms, and install a return line to the hot water tank—making a complete circle and system. Do the same for the second four rooms by installing an additional circulating pump and feed line from the hot water tank to complete the cycle for that system.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: After 30 years of marriage I discovered my wife was a snob. She has become enamored of all things antique and her latest madness is to live in a genuine revolutionary period house. We have fought traffic endless Sundays in search of such a relic.

Unhappily, we found one. It is an old frame monstrosity with wavy floors and notable for the fact that every frame in the place is sprung. It is reputed to have been the home of a genuine colonel in the revolutionary army.

To impress my wife and save pointless discussion (1) I made a firm offer of $20,000 — but not until I was assured by the broker that they wouldn't accept a penny less than $30,000. My wife claims we talked him into it, but I'm sure it was the other way around. At any rate, we gave him a deposit and signed an agreement he "happened" to have handy, just in case the owner changed his mind. He called the next day and we are the new owners.

I can't live there. It's 40 miles of bad roads to where I work. It would cost another $30,000 to make it livable and it is 3 times too big to begin with. Is there any way I can get out of this? — T. E. W.

Answer: An Agreement of Sale is the most important document in a real estate transaction. Signing one should be an action based on inspection, investigation and careful deliberation — not as a whim or to calm an impatient wife. Signing any agreement so casually was your first mistake.

The copy of the agreement of sale that you enclosed indicates that the owner has the option to keep your deposit if you default, as "liquidated damages", and let it go at that; or he may sue you for the balance of the sales price and force you to honor the transaction. Signing a tough agreement without consulting an attorney was the second mistake.

Your only hope appears to be to throw yourself at the mercy of the owner and explain your situation. He may have had a similar experience with his wife see the humor of it and release you from your commitment. Of course, if the similar experience with his wife is what stuck him with the house in the first place, you really are in trouble. My advice then would be to retain the same broker who sold you the house, and start all over.

Margin Between Politics And Gods Thin in India

By RUKMINI DEVI
Canadian Press Correspondent

BOMBAY (CP)—The margin between Indian politics and the gods was never so thin as at present.

In the current national festival of Lord Ganpati, the bestower of good luck and plenty, the four - armed, elephant - headed god seems to have assumed a determined political posture.

One nine-foot golden image of the elephant god, worshipped by thousands in Parel, Bombay's labor area, shows him in the company of the late prime minister Nehru. Above them flutters a banner with these words: "Let's be true to the memory of beloved Nehru!"

Hundreds of Ganpati images, big and small, have been installed in Bombay and other Indian cities for public worship. Many of them have political motifs.

Not far from the American Consulate is an elephant god with bright hammer-and-sickle flags in all his four hands. Even the paper flowers are red. An inscription above the image reads: "Intensify the struggle against capitalism!"

WORSHIPS DAILY

A dainty princess of the former maharajah - ruled Indian state of Baroda walks from her Malabar Hill flat every morning to worship a small image of the elephant set up by pro-Communist taxi drivers. The image shows Lord Ganpati's one foot as a symbolic ejection of a figure representing "European colonialism."

There are also Ganpati images in an anti-Communist stance. "Beware of Indian Communist traitors," proclaims a banner spread over one Ganpati image.

Prime Minister Shastri seems between Indian politics and the popular with followers of the elephant god. There are many images showing Lord Ganpati blessing the young Shastri government.

Some Indians think that this mixture of politics and the elephant god has been carried too far. "Why bring the lord into the arena of ideological controversy?" asked a college student.

But most people seem to be convinced that the mixture is not only pleasing, but that it may even do some good to Indian politics.

"We need some of the elephant god's idealism," said one Indian.

Tax Relief for Industries Is Entirely at Discretion Of Quebec Finance Minister

MONTREAL (CP)—New tax measures to stimulate growth of Quebec's economy give the Quebec government complete authority to decide where, when and to whom tax relief is granted.

Revenue Minister Eric Kierans says an order-in-council passed by the Quebec cabinet recently "was drafted to allow the minister of finance complete flexibility" in its application.

Premier Jean Lesage, has been finance minister since his Liberal government came to power in 1960.

The tax relief is similar to that applied by the federal government in designated low-employment areas, but Quebec has gone farther. It can designate any area where tax relief will be granted, in line with its policy of "decentralization" of industry.

The tax relief consists of accelerated depreciation on capital investment and a three-year moratorium where new projects are introduced.

Both federal and Quebec regulations provide for a 50-per-cent depreciation rate on new machinery, equipment and a write-off rate of 20 per cent on new buildings. The Quebec plan is broader in the last two. The effective date of the federal regulations.

All Quebec areas specifically named by the federal government as low-employment areas also are included in the Quebec regulations.

While the provincial incentives alone will be much less than the federal because of lower tax rates, the Quebec government appears to be anticipating that federal government will extend its relief to areas beyond those already designated.

Quebec officials point out that Pembroke, Ont., has been designated a low-employment area by the federal government while Pontiac County, right across the Ottawa River in Quebec, is not. Pontiac County employment figures, Quebec officials say, are considered together with those of the Hull region where relatively high employment exists.

Consolidated Paper Corp. Ltd. is said to be considering a mill in Pontiac now she can count on provincial tax relief with every expectation that federal relief will follow.

It's obvious that Quebec government officials from Premier Lesage down regard the tax incentives to be a vital stimulant to industrial growth with a significant lowering in unemployment, especially if federal relief is extended.

The new Quebec tax incentives already have brought long negotiations for at least one development.

Dominion Tar and Chemical Co. Ltd. has been seeking tax relief to allow it to build a $50,000,000 pulp and paper operation in Gaspe peninsula district. Formal announcement of the project is expected soon.

Freight Train Hits Boy, 2, Who Escapes With Bruises

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — An infant boy was struck by a 61-car freight train Thursday and lived, although brakeman's frantic efforts to push the child from in front of the train had failed.

David Bonner, 2½ - year - old son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Bonner of London, was in fair condition in hospital Thursday night, suffering from shock. A doctor who described the child's escape as "simply amazing" said x-rays would be needed to determine whether David suffered anything more than scrapes and bruises.

The child was the central figure, in a brief, frightening drama for the crew of the CPR freight.

Engineer Fred Tremblett saw what he thought was a boy crawling on the track. When his diesel was 300 feet away, he slammed on the emergency brakes and hollered to brakeman James Murphy of Lucan, Ont. "Cool that's a baby!"

Murphy scrambled along the diesel catwalk and, leaning out over the track, tried to scoop David to safety.

He grabbed for him but missed by about four inches, Murphy said. The footboard of the train knocked the child 10 or 12 feet.

Mrs. Georgian MacNally, who lives in a bungalow her wash in a nearby yard around 12 noon and watched in horror, retrieved David from the tracks and called an ambulance.

Then, thinking the child dead, stopped the train 300 yards further on and summoned help.

"The boy seemed to be almost lying on the south rail as I drove by. I slid my car and got away," engineer Tremblett recalled. "He got over the rail and I saw a sliding every wheel on the train.

"And then he seemed to stand up and walk a bit. Then my fireman (Jack Sprague of Windsor) yelled, 'Hit the little fellow'. I figured we had killed him."

Child Welfare Services Will Be Expanded

TORONTO (CP)—An increase in child welfare services, with emphasis on keeping children within their own homes, is being planned by the provincial government for introduction in the next session of the legislature.

The program will be aimed at preventing home situations from deteriorating to the point where welfare agencies must take court action to remove neglected children from their parents.

The provincial welfare department also is working out new cost-sharing arrangements with 55 welfare agencies sanctioned by Ontario to provide care and protection for neglected children.

It was learned that the government is prepared to increase its grants to welfare agencies, besides assuming the cost of the new neglect-prevention services.

At present, warship cases are financed completely out of public funds—60 per cent from the municipalities and 40 per cent from the province. It is believed if the Ontario government contemplates any change this ratio Public funds must meet 90 per cent of all child welfare costs in Ontario.

Armed Forces To Cut Public Relations Work

OTTAWA (CP) — Full-time armed forces public relations officers will be withdrawn from most commercial, information, stations and service colleges, defence department officials said Thursday.

Among public information offices to be maintained by the department will be those at Toronto and the northern NORAD region at North Bay.

The move by the department to integrate its public relations organization will reduce the number of personnel to 76 from 210. Of these 76, there will be 22 armed forces officers and five civilian officials.

The new public information organization will be responsible to Deputy Defence Minister Elgin Armstrong. Up to now, service public relations officers have been responsible to their individual services.

Though full-time public information officers are being withdrawn from most commands and headquarters to be manded individual commanders will appoint a staff member to act as a public relations officer.

They said the new establishment will entail more travelling by full-time public relations officers.

Some information predicted that such army area headquarters as that at Kingston will be eliminated.

Parliamentary Notebook

OTTAWA (CP)—Alan Aylesworth Macnaughton is a Montreal lawyer who did postgraduate work at the London School of Economics and Political Science, and has had wide experience in the field of international finance.

At one time he was president of four firms and a director of four others, and he has held office in such organizations as boards of trade and chambers of commerce.

But in his present capacity—as Speaker of the House of Commons—he has shown traits that rarely are connected with both pass and finesse in most minds.

One of them is a flexible attitude when it comes to applying the letter of the law as embodied in the rules of the House of Commons. Another is a readiness to virtually toss the rule book aside when dealing with questions involving the emotional rights of an individual caught up in the snare of government regulation.

Mr. Macnaughton hasn't exactly won kudos from either the cabinet or the Liberal backbenchers when he has demonstrated these traits to their embarrassment.

DOESN'T BOTHER SPEAKER

The discomfort of the Liberals—his political brothers when he was elected in Montreal's Mount Royal Riding, first in 1949—doesn't seem to bother Mr. Speaker Macnaughton in his black silk robes of office.

There is, for instance, the case of Opposition Leader Diefenbaker and—to a lesser degree, in this context—of Prime Minister Pearson. The rules of the Commons are supposed to be applied equally among all MPs. The prime minister of the day is only the first among equals, and the leader of the opposition is at least second.

But Mr. Diefenbaker and Mr. Pearson have on numerous occasions this session done things to the rules in the best of political and parliamentary welfare that few practised backbenchers would attempt.

When this was pointed out to Mr. Macnaughton some months ago he said it was his philosophy that within the rules do in fact apply equally to all MPs, the prime minister and the leader of the opposition should occupy special positions. This was particularly so of a leader of the opposition who has been prime minister, he added. . .

So, this week, when Stanley Knowles, the white and MP for Winnipeg North Centre said it was his interpretation of the feeling of the House that observance of the rules should be tightened up, everyone expected the crack-down at the two big party leaders. Not so.

SHOWS ANOTHER TRAIT

And in the same sitting, Mr. Macnaughton demonstrated his other distinguishing trait as Speaker. It was during some Creditiste questioning of Labor Minister MacEachen about the rights of two union men involved in a labor hassle.

The House groaned at the insistence of the voluble Creditistes about an incident which seemed at first glance to matter little. But Mr. Macnaughton let the quizzing go on.

"I have allowed fuller question than are usually allowed," he said, "in order to give some recognition to the rights of individuals . . ."

Last spring, on a similar question involving somebody else caught up in a maze of government machinery, Mr. Macnaughton gave this opinion when Justice Minister Favreau complained that questions weren't being put in the correct form, according to parliamentary rules.

"There seems to be a great deal to be said in criticism of the way in which the questions were asked, but as to the right of members of the House of Commons to inquire into a matter affecting the right and liberty of any citizen, it seems to me that that is the overriding consideration and the legality should step aside for the moment."

Declares Canada Not Paying Share Of Peace Costs

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Canada is not paying her share for the maintenance of peace, Air Marshal Hugh Campbell, president, told Royal Canadian Air Force Association members Thursday in his presidential address at the association's annual meeting here.

"If we continue to appease so low on the scale of effort, and if we continue to enjoy peace for a further ten years," he maintained, "we should thank our neighbors for allowing us to have shelter in the shade of their defence deterrent umbrella."

Air Marshal Campbell voiced the disagreement of the association's executive council with the unification of the armed forces as outlined in the government's white paper and other subsequent papers.

Britain Says Soviet Stand On UN Peace Forces Would Virtually Stop Their Use

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—Britain charged Thursday that the Soviet Union is sticking to an argument that will "put an end to" all peacekeeping purposes" to the United Nations' peace keeping functions.

It said the Soviets have "no intention of compromising."

James Gibson, British delegate to the UN, accordingly called for rejection of the Soviet argument that the Security Council should have exclusive responsibility for UN peace keeping and that the General Assembly should renounce any right to act when the council is unable to do so.

He urged the assembly's 21-country study group on peacekeeping costs not to try for a unanimous report but, instead, to "seek a majority agreement on what changes, what improvements, should be made in the existing procedures" for shouldering such costs among UN members.

Gibson asked those in the group to consider "going as far as we can toward meeting the objections" of the Soviet Union to the present practice of having the assembly, rather than the council, levy peace-keeping assessments.

URGES EFFORTS

Earlier Thursday, Canada urged the group to make "superhuman efforts" to resolve the deadlock over peace-keeping finances.

It suggested that the group go into private session to "reduce the element of confrontation" and create a better atmosphere.

Ambassador Paul Tremblay, Canada's perm-nent representative to the UN, asked the study group to consider carefully a United States proposal that a special finance committee be appointed to review financial arrangements for peace-keeping operations.

Political authority for an operation should be vested in the council, Tremblay argued, but "let us be clear that the General Assembly's responsibility is financial."

Tremblay said the committee's general review specific operations decided upon by the Security Council "and suggest to the council changes in the application of a special scale which we hope we shall be able to establish at the next session of the . . . assembly."

Any delegation," he added, "considers that the special finance committee would have a similar responsibility for recommending financial arrangements" for peace-keeping operations established by the assembly.

Tremblay said East-West differences have set the UN membership "on a collision course which, if not diverted, can only have very grave consequences for the organization, whatever the outcome."

ORDERED TO APPEAR

QUEBEC (CP) — Guy Poullet, vice - president of Rassemblement pour l'Independance Nationale, and seven other alleged members of the separatist group were ordered Thursday to appear Oct. 14 on charges of distributing pamphlets without city police authorization. The pamphlets were distributed at the doors of five churches Sept. 20 and asked the population to protest against the visit of the Queen.

Vatican Council May Erase Written Promises Demanded Of Non-Catholics When Wed

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican ecumenical council soon will take up a topic of marriage that could result in easing the written promises on non-Catholics in mixed marriages.

The council debate on marriage will delve into complicated questions of impediments to Catholic marriages, church courts handling the dissolution of marriages, the ceremony and nature of marriage as a sacrament and the obligations of partners in mixed marriages.

The schema will not resolve the question of birth control. This is part of a separate schema on the church in the modern world and a subject on which Pope Paul has promised a new study taking into account recent medical and theological investigations.

SAYS AGREEMENT ENOUGH

Many bishops, especially from countries like the United States where Catholicism is not the dominant religion, share the view of British Archbishop John C. Heenan that it should be possible for non-Catholics to agree on the Catholic upbringing of children without signing a promise.

"Some people have an actual objection to the requirement of signing a promise—willing to say 'yes' and agree, but not liking the written promise," the British prelate said recently.

"Now that kind of objection could easily be met. What I would not be prepared to say is that the council will decree that it no longer matters about promising to bring up the children as Catholics. I cannot imagine the council will say that."

The council also might open the way for a mixed marriage to be blessed by non-Catholic ministers as well as by the Catholic priest who solemnizes the nuptials.

Both issues — the written promise and the restriction of blessing of mixed marriages by the Catholic Church alone—are obstacles to Christian unity.

The Catholic attitude gradually has changed in recent decades. At one time mixed marriages were customarily performed only in the parish rectory. Today they are celebrated in the church itself, though without a nuptial mass.

Other changes are likely to speed up the long delays in obtaining marriages involving Catholics. The sacred Roman Rota, supreme tribunal of the church in settling marriage cases, may be extended in scope beyond the Vatican so that lesser rotas could be created in individual nations.

No matter what changes the council approves, the church is expected to stand by its view that mixed marriages should be avoided if possible, an attitude shared by many non-Catholic ministers.

An American Catholic theologian warned recently:

"If you want a happy marriage, there is one class of people you should avoid—and that is lifelong friends. Steer clear of them. If you are not a Catholic and you marry a Catholic, you are getting into a heap with someone who rows altogether differently from you.

"Any marriage can sprout a couple of disagreements a day, but disagreements over religion are the bitterest of all."

Roadblocks Quickly Moved By Turks on Canadian Plea

NICOSIA (CP) — Turkish-Cypriot irregulars Thursday removed three unauthorized roadblocks on the Nicosia - Kyrenia highway at the request of the Canadian commander of the United Nations peace - keeping force.

A UN spokesman said the removal of the roadblocks, erected Wednesday, was negotiated by Maj. Phil Plouffe of Quebec City, commander of a company, 1st Battalion, Royal 22nd Regiment, which patrols the southern foothills of the Kyrenia Mountains.

Plouffe said he experienced no difficulty in negotiating with the local Turkish-Cypriot commander.

"I simply asked him to remove them and, after a short time, he agreed. I pointed out that the roadblocks were not helping anyone and were closing the road, but were even slowing up their own traffic."

A Yethi Asker spokesman said three Royal 22nd privates back to their Kyrenia Pass headquarters from Nicosia Wednesday night.

INCIDENT REPORTED

A spokesman for the Canadian contingent said the incident was reported Thursday to India's Gen. K. S. Thimmaya, UN peace force commander, and it was expected a formal complaint would be lodged with Turkish - Cypriot authorities.

The roadblocks, wooden barricades and oil drums filled with stones, were erected on the crest on the shoulders of the highway Thursday but some 100 Turkish-Cypriot irregulars manned the roadside positions they occupied late Wednesday. Groups armed with sten guns and rifles could be seen in hills overlooking the highway.

They made no attempt to interfere with regular traffic or with an afternoon convoy carrying 34 Canadian troops, Canadian Guards, from Nicosia to the northern foothills of the Kyrenia range.

The guards replace B-company, Royal 22nd Regiment today. The units were to share positions overnight.

Meanwhile, a UN spokesman said talks are continuing here in an attempt to work out details of placing the Kyrenia highway under UN control.

Two Canadian officers, who arrived here Wednesday as special representative of UN Secretary - General U Thant, met Thursday with Archbishop Makarios, president of the Greek - Cypriot dominated government, and Fazil Kuchuk, vice-president and leader of the minority Turkish Cypriots.

No statement was issued following the meeting.

Ottawa Mayor Leaves Chair At Meeting

OTTAWA (CP) — Mayor Charlotte Whitton accused Controller Wilfred Bennett Thursday of electioneering for mayor at the price of children's blood.

The charge came at an explosive meeting of board of control during which Controller Ernie Jones resigned as chairman of the school sidewalk committee and stomped out.

The two events occurred during a debate on a report over whether a school sidewalk should be built right to the curb or with a boulevard between the road and the sidewalk, as required by city bylaw.

Mrs. Reid, only announced opponent of Miss Whitton in the Dec. 7 mayoralty race, first will move a motion to permit the sidewalk to be built next to the curb. He said this was the only way to get the sidewalk built as residents objected to a boulevard, that would steal the lives of children protected.

Mayor Whitton killed the motion by leaving her chair and then breaking up a quorum.

She said Mr. Reid has a political interest in the location of sidewalks, and ruled the motion out of order. Mr. Reid said he has no property in the area of the school and no members of his family live there.

"You will do anything to save your own political skin with the lives of children," the mayor told Mr. Reid.

"It's the price of bein -h dren's blood, and I won't stay in the chair," she said.

Showing Flag of Republic Results in Belfast Riots

BELFAST (Reuters) — Police said today that they arrested 15 persons in this Northern Ireland capital following a series of violent clashes with Irish Republican supporters Thursday night.

A city bank was set on fire and gasoline bombs were thrown at police armored vehicles during the outbreaks which began because of a flag.

Fifteen policemen were treated in hospitals and four were detained with head and facial injuries after the fighting.

Source of the trouble was the green, orange and white flag of the neighboring Irish Republic.

The flag was first unfurled at the headquarters of the Irish Republican Party here last Monday but was removed by police on orders from Home Minister Brian McConnell.

The Republican Party wants union of Northern Ireland, now part of the United Kingdom, with the Irish Republic

In Britain's Oct. 15 general election the party is contesting eight of the 12 voting districts which send members of Parliament to London.

Thursday's clashes began after two Republican candidates displayed the tricolor flag in their headquarters window.

Police smashed a window of the headquarters to remove the flag, after unsuccessfully attempting to break down the locked building.

Later in the evening, another flag was put up and police this time broke into the headquarters with pickaxes to haul the tricolor away.

Crowds outside the building sang party songs and threw stones and bottles at police, who replied with arrests and nightstick charges in an effort to disperse them.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

Hunting novices, it is claimed, have started an epidemic in the current crop of duck-questers.

It is an old disease which ravaged certain parts of Chicago in the Al Capone days when the arch-gangster sent his gunsels on death-dealing missions.

It is known as "triggeritis," which develops from over-anxiety sometimes aided by a beaker of Mountain dew.

The first symptom is an itchy feeling in the index finger which comes when the hunter sees a speck or specks in the sky. The finger suddenly tightens around the shotgun trigger—and a blast roars into the wild blue yonder.

And that shocking you hear in the background comes from the boys who manufacture ammunition.

The trigger-happy hunting fraternity is shovelling shekels by the pile into their cash registers.

The wily vice-president in charge of hunter watching, Bill Bittle of the Tweed Branch, Department of Lands and Forests, tells me that the dinner-seekers are bleeding their lustful foes at a high rate.

"The average hunter," Bill says, "spent four hours in his blind and expended 15 rounds for every duck he brought down. In one place," he added, "four hunters fired 20 rounds for each bird they felled."

Department officers checked some 684 hunters during opening week and revealed the total haul was 766 ducks or a little over one bird per hunter. Nine Canada geese were included in the kill. Very few merganser ducks and grouse were shot.

The ducks shot in numerical order were wood duck, blacks, mallards, blue-wing teal, green-wing teal, ringnecks, widgeon and golden eyes. The geese were shot in areas north of Tweed. The West Lake, Prince Edward County duck haunts were among the best in the area hunter-wise.

Mr. Bittle requests hunters who shoot banded ducks' to forward the bands as per the instructions on the tab —or if more convenient send them to Tweed headquarters, Lands and Forests.

'Dancer' Has 50-50 Chance

TORONTO (CP) — Horatio Luro, trainer of Canadian-bred Northern Dancer, this year's winner of the Kentucky Derby, the Preakness and the Queen's Plate, said Thursday that the three-year-old colt has a "50-50" chance of returning to the races.

The Dancer, owned by millionaire industrialist E. P. Taylor of Toronto, injured his ankle in the latter part of July while training at Belmont Park in New York. The injury was at first reported to be a bowed tendon.

"This is not a bowed tendon," said Luro of Argentina. "The horse had a rap on the tendon and it swelled up. However, it is hard to tell whether this is as bad as a bow because the tendon is always a danger spot."

The horse is training now," said Luro, "and if he is well by the winter, we plan to race him. The decision, however, is up to Mr. Taylor."

Detroit Roadblocks Yankee Express

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Yogi Berra is still manipulating numbers today after New York Yankees' pennant express ran afoul of Detroit Tigers.

Berra, who has become accustomed to the taste of champagne almost every fall in his 17 years as a Yankee, was all ready for his annual ride after New York swept two from Detroit Wednesday.

But the Tigers turned right around and toppled the Yanks 4-2 and 5-2 Thursday, delaying the clinching of New York's 29th pennant at least another day. If the Yankees whip Cleveland Indians today and Kansas City Athletics defeat Chicago White Sox, Yogi can whoop it up again.

Two Yankee victories in the three-game set with the Indians will end all the speculation.

Baltimore's 2-0 blanking of Washington Senators Thursday kept the Orioles' chances alive for the pennant alive. So, figures Berra, the best way to wrap it up is for the Yankees to win two. Chicago and Baltimore are both 2½ games behind the Yankees.

Of course if the Athletics care to co-operate by knocking off Chicago or Detroit decides to whip Baltimore tonight, Yogi will gladly accept the help.

The Tigers weren't much help Thursday, coming from behind in the ninth to pull out the opener against rookie Vet Mortimore and then getting a six-hitter from rookie Dennie Mc Lain to win the nightcap.

Dave McNally permitted just one hit—a seventh inning double by Don Lock—in shutting the Senators for Baltimore. Except for Lock's double, only two balls were hard off McNally.

In other American League games, Dick Radatz made his 78th appearance and cranked up his 25th save as Boston Red Sox dropped Cleveland 4-2, and Kansas City got a 12th inning homer from rookie Larry Stahl to whip Minnesota Twins 7-4.

Jerry Adair singled home the Orioles' first run in the third and then doubled and came home on a two - bagger by Brooks Robinson for the Baltimore's other run in the fifth.

The victory left the Orioles one percentage point back of second - place Chicago which was idle.

Radatz saved Boston's victory for Ed Connolly as 306 persons looked on—the smallest attendance in Red Sox history.

Stahl's homer opening the 12th beat Minnesota's Camilo Pascual who struck out 14 running his season's total to 213, tops in the American League.

Balding Shares Lead At Fresno

FRESNO, Calif. (AP)—Canadian veteran Al Balding and Jack McGowan took full advantage of calm morning weather and smooth untrampled greens Thursday to share a two-stroke lead, tied at five-under-par 67s, in the first round of the $35,000 Fresno Open golf tournament.

A stiff breeze came up and heavy trampling made the 7,181 - yard San Joaquin Country Club course considerably tougher from noon on, as numerous favored pros, including defending champion Mason Rudolph, ran into disastrous bogey trouble.

Balding, 40, who three times has won the Canadian PGA, carded five birdies in his parkland round, thanks to a hot putter and staying out of trouble.

McGowan, a wiry youngster who never has won a big tournament, likewise clipped the bogeys from his card. He also never went ove. par in a superb putting performance.

McGowan, from Toledo, Ohio, had barely his best year since joining the touring pros in 1960, went out in a five-under-par 31, blasted through the last five holes with straight birdies.

He came in with a par 36 over the 6,611 - yard San Joaquin country club course.

Balding shot his differently with a 32-35.

Balding carded six birdies and one bogey, and his putter made the big difference. He dropped the birdie putts from 12 feet at the fourth, from 15 feet at the sixth, 25 at the 11th, 20 at the 12th, 15 at 17 and 20 at 18.

Meet Hamilton Sunday

'Saskys' Difference Between Cats, Ottawa

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The difference between Hamilton Tiger-Cats and Ottawa Rough Riders of the Eastern Football Conference is Saskatchewan Roughriders.

The Western Football Conference Roughriders have no intention of taking down the roadblocks when they meet the Cats in a Canadian Football League interlocking game at Hamilton Sunday.

The Ticats, defending Grey Cup champions, are two points behind Ottawa, which holds down first place with 13 points in the EFC. A win for the Tigcats Sunday would create a tie at the top.

But Saskatchewan is only one point behind British Columbia Lions, who hold down top spot in the WFC with 15 points. A win, gives the Roughriders possession of first place.

The Lions meet Toronto Argonauts in another interlocking game in Toronto Saturday. The Lions are unbeaten while the Argos are tied with Hamilton Alouettes for third place in the EFC with six points each.

Hamilton coach Ralph Sazio has done some rapid improving since his Ticats returned from a two-game swing through the West which gave them a tie against the Lions Saturday and a win over Edmonton Eskimos Monday.

Willie Bethea, injured during Hamilton's first game of the season, will be back in the lineup.

The Roughriders have added import centre Milt Crain, who will play on the offensive line against Hamilton. Crain was cut earlier this season by Montreal.

Argonauts coach Nobby Wirkowski is bursting with pride after a two-game swing through the west, which gave Toronto a win over Winnipeg Blue Bombers and a near miss against Calgary Stampeders.

But Wirkowski says his team gained more than the two points for the win. He says they have regained their confidence, which he feels has been the main factor in the Argos six losses in nine games this season.

Milt Campbell, who suffered an ankle injury against Calgary Tuesday, will be missing from the Saturday lineup. He is not expected to play for at least three weeks.

The Lions, who battled Hamilton to a 16-16 tie last weekend, had four players injured in the process. Halfback Willie Fleming, centre Gary Schwertfeger, ball Bill Lasseter and defensive star Bill Munsey were all hurt.

There has been no indication if any would miss Saturday's game.

Cats Sign Metras, Jr.

TORONTO (CP) — Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Eastern Football Conference have signed centre John Metras, Jr., son of the coach of University of Western Ontario Mustangs and graduate of that team.

Metras was a Toronto Argonaut selection when Canadian Football League clubs divided up the 1964 university graduating class, but he was cut in August. None of the other teams claimed him on waivers and it was understood he would return for another tryout with Argonauts next season. He is taking post-graduate work here.

Hamilton has been on the lookout for Canadian personnel following the loss of two Canadians. Ken Kilrea was dropped after missing the Ticat plane in Vancouver Sunday and Steve Hmiel suffered a broken arm Monday at Edmonton.

Generals Nip Petes Jrs. 5-3

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Orval Overbeck came from behind for a 5-3 victory over Peterborough Petes Thursday night in Intermediate hockey Association Junior A exhibition game.

The Generals scored three unanswered goals in the third period for the victory. Wayne Cashman led the scoring with a pair and Danny O'Shea, Bill Little and Armand Giroux each added one.

Rich Purdy, Gord Tucker and Jim Patterson scored for Peterborough.

Two Tight Tilts
BCI Squads Nip Brighton

By DAVID TEMPLER

BCIVS football squads registered victories over Brighton in a Bay of Quinte COSSA Junior and Senior "A" twin bill, played at Brighton.

The city seniors chalked up a 14-7 win while the juniors won a tight 12-9 decision, Senior Allen Mott and junior Jim McCreary starred for the winners with two majors apiece.

In the senior game a heavy Brighton team led the sluggish Collegiate 7-0 in the first half. The drive of quarterback Charles Ewing and a holding penalty against B.C.I. set up the touchdown pass caught by Elson Blake. Tony Stobbs made the point after.

Late in the second quarter B.C.I. began to move. A pass from Bill Hallam to Terry Wellsley netted 44 yards. Mott caught a swing pass for four Wellsley ran a third-down pass 40 yards to the five yard line when time expired in the first half.

Good running by Allen Mott and determination by Bill Hallam brought the ball to Brighton's 32 before Brighton managed to call a time out on the line. The respite was brief. B.C.I. regained the ball three plays later and Hallam threw Wellsley to the five in two long passes. A fumble squeezed over the Brighton goal line but the 24-yard line. After only an instant in the huddle, the team sweped the ball for the last play of the game. McCreary made a dazzling run, shook off three would-be Brighton tacklers and grabbed the 12-9 decision by a hair.

McCreary got his other major in the first quarter with a 50-yard dash around the right end.

Don McDougall went off tackle for Brighton, and with a good display of broken field running, went 30 yards for Brighton's only touchdown.

A poor snap in the third quarter gave McDougall the chance to nail B.C.I. for a safety touch behind their own goal line.

Red Wing Jrs. Blank Hawks

HAMILTON (CP)—Hamilton Red Wings blanked St. Catharines Black Hawks 3-0 Thursday night in an Ontario Hockey Association Junior A exhibition game here.

Rookie Jim Chase in the first period, Gary Marsh in the second and Jimmy Peters in the third took care of the tied Wing goals during the shutout when goaltenders Allan Frank and Marty Carrigan.

Hamilton outshot the Black Hawks 35-17.

Yesterday's Stars

Pitching—Dave McNally, Baltimore, allowed only one hit—Don Lock's two-out double—as the Orioles defeated Washington Senators 2-0 and kept alive in the American League pennant race.

Hitter—Nee Coker, Cincinnati, collected a single, double and homer, leading the Reds to a 5-4 triumph over Pittsburgh Pirates. The victory put the Reds one-half game behind the National League-leading St Louis Cardinals.

TIES RECORD

MINNEAPOLIS (CP) — Minnesota rookie Tony Oliva tied the American League record Thursday for times at bat in one season by a rookie. His five official trips in the Twins' 8-4 loss to Kansas City in 13 innings gave him 663 for the year, tying the record set by Detroit's Jake Wood in 1961.

Reds Edge Bucs, Whittle Cards' Lead

Half-Game Off Pace

By MURRAY CHASE
Associated Press Sports Writer

Every move is the key to success or the door to disaster in the closely knit National League pennant race.

Cincinnati Reds' Dick Sisler made a key move Thursday night, deciding to use reserve catcher Jim Coker instead of regular John Edwards, who hurt his hand the night before.

Coker, who spent most of the 1963 season with Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League, responded with a single, a double and his first home run of the season, sparking the Reds to a 5-4 victory over Pittsburgh Pirates. The win moved Cincinnati to within one-half game of Johnny Keane's first-place St. Louis Cardinals, who were idle.

Coker's second-inning single drove in the Reds' first run after 34 scoreless innings. He doubled and scored in the fourth, then snapped a 3-3 deadlock with his homer off Steve Blass in the sixth. That put Cincinnati ahead to stay.

There was no immediate word whether Coker or Edwards would be in the line-up tonight when the Reds play their next-to-last game of the season against Gene Mauch's once-potent Philadelphia Phillies.

The Phillies, in third place 2½ games off the pace, still are working on a 10-game losing streak and conceivably could tumble into fourth place behind San Francisco Giants.

CARDS MEET METS

While the Reds are battling Philadelphia, St. Louis Cardinals, winners of eight straight, will play lowly New York Mets.

St. Louis can eliminate the Phillies and the Giants from the race by beating the Mets.

In other NL games Thursday, San Francisco trimmed Houston Colts 6-3, Milwaukee Braves whipped New York 7-3 and Chicago Cubs stopped Los Angeles Dodgers 4-3.

The Reds scored the decisive run in the seventh inning on a single by Vada Pinson that Jerry Lynch couldn't handle in left field, and Frank Robinson's double.

Juan Marichal won his 21st game even though he gave up 10 hits to the Colts. Tom Haller backed Marichal with a homer and a run-scoring single in a four - run third inning. Willie Mays singled in two runs in the outburst.

The Braves clinched fifth place with their seventh straight victory. Ed Bailey's grand slam homer sparked an early attack.

Ron Santo hit a two-run homer in a three-run sixth inning, and John Boccabella doubled in a run in the eighth inning for the Cubs.

Seniors, Juniors Defeat Trenton

Quinte S. S. Gridders Win

By ROBERT SNEFJELLA

Quinte Senior Saints combined a good offence with a stubborn defence to defeat Trenton High School's Tigers by a 28-6 score on the latter's gridiron.

The Juniors of Quinte also scored a victory, winning 19-7. Both wins were by the same as many games for the two Quinte teams. The next tilt is coming up on Friday when Brighton travels to Quinte to do battle.

The touchdown scored in the first quarter after a Trenton third down play was stopped deep in their own end. Ken Locke carried the ball across on a single reverse a few plays after Jack Reppard's convert was good.

Murray Kern intercepted a Trenton pass and returned it 40 yards to start off another Quinte touchdown. Quinte quarterback Gary Taylor pitched the T.D. pass to Bob Fleetcher from the 20-yard line on the next play. The convert was good.

In the second quarter Trenton had their one and goal on the Quinte nine-yard line and promptly fumbled. Donald Lane jumped on the loose ball. The winners were forced to punt and Trenton drove to their 15-yard line, where Quinte rallied and took possession on downs.

On the first play Grant "Speedy" Vandervoort sped around left end and ran 15 yards for a T.D. The convert was good.

Trenton got on the scoresheet late in the third quarter. They drove from their own 30 to the Quinte one-yard line in nine plays and Gauthier smashed through left tackle for the score. The point after touchdown attempt was blocked.

Both teams battled through a scoreless third quarter.

Vandervoort scored his second major of the day in the final quarter, when he climaxed a 45-yard Quinte drive by scooting 10 yards around left end. Reppard made it four for four in the convert department.

Reppard ended the game by intercepting a Trenton pass.

Murray Kern played a fine defensive game for Quinte, intercepting three passes and tackling well throughout the game.

End Bob Barker was very good for the losing cause.

The Quinte scoring added three touchdowns to the four he scored last week to monopolize the scoring attack. Mike Shanker kicked one convert.

Al Kinnick scored Trenton's only touchdown on a 60-yard pass play. Dan Creighton kicked the extra point.

Dave Muir, Phil Buddle and Shonliker were the outstanding Quinte players along with Kinnick.

Creighton and Kinnick were two of the bright spots on the Trenton junior squad.

National League Flag Race

Could Be 2, 3, 4-Team Playoff

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

There is the possibility of a two, three or four-team playoff in the red-hot chase for the National League pennant.

The four-way tie would be created if New York Mets sweep their final three games from league-leading St. Louis Cardinals, Philadelphia Phillies defeated Cincinnati Reds in their final two games and San Francisco beat Chicago Cubs in their three remaining games.

This would leave St. Louis, Cincinnati, Philadelphia and San Francisco with a record of 92 wins and 70 losses each.

The Cards could wrap it up with three straight wins over the Mets.

A two-way tie could happen this way:

St. Louis could lose one to the Mets and the Reds could eliminate the Phillies in two straight, giving each a 94-68 record. Or each could win one game and wind up with identical 93-69 records.

One loss by either the Phillies or the Giants would eliminate them from further contention.

IF THREE-WAY

A three-way tie could happen this way:

St. Louis losing two and the Phillies defeating Cincinnati twice, giving all three 92-70 records.

In the event of a three-team tie, there will be a round-robin playoff until two teams have lost two games.

In the event of a four-way tie, San Francisco will open a best-of-three series at Cincinnati with the other game, or games, at San Francisco. St. Louis will open at Philadelphia under the same arrangement with the winners of both series meeting for the final round.

The draw was made Thursday by league president Warren Giles and is the most involved playoff arrangement in the league's history.

Olympics Team Heads For Tokyo

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fifty-three athletes and officials boarded a charter Air Canada DC-8 jet Thursday for a non-stop flight to Tokyo, site of the 1964 Olympics.

They joined 75 fellow athletes and Olympic officials who boarded the plane in Montreal and Toronto.

Athletes competing in the Olympics for Canada include experts in fencing, judo, gymnastics, yachting, rowing, shooting track and field and field hockey.

The bulk of Canada's swimming team, consisting of 14 persons including coach Howard Firby, boarded here.

An RCMP guard of honor lent color to an airport ceremony featuring B.C.'s lieutenant-governor, George Pearkes, and officials of the Canadian Olympic Association and the Amateur Athletic Union.

The plane left here at 12:30 p.m. PDT and was expected in Japan nine hours and 45 minutes later.

Representatives of the British Columbia Sports Car Club from Victoria presented a $1,000 cheque to Allen McGavin, vice-president of the Canadian Olympic Association.

He accepted the money on behalf of the British Columbia Amateur Sports Council, which has concluded a two - month campaign to raise money to help defray the expenses of B.C.'s Olympic athletes.

Olympics Track Preview

Says 6-8 World Records Will Be Broken

Written for The AP
By BERT NELSON

NEW YORK (AP)—As many as six or eight world records could fall in the men's track and field competition in the Olympic Games and the United States should win at least half the 24 event.

These conclusions are drawn from the preceding articles in this series. Pre-meet predictions are a long way from the actual results but they do provide a basis for expecting the greatest Olympics ever.

World records are very likely in the 400 metres, 1,500, 3,000-metre steeplechase, 3,000, 400-metre hurdles, both relays, broad jump and shot put. Such a number of records in one meet is fantastic but the talent and opportunity are there.

Records could go in another nine events—the 100, 200, 10,000, marathon, high jump, pole vault, discus, javelin and hammer throw. Only the 110-metre hurdles and triple jump records are safe, along with the walks, a road event where anything can happen.

American athletes are predicted to win 13 of the 24 events. This would top the nine at Rome in 1960 but fall short of the highs of 14 at Helsinki in 1952 and 15 at Melbourne in 1956.

MARATHON DOUBTFUL

American victories figure to be in the 100, 200, 400, 800, 3,000, both hurdles, both relays, broad jump, pole vault, shot put and marathon. The hop, step and jump, hammer throw and discus throw are possible American victories. Most trouble can be expected in the 800, 5,000 and marathon, especially the latter.

Only Ralph Boston in the broad jump and the U.S. 1,600-metre relay team are picked to repeat the victories earned at Rome.

Four races and three field events should provide the closest competition of the meet.

Mike Larrabee and Uils Williams of the United States are seen in the 400, American Morgan Groth and Jerry Siebert will battle George Kerr of Jamaica and Bill Crothers of Toronto in the 800.

The 5,000 features Bob Schul of the United States against Bill Baillie of New Zealand and Ron Clarke of Australia. And in the 10,000 it will be a fight among Clarke, Baillie, Murray Halberg of New Zealand and Pyotr Holovnikov of the Soviet Union.

On the field Al Oerter-Ludvik Danek discus battle will be a thriller. And it's anybody's guess in the hammer and Javelin, with six to 10 highly regarded contenders in each event.

Given decent conditions, the 1964 Olympic Games will produce the fastest runners, best jumpers and longest throwers in history.

National Hockey League

Howe, Plante Hospitalized

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A pair of National Hockey League greats were hauled off to hospital Thursday, one for observation and the other for treatment.

Gordie Howe, rightwinger and spark of the Detroit Red Wings for 20 years, crashed into a goal post during an exhibition game won 5-2 by the Wings in Detroit over a combined team of their Memphis and Pittsburgh farm clubs.

Howe was not knocked unconscious, but club officials felt he should go to hospital for observation and treatment.

The other major hospital case is Jacques Plante, goalie for New York Rangers, who was pulled off the team's exhibition tour in Toronto and sent to hospital in New York for treatment to a knee ligament injury.

Plante, white with Montreal Canadiens, had a near strangle-hold off the Vezina Trophy as the league's outstanding goalie.

LIST LIGHTLY

Plante joins Phil Goyette, injured wrist; Dick Duff, ankle; and Camille Henry, back; on the sidelines for the Rangers.

In the Detroit game, Bruce MacGregor scored twice for the Wings while Norm Ullman, Bill Gadsby and Ed Joyal scored once each. Lowell MacDonald and Chuck Holmes scored for the combined team.

Another injury Thursday, although of a decidedly less serious nature, was a cut over the eye suffered by goalie Glenn Hall as his Chicago Black Hawks scored a 2-2 tie with their AHL Buffalo farm club. Black Hawks loaned a number of players to Buffalo for the game.

Montreal dropped it's first decision in six starts as goalie Gump Worsley and Quebec Aces of the AHL handed them a 5-2 setback.

Worsley, a former Ranger who lost his job with Montreal to Charlie Hodge last year, blocked 21 shots including third-period breakaways by Henri Richard and Yvon Cournoyer. Hodge, with poor defensive support, stopped 29.

Chilliard Morrison, Bill Sutherland, Terry Gray, Leon Rochefort and Wayne Hicks scored for Quebec while John Ferguson and Bob Rousseau scored for Montreal.

MAKES PICKS

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The Sporting News announced Thursday that its selection of the rookie baseball pitcher and player of the year in both major leagues. Minnesota Twins outfielder Tony Oliva and Wally Bunker, Baltimore Orioles right hander were the unanimous American League choices. Philadelphia Phillies third baseman Richie Allen and Cincinnati Reds left hander Billy McCool were the National League selections.

Handgun League Plans Shoot

The Quinte Handgun League is holding its annual Labatt Trophy shoot at the Trenton Outdoor range Sunday at 1.30 p.m.

Competing for the team title, as well as individual honors, will be the Quinte Marksmen and the Northern Electric Handgun Club, both of Belleville, and the Trenton Handgun Club.

The Trenton Club holds the trophy at the present time. It has been won by the Quinte Marksmen on two previous occasions.

Individual trophies include the Don Bell Trophy, for the top shot, won by Quinte's Henry Tom last year, as well as for master, expert, sharpshooter, marksmen and tyro's 1, 2 and 3.

The public is invited to attend the shoot at the Trenton range, located behind the Quinte Machine building, on Highway 33.

WAIVE McDOUGALL

NEW YORK (AP)—San Diego Chargers of the American Football League reactivated two players from the injured list Thursday and put two veterans on waivers. One of those waived was fullback Gerry McDougall, who formerly played with Hamilton and Toronto in the Canadian Football League.

Expect 6 Teams In Industrial Hockey League

A small turnout kept organization at a minimum as the Belleville Industrial Hockey League held its first meeting last night.

Jack Hughes said that seven teams have shown interest in entering the loop, "and three of them are in the definite class."

He said that there should be no trouble arranging a six-team league. Names of the expected entries were not disclosed.

Another meeting has been called for next Wednesday night. The October 7 meeting will be held at the Belvedere Hotel; Room 32, at eight o'clock.

Players have been asked to attend the next meeting, as well as team and possible league officials. If enough persons turn out, plans call for a league executive to be formed.

Claims He Was 'Crucified'

Driver Suspended Year

TORONTO (CP) — Clarence (Shorty) Lockhart of Colling wood, Ont., suspended for a year Thursday by the Ontario Racing Commission, says he "wouldn't race horses again as long as the commission has the power it has."

"A driver has a rope around his neck," the 56-year-old harness racing driver-trainer said after being suspended for driving conduct unfair to the public interest. The offence occurred in the seventh race at Greenwood Raceway here Aug. 8.

He said he "moved over" during the race after another driver had shouted: "Look out. My horse is choking."

Earlier Thursday the commission upheld an appeal by Lockhart, who had been suspended with Murray Waples of Victoria Harbour for affecting the outcome of a race Aug. 4.

Judgment on Waples' appeal was reserved until further investigations, which resume Oct. 15.

"I win the appeal on one charge and then get suspended on another," Lockhart said.

"In a way I'm glad it's over I felt that if they didn't get me today they would get me tomorrow on any charge they wanted."

He said he felt he was being crucified for the faults of others, not all of them horsemen.

"I hope the commission will clean up all parts of the sport."

Lockhart said he plans to sell his stable of 20 horses, which have been prohibited from racing for a year.

Gord Kingston, an Oshawa harness driver-trainer, was suspended Monday for five years for betting on one horse while his son was driving another in the same Aug. 5 race.

Kingston Meets Parsons In One-Game Final

Belleville Parsons Cleaners and the Kingston Crusaders battle tooth to a sudden-death game for the Kingston and District Soccer League championship.

A Parson spokesman said this morning that the game will be played at 8.30 Monday night, in Kingston's McGaffin Stadium.

This will be Belleville's third consecutive sudden-death game. Last year, it played in Kingston. Parsons have won the two earlier games, by a single goal each, to reach the finals.

Intercollegiate Football

Gaels Again Favorites

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Pre-season betting says there won't be much change in the top and bottom of the standings compared with last year when the Senior Intercollegiate Football Conference ends its current season.

Queen's University Golden Gaels are again favored to dominate the four-team league, with University of Toronto Blues heading for the cellar.

League play gets under way Saturday.

The Gaels, who open defence of the Yates Cup at University of Western Ontario, have eight of 10 all-stars from last season's squad returning. In two pre-season games Queen's beat Loyola in Montreal 48-6 and dropped Toronto East York Argus of the Senior Ontario Rugby Football Union, 48-13.

Their strength again will come from veteran quarterback Cal Conner and power-running fullback Jim Young. Halfback Barrie Norris is another returning all-star and up front are all-star guards Bill Miklas and John Jarbeau.

Other returning all-stars are ends Pete Thompson and Larry Ferguson and middle - guard Merv Daub.

Blues will meet McGill University Redmen at Montreal Saturday.

The Blues still enter the season on a sour note after dropping all of them out with injuries.

Bob Pampe, a defensive tackle, is the only returning lineman who will play Saturday.

The two unknown quantities are McGill tedmen and Western Mustangs.

Quarterback Gary Smith, who led University of Alberta Golden Bears to a post - season victory over Queen's last year, is with the Mustangs this season and will probably be their starting pivot. He completed 14 of 19 passes in Western's exhibition victory over London Lords of the Senior OFRU last Saturday.

The return of fullback Gary Cramner provides the Mustangs with their greatest threat. Cramner, an all-star two seasons ago, was ineligible last year.

Redmen Plan New Pass Play

MONTREAL (CP) — McGill Uni ersity Redmen launch a new-found pass offence against University of Toronto Varsity Blues Saturday in the Senior Intercollegiate Football Conference opener for both teams.

"We have wanted to pass more in recent years, but we either lacked a passer or the receivers to do the job," McGill coach Bill Bewley said Thursday. "This season we have both and I think we have finally arrived as a passing club."

Bewley's decision was chiefly over the healthy state of quarterback Glen St. John, a disappointment last season because of injuries and ill health.

Would be a good backup quarterback prospect is Dick Ripstein, standout last season with suburban Cote St. Luc Jets. In addition, Bewley feels he has six potentially strong receivers in the starting backfield.

McGill finished third in the Quebec conference last season, their only victories coming at the expense of the Blues, by 40-13 and 3-4 margins.

LOSE SEVEN

The Blues, cellar-dwellers the last four years, start the new campaign without seven first-string players. On Saturday, they will be playing for the third time in seven days, having just returned from a western exhibition tour where they were defeated by the Alberta Golden Bears and the University of Manitoba Bisons.

Redmen have lost about 10 first - string players, including halfback Willie Lambert, who scored 60 of McGill's 81 points last season.

Canadians Win Shy Of Berth

YOKOHAMA (CP) — Canada moved within one victory of clinching a berth in the Olympic basketball tournament in Tokyo this month by beating Formosa 96-79 in qualifying play here today.

The win gave the Canadians a record of five wonderful against two losses after seven rounds of the 10-country round-robin pre - Olympic qualifying competition.

Out of the pre-Olympic play will come the four countries which will advance into the Olympics and play against 12 nations already selected into the tournament proper.

With two more rounds left Canada plays The Philippines Saturday and Cuba Sunday. Both are formidable opponents.

A difference in height told the story of the game as the Canadians, with only two players under six feet, dominated the back boards on rebounds.

The Chinese jumped off into the lead but were overtaken by the Canadians 10-8 after five minutes of play and Canada held this lead the rest of the way.

Canada led at halftime 38-33 After 17 minutes of the second

GRAIN INSUFFICIENT

Pakistan produces about 10 per cent less food grains than it needs to feed its 96,000,000 population.

PARIS (CP) — Catherine Lacoste, 18-year-old daughter of former French Davis Cup tennis ace Rene Lacoste, shot France into a one-stroke lead over the United States and Britain in Thursday's opening round of the women's world golf team championship.

The Canadian team was fourth.

Miss Lacoste was the only one of 75 players from 25 countries to break the par-72 over the 5,933-yard St. Germain course near Paris.

She gave her the lead in the individual competition, one stroke ahead of Canada's Ball Harvey, Mexican Barbara Fay White and Britain's Bridget Jackson.

Each national team entered three players for the four-day, 72 - hole championship, being played for the first time but expected to become a biennial fixture. The two best individual scores count for the team total.

FRANCE HAD 147

Miss Lacoste's 72 and a 75 turned in by Brigitte Varangot gave France a 147 total. The other member of the French team, Claudine Cros, shot a 78.

Miss White's 73 was coupled with the 74 of Carol Sorrenson, who won the British women's amateur title last week. Barbara Romack, U.S. women's champion, shot an 80.

Britain matched the U.S. total of 149 with a 73 by Miss Jackson and a 76 by Marley Spearman. Ruth Porter shot an 80.

Canada's first-round total was 162, made up of Miss Harvey's 37-36—73 and the 40-36 fired by Joanne Goulet of Regina. The third member of the Canadian team, Betty Cole, shot 37-42—80. Both Miss Harvey and Mrs. Cole are Torontonians.

In a tie at 150 were the Belgian, Australian and New Zealand teams.

MISSED PUTTS

Miss Harvey, 21, hit every green in two shots, but lacked confidence on the greens.

"I got off to a bad start by three - putting the first," she said.

"From that point I gradually lost my confidence, on the greens and three - putted on three other occasions going out and once coming home."

Mrs. Cole declared:

"I had to wait so often between shots that my concentration went."

In all she missed five greens, three - putted once and was in five bunkers.

"I was in so many traps," she said, "that I feel as though I spent the day on the beach."

half, the score was 80-97 in favor of Canada.

Al Birtles, 27-year-old native of Carbon, Alta., who now lives in Vancouver, and Formosa's Chen Chin-lang shared the scoring honors, each with 29 points. Fred Ingleson of Winnipeg was the next-best scorer with 19 points and Keith Hartley of Vancouver had 16.

Snell, Halberg Top N. Z. Team

Canadian Press Correspondent
By J. C. GRAHAM

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP)—New Zealand hopes for at least 10 Olympic medals, possibly three of them gold, from the 68 athletes going to Tokyo this month.

The team includes three former Olympic champions, Peter Snell and Murray Halberg, who won gold medals in 5,000 - metres respectively at Rome in the 1960 Games, and Peter Mulgrew, who won the 1956 at Melbourne, who will compete in the Finn class this time.

The team's 16 officials include two coaches—one each for track and field and rowing. Previously coaches have never been included officially on New Zealand teams. Even the world-famous track coach Arthur Lydiard went to the 1960 Games as an unofficial visitor, his expenses paid by track enthusiasts.

His success with New Zealand athletes, particularly Snell and Halberg, led to his designation as the official coach for 1964.

TRAIN IN WINTER

The team, selected months before going to Tokyo, has been battling heavy odds to reach peak form in the depths of a particularly wet and bleak southern hemisphere winter. Such sports as yachting and rowing have been kept in full swing.

Track athletes train through out the year—100 miles a week of winter roadwork is not unusual under the Lydiard system and the distance runners, chief New Zealand medal-winners for many years, treat sub-zero hail and snow with indifference.

Only small heated pools are available for swimmers and they have worked under severe handicaps compared with their northern hemisphere rivals, who were able to train outdoors almost to the date of their departure for Tokyo, the end of September.

No lengthy Olympic training camps are held in New Zealand. Athletes generally are unable to take the time off from work.

ROWERS TOGETHER

The nearest thing to a long-term team training program was undertaken by the rowing eight. All young, single men from all parts of New Zealand, they moved to Auckland a year ago and got jobs in the city. They trained daily before an. after work in the basement of a large house made available by a rowing supporter in return for gardening services.

Any successes earned by New Zealanders at Tokyo will be won the hard way.

The best hopes for gold medals are in the distance runners. Snell is perhaps not quite the runner he was in the year or two after the last Olympics when he lowered world records at 800 yards and a mile almost at will. But he has broken four minutes for the mile regularly and could rise to the occasion either in the 800 or 1,500 metres.

Halberg, a veteran at 31, will defend his 5,000-metre title but likely to be a greater threat in 10,000 metres. Starting performances at the close of the New Zealand track season showed that his fantastic determination cannot be ignored.

Barry Magee, who won a third-place bronze medal in the marathon at Rome, couldn't make the 1964 marathon team although he qualified in the 10,000 metres. Jeff Julian, winner of the "Little Olympics" marathon at Rome last year, and R. L. Puckett, who beats him at Rome, are strong possibilities for a medal.

BAILLIE A THREAT

That still leaves the fantastic Bill Baillie, who wins races at anything from the half-mile to the 26-mile, 385-yard marathon, breaks four minutes for the mile and this year established world records for 20,000 metres and the one-hour run. He is nominated for 5,000 and 10,000 metres and no one can count any race a won when he is on the track.

Two women athletes are prospects for medals. Miss Valerie Young, winner of the shot put and discus at the 1962 British Empire Games and fourth in the shot at Rome in 1960, is returning, together with Marise Chamberlain, former 400 - metre world - record holder, who runs close to world class at 800 metres.

In spite of the eight's dedicated training, a four - oared crew from Auckland beat the eight by a length.

Athletes generally are unable to take the time off from work.

medal in Tokyo.

Field hockey, cycling, equestrian, boxing, wrestling, gymnastics, weightlifting and swimming teams have been somnated but their medal chances are not rated high.

Tomorrow: Three - member panel picks New Zealand team.

Test 'Pix' From Tokyo Said Good

WASHINGTON (AP)— Americans hopes of seeing good television shots of the Olympic Games were boosted Thursday by the quality of test pictures relayed from Japan by Syncom 3.

The satellite is hovering 22,300 miles over the Pacific.

The communications Satellite Corporation (COMSAT) professed even better pictures for the formal inauguration of the transpacific TV space link Oct. 6, with the installation of highly refined specialized equipment flown from Tokyo to this country with a team of Japanese engineers.

The test pictures were flown across the continent for distribution. The real things from the Olympic Stadium will be microwaved from Point Mugu, Calif., to Los Angeles for network showing.

Fracas With Police

'Lion Roars,' Fined $850

VANCOUVER (CP) — Tackle Bill Frank, a mainstay of the tough offensive line of the British Columbia Lions, Thursday was fined a total of $850 following an early morning fracas with police.

His linemate, tackle Lonnie Dennis, escaped with a sharp rap to the nose.

Frank, 26 years old and six-foot-five weighing 260 pounds, spent several hours in jail before posting $300 bond. Later, he was fined $350 for impaired driving. A charge of assaulting a policeman was withdrawn. His driver's licence was suspended for six months.

That was only the beginning of his troubles. Lions fined him an additional $500 and placed him on a strict curfew.

It was the second such incident for the Lions in recent weeks. On Sept. 12, Dick Fouts —a former Toronto Argonauts player now with the defensive squad of the western champion team—was charged with impaired driving but pleaded not guilty.

Fouts' case has not been heard, but Lions fined him $250 for conduct detrimental to football.

Police said they checked a car in the downtown area early today when they noticed it screeching back and forth peeling rubber.

Police said Frank, the driver, resisted when they told him he was under arrest. They handcuffed him to the steering wheel and called for reinforcements.

Dennis, identified by police as one of the passengers who had left, returned and tried to calm Frank. It was then he suffered a sharp rap to the nose. The club said later his nose was not broken.

Lose 9 Of First 11 Games

'Breakless' Bombers Sad

WINNIPEG (CP) — Bud Grant, coach of Winnipeg Blue Bombers, wants to know where all the breaks have gone.

"We used to sit back and wait for them," he said Thursday, his memory drifting back to the triumphant years of 1958 to 1961 and four Bombs Grey Cup victories.

Few breaks have come Bombers' way during the current Western Football Conference season. Their strength sapped by injuries to 17 players, they have lost nine of their first 11 games—the last eight in succession—to slide beyond reach of the playoffs and into last place.

"We haven't had any breaks for six games and we could use one if we're going to end this losing streak," Grant said as he prepared his squad for a non - televised clash with Calgary Stampeders Sunday.

Grant watched on television Tuesday night as Calgary earned a share of second place in the WFC with a 30-25 win over Toronto Argonauts with the aid of an interception, a blocked punt and a 105 - yard punt return.

"Those are the kind of breaks we'd like to get," he said.

KICKER NEEDED

There will be a shift in kicking chores since Bombers were forced to drop rookie Canadian place-kicker and punter Jack Robinson to make room for two linemen obtained from British Columbia Lions in a trade this week.

Grant picked a replacement Wednesday night when he walked into the practice field dressing room and said: "I need a punter. Who's willing?"

Linebacker Bill Whisler (11) raised his hand. "Frankly, I didn't know he could punt," said the coach.

Converts and place kicking will be handled by veteran halfback Leo Lewis.

DYKES RESIGNS

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Jimmie Dykes, 67, veteran coach of Kansas City Athletics, has resigned. Dykes, third base coach who is in his 48th year of professional baseball, said Thursday that he had signed as coach under Ed Lopat. He felt he should, in justice to Mel McGaha, the current manager, step out of the picture. McGaha succeeded Lopat June 12.

Fall Fair in Campbellford Annual Event Since 1855

CAMPBELLFORD — Sunny skies and moderate weather were one of the reasons for such a large crowd at Campbellford Fair on Wednesday. The other reason for such a turn out is the good quality of exhibits maintained over the years, this being the 110th year that the fair has been held.

The fair was opened by Russell Rowe of Cobourg, M.P. for Northumberland County. Mr. Rowe stated a fair was among the first activities of pioneers, probably being more of a chance to sell animals at that time rather than a competitive exhibit. The growth of competition, with the resulting upgrading of stock, has produced the fairs of today, even to C.N.E. and Royal Winter Fair.

Tying in with the fair was the centennial of cheese making in the area, an area which is widely known for the quality and quantity of cheese produced. To emphasize the event a parade had been arranged, headed by a Ford car of 1911 vintage in excellent condition, owned by Sherwin Stapley. With Mr. Stapley was Allen Cragg, president of the Seymour Agricultural Fair. Following the centennial float the parade became progressively modern, the second vehicle, a one horse drawn wagon carrying a 40-gallon milk can and a wooden whey puncheon seldom if ever seen from now on by Fred Thompson. The third vehicle was a team-drawn large wagon with large cream and cheese boxes, driver Garnet Craighead.

The next in line, a modern, expensive car, but not as its passenger Northumberland Dairy Princess, Ann McCleary, accompanied by William Moore, local cheese inspector.

The next vehicle was a milk truck from Warkworth Cheese Co. with the eight gallon milk cans now in use and lastly, the very modern bulk milk transport from Evergreen Cheese Co., Stirling.

HISTORY OF CHEESE

Mrs. William Hume gave a brief history of the industry, stating the first cheese factory in Canada was built in Oxford County in 1864. Cheese was made in early years by women.

In 1855-56 the first cheese factory was built in Hastings County at Wellman's Corners, due to the aggressiveness of Thomas Hume, James Whitton, William Clue. This was a joint stock company.

This at that time was considered a large expensive building, built under the supervision of Professor King, from the United States at a cost of $1,000. The milk was hauled twice a day by wagon and can, four cows were average herd, income $5 per week. This factory was later closed and sold.

Later another factory was built, in the meantime cheese was made at Mr. Whitton's home by Mrs. Hume, one of the pioneers of the area. J. B. Ferris, M.P. at that time, stated a cow should make a farmer $30 a year.

In 1873 Brae Cheese and Butter factory was organized, with James Whitton cheesemaker, who later won prizes in Toronto. Now Hastings County is ranked as the largest cheese producing county in Ontario.

Some cheese and butter plants today are estimated to be worth $200,000 to $250,000.

Mrs. Hume introduced Northumberland Dairy Princess, Valda McCleary, who spoke briefly. William Moore, cheese inspector, expressed his appreciation to the Seymour Agricultural Society for helping to recognize the cheese centennial.

MANY CONTESTS

Events on the platform for the rest of the afternoon were the usual contests of largest family, one woman was heard to remark she was sure she had the largest family but she could not find all 'of them. Nail driving contest for women; Mrs. Robert Lisle has won this contest for three successive years, using only four seconds; the youngest baby, best dressed baby, oldest person on the grounds and many others.

The 4-H Club had 28 entries, of this number there were only two Ayrshire calves, two jersey calves, the rest Holstein. Peter Oddie is president of the local club, with Jean Parker as secretary. Winner of the group was Ben Hart; second prize, Lorne McKeown, and for showmanship in presenting the calf was Fay Petherick. These clubs are an outstanding agricultural youth project.

In the cattle barn, activity was great. Black and White Day was held with an entry of 169 Holstein cattle. Local exhibitors were: Earl Nelson, Craig Nelson, Elmer Nicholson and Sons, Henry Oliver, Des Hay, John Goodfellow, Percy Honey and Sons; Thomas Convey, altogether there were 35 exhibitors of the Black and White cattle.

As this was the first Black and White Day held at Campbellford special interest was shown in the preparation in regard to spectator accommodation and show ring facilities.

Senior and Grand Champion bull prize went jointly to Gordon Macklin, Cobourg, and W. A. Atkinson and Son, Roseneath. Reserve Grand Champion bull to Stonydell Farms, Dartford.

Trophies won were Northumberland Holstein Club for true type and production to Earl Nesbitt, Codrington. The A. J. Tamblyn trophy for Grand Champion female to Fay Petherick and Sons. The Master Feed trophy for produce of dam to Neil Nelson. Trophies will be presented later at a banquet.

Judges for Ayrshire classes were Elmer Woods, Crookston; Duncan Macmillan, Lanark. In the Jersey class, Wayne Kerr, Campbellford, had a fine exhibit.

Judge for Holstein cattle was J. M. Fraser, Streetsville, president of Canadian National Exhibition. Judges for Ayrshires and Jerseys, Cecil Morrison, Queensville.

HORSE RACING

Horse racing drew the interest and caused the most excitement, with results in the C, Class A, Free-for-All classes, two heats each.

HORSES AND SWINE

A good showing of heavy horses by G. Robinson, Cavan; A. Dawson of Lindsay, E. Wood of Madoc, especially in the 4-horse teams. Other showings of driving horses, mares, ponies, made up a good horse show.

Swine classes were for the most part Yorkshire. Sheep classes were also a fine exhibit.

END TO END — A photographer mounted a "fish-eye" lens on a 35-millimetre camera and achieved this end-to-end view of the Lion's Gate bridge in Vancouver. The extreme wide-angle lens photographs at a 180-degree angle. (CP Photo)

The midway with ferris wheel and swings did a thriving business with the younger generation. The two ten or eleven year old boys were observed spinning the wheel, one received a pair of cheap white earrings, the other an imitation lemon.

They walked away still eyeing the little translator radio, which probably has done the entire fair circuit. They may have lost in material value but probably gained in experience.

One of the women's building the crafts were well displayed and were of large quantity. One lady exhibitor, Sister Sue's Valentine party, was won by Seymour West W.I. Quilts, rugs, sewing displayed many hours of careful work.

The pies, cakes, tarts, etc., showed the affluence of the society in which we live and to a part of the world which goes to bed hungry every night would seem an unreal as a mirage.

School exhibits were interesting and clever, one observer was heard to say, "They teach children a lot more now than they did when I went to school."

The exhibit from Merryvale School for the retarded children received favorable comments.

And so ended an annual affair which had its humble beginning one hundred and ten years ago.

Manufacturers Mark Industrial Day Sponsored by C. of C.

CAMPBELLFORD — The town of Campbellford held the first Industrial Day on October 1st. Sponsored by the Municipal Council and Chamber of Commerce this was the culmination of plans and discussions, according to Douglas Mabee president of the Chamber, over a number of years.

Neither effort nor expense were spared to make the day a memorable one. Following morning activities lunch was served at Riviera Inn to about 100 Campbellford businessmen and 12 visitors. Hector MacMillan acted as chairman, Rev. Owen Barrow one of the guests, with R. Radford, Department of Economics, R. F. Fyffe, British American Oil, Stan Durrant, C.N.R., B. P. Hayes, vice-president Campbellford Cloth Co., and others.

BUS TOUR

During the afternoon the group was taken on a bus tour of the town including Percy Memorial Park and Ranney Falls on the Trent. Boats took the group up the river and canal to again convene at Riviera Inn when a smorgasbord was enjoyed.

Between 80 and 60 were present including Russell Rowe, M.P.; Mr. Gemmell, Royal Bank, Toronto; W. H. Moise, Bank of Montreal, Toronto; Edmund Opler, Toronto; W. G. Berner, secretary Campbellford Cloth and Barrymore Carpet Co., Toronto; Warren Wolsley, British American Oil; Messrs. Bowerman, Standish and Paton, Bata Shoe Co., Batawa; J. H. Guest, Cobourg; J. A. Robson, Toronto, as well as others, and over 30 Campbellford residents.

Chairman Hector MacMillan introduced the guests, Russell Rowe, M.P. speaking briefly commended the efforts of the committee and spoke of the further development and expansion of established industries also that the attitude of local authorities is the most important asset any community has to sell.

CERTIFICATES PRESENTED

Certificates of appreciation were presented to local industries for their contribution to the economy of the town, Breithaupt Leather Co., Campbellford Cloth Co., Simpson Bros. Marine Co., Cooke's Chocolate, Foldaway Furniture, Bata Shoe, Trent Valley Creamery, Anderson Dairy, Campbellford Silos, Rathbford Dairy, Subsidiary Canadian Flight, M. Horsman, Wallace Stapley Machine, Thompson Bros. Construction, George Pashker.

GUEST SPEAKER

The speaker at the evening Mr. Barry P. Hayes, vice-president of Campbellford Cloth and Barrymore Carpet Co. was introduced by A. Morris, manager of the Campbellford plant.

In his address Mr. Hayes stated that in Canada a variety of industrys are celebrated but one seldom hears of Industrial Day as a national holiday. Industry is largely overlooked. Industrial growth particularly since World War II means different things to different people, new products, new processes are cutting a swath through old established practices.

NEW PRODUCTION

Communities which fail to adapt to the era of new production fail their young generation. Mr. Hayes quoted statistics to show that 51 per cent of all unemployed are between the ages of 15 to 24 years, young men and women just starting in life. They have held no good job in the first place hence automation is not to blame, although automation is shrinking the jobs available, one half million new jobs must be created in the immediate future. Many reasons are given for the influx in the labor market such as change from agriculture to industry, geographical position living next door to the most affluent neighbor, the cheap labor of Asia and European countries which offset transportation costs and Canada's own national inferiority complex.

Mr. Hayes continued by saying that obstacles are not insurmountable quoting his own company as an example which reached a sales of 1950 to recover by 1963 more than 100 per cent due to getting in on the ground floor in the use of a new technology in the manufacture of carpets. What is true of textiles can be true of other industries, he said.

IMPORTANCE of EDUCATION

Summing up Mr. Hayes quoted four important points, education of young people, educated workers are necessary, secondly a community must provide a suitable environment where industry can grow, tax and assessment consideration; social, religious and cultural facilities. Taxes must figure in final cost of goods and are a real concern to highly competitive industries. Mr. Hayes said the taxes of his company in Campbellford had doubled.

In closing his address, Mr. Hayes said the community must give whole hearted support, communities which are alert and progressive will obtain industrial growth and thus provide their young people the option of remaining in their own community.

Robert Bennett thanked Mr. Hayes for his address and presented him with a gift of gem stones.

Call for Federal Aid as Medical Schools Fear Crisis

By JOHN LeBLANC
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian medical schools are turning away prospective doctors in droves for lack of facilities to handle students.

Some authorities say the situation, with Canada suffering a shortage of doctors, is serious One calls it tragic. Others suppose the federal government move into this historically provincial field.

The picture varies with different parts of the country but Dr A. D. Kelly, general secretary of the Canadian Medical Association, says each of every three qualified applicants at the 13 medical schools had to be rejected this fall.

However, some officials hold the situation is not as bleak as they statistics suggest. Many—if not most—students apply at several schools, so an applicant may appear as a reject repeatedly but actually get into a class somewhere.

But a Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press indicates that the total of Canada's medical schools are either undermanned or lacking in facilities for both—and that hundreds of qualified students are being rejected for this lack.

WANTS OTTAWA AID

Murray Barr, dean of medicine at the University of Alberta, Dr. W. C. MacKenzie, dean of medicine at Saskatchewan, will have to do something about it.

"So far medical education in Alberta has been a provincial responsibility," he said. "I feel it's time now to look to the Dominion. Dr. E. H. Botterell, dean of medicine, said there is "great pressure" on the academic resources.

University of Ottawa provided the most lopsided acceptance-rejection ratio. Space limited openings in first-year medicine to 78, and 42 of these went to the university's own pre-medical graduates. There were 100 places remaining and about 450 aspirants for these. About 200 Canadians were among those rejected. Only A- and B-average students had a chance.

At Dalhousie University in Halifax, Medical Dean Dr. C. B. Stewart said more medical schools are needed but student rejection figures create a false impression. Of 43 applications to Dalhousie from outside the Atlantic provinces, all had supplied to at least one other Canadian school and some to three or four.

A true statistical picture is needed, he said, and the Association of Canadian Medical Colleges now is setting up a central registry which will correct "meaningless" statistics.

Dalhousie, only medical school in the four seaboard provinces, accepted 65 of 105 Atlantic provinces applicants. Dean Stewart did not blame the rejections on overcrowding but said that if the present increase in applicants continues, quite a number may have to be turned down for this reason. Applications from within the Atlantic provinces have almost tripled in the last five years.

On the other coast, the University of British Columbia's medical school reported that 60 per cent of about 300 applicants were admitted to the entering class. Dr. James Mather, assistant dean of medicine, said this left no scholastically qualified B.C. resident has been turned down yet this year. Dr. O. M. Wassen, dean of the rejected applicants—many from other countries—were disqualified for one reason or another.

At the University of Saskatchewan's college of medicine in Saskatoon, 50 students were admitted to first-year medicine. The college is overcrowded in its teaching and research areas, said an additional 50 could be admitted.

The University of Manitoba's faculty of medicine had more than 200 applicants for the 76 admitted. "We're full up and any more would result in overcrowding," a faculty official said. On the average, the college turns down 35 qualified applicants.

At the Belle

BEATLES THEMSELVES IN "HARD DAY'S NIGHT"

Once The Beatles had agreed to make their first feature film, the problem was finding the right story. "A Hard Day's Night," is the result and it opens tonight with special preview presentations at 6.00 and 8.30 at the Belle Theatre.

These special preview tickets for tonight's showings, guarantee the buyer a seat, as only the actual seating capacity of the theatre will be sold, and they are now on sale at the Belle Theatre box office.

It wasn't as easy as it might seem, smiles Walter Shenson, who launched Peter Sellers as an international star in "The Mouse That Roared" and whose producorial hand guided The Beatles' first movie venture. "Once we had figured out the right elements for the boys — and their fans — everything fell smoothly into place".

"We've never even considered a routine musical comedy story line which we'd have tried to squeeze them. I started with the premise that we had to find a writer who understood them and their background, and then work along from there. We were lucky in finding Alun Owen free to do the script. He comes from Liverpool the same city as The Beatles, and he's young enough to be in complete rapport with them. He spent several weeks just getting acquainted and traveling around on tour with them before he typed out his first scene.

"Alun and I and The Beatles all agreed that it would be best to have them play themselves — four boys who come to London from Liverpool to do a big TV show and get in the middle of a lot of funny complications. This was the pattern and it resulted in what we consider a bright, friendly, funny and entertaining motion picture".

Declare Area A 'Wilderness'

Week by Week Members, Workers on B and B Board Dig up New Facts, Figures

By RONALD LESEL

OTTAWA (CP) — Week by week, members and employees of the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism dig up new facts, figures and observations about Canada's cultural resources.

The commission embarked on a quiet, searching study in mid-June after holding open forums in 23 cities. It is not expected to return to the glare of public meetings until the end of the year.

In the interval, the commission has not been idle. Among other things, it has:

—Received, summarized and analyzed about 250 formal briefs from organizations and individuals, the majority from Ontario and Quebec;

—Launched a wide - ranging research program with the help of 65 full-time and 25 part-time workers, mostly recruited from universities;

—Sent representatives to students' conferences, cultural conferences and seminars to collect ideas and explain the aims of its inquiry;

—Made plans for private interviews with representatives of professionals, farmers, students, business, labor various ethnic groups and educational institutions.

"The atmosphere is one of confidence and dynamism," commented Paul Lacoste commission co-secretary.

NE HEARINGS DELAYED

He said internal reports are being prepared for the 10 commissioners to summarize and interpret the opinions and proposals expressed by participants in the grass-roots forums last spring.

The commission is considering whether to draft an interim report to the government on its initial findings, but no decision has been made so far.

More briefs are expected from key national organizations and for this reason no firm schedule has been worked out to date for the public hearings where the briefs will be made public and discussed in detail.

The commission originally expected to begin its hearings in late September or early October, but this target date likely will be pushed back to November or December. The bulk of the hearings will be held in the first half of 1965.

The commission plans to visit all 10 provincial capitals and several cities in Ontario and Quebec.

Appointed July 22, 1963, the commission is not expected to issue its final report until 1967. Results of many research projects will not be available until a year from now.

Several hundred servicemen and civil servants and officials of crown corporations have asked to air views about the extent of bilingualism in private interviews with commissioners and staffers.

These interviews will be worked into the schedule of public hearings as time becomes available.

Book Scheme Builds Commonwealth Libraries

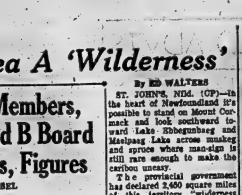
LONDON (CP) — A scheme that has provided more than 1,000,000 books for parts of the Commonwealth badly in need of library facilities has won praise from the Duke of Edinburgh, who called it a "tremendous achievement."

In his message of congratulation to the English-Speaking Commonwealth book scheme sponsored by the English-Speaking Union, of which he is president, Prince Philip added:

"I want to send my thanks and congratulations to all the children and grown-ups in Britain, Canada, Australia and New Zealand who have collected and given books to this scheme. Their generosity has made this scheme a practical possibility, but I must also pay a tribute to those who redistribute the books overseas according to local needs and standards of education.

"I very much hope that this scheme will grow and flourish with the years. This voluntary effort has an immense practical value to education in many Commonwealth countries but it is also a most effective way of bringing many people of the Commonwealth into contact with each other and so strengthening the Commonwealth idea all over the world."

STARTED IN 1959



The scheme, which collects, sorts, packs, ships and distributes books of all kinds—free of charge — particularly children's books, classics and textbooks was started by the Countess of Ranfurly in 1959. She found that a shortage of reading material in many underdeveloped parts of the Commonwealth was limiting education and leading to illiteracy.

All nine Canadian branches of the English-Speaking Union participate in the book-gathering scheme. They are in Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Hamilton, Quebec City, Vancouver, Victoria, Winnipeg and Wellington, Ont.

Montreal branch in particular was singled out as being "specially active" in the scheme by a spokesman for the English-Speaking Union in London. "Whatever anybody else does, Montreal always seems to do that little bit better," the official said.

Each High School Year Adds Dollars to Income

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

For anyone thinking of dropping out of school, Michael Anfossi has dug some interesting statistics out of bureau of statistics reports.

For example, he says, each year of high school adds an additional $238 to potential annual income. And matriculation is worth an extra $606 a year.

Mr. Anfossi is manager of the National Employment Service placement centre in Montreal and his office is making every effort to help young people who come looking for a job to go back to school instead.

Statistics and common sense are his ammunition.

"Many leave their studies at an early age because they are attracted by the prospect of independence and the things that $35 or $40 a week can buy," he says.

"But many of them learn too late that while this amount of money may be just fine at 15 or 17, it doesn't get them very far when they have to support a family."

DEAD-END JOBS

Mr. Anfossi says many young people fail to realize that education at a relatively high level is being demanded in all but "dead-end" jobs.

The youth service deals with applicants 18 to 21 without significant working experience. It gets aptitude tests to determine interests and abilities And if an applicant is deter mined to go to work, the centre will try to find a suitable job.

But other areas are explored, too, in the possibility of enrolling in a government-sponsored vocational training course.

And in trying to convince teen-agers they should take another crack at school, Mr. Anfossi likes to knock down stories about the "self-made man."

"I can't say the same man will tell you that things would have been a little easier if he had remained in school."

This Season's Daniel Boone Like Davy Crockett in Past

By CYNTHIA LOWEY

NEW YORK (AP) — Fess Parker and his coonskin cap are back, and the resemblance of this season's "Daniel Boone" to season's one "Davy Crockett" is nothing short of amazing.

And, it should be added, the resemblance of the Thursday night NBC series' plots to those of 1,001 TV tales before it is remarkable, too. Kids of the coonskip cap age will love it.

Set in the period of the American revolution, "Daniel Boone" is a sort of horseless western. But it breaches the code of the West seriously because in this version, the mighty woodsman is a happily married fellow who lives with his pretty wife and two children in a settlement.

Thursday night's story was a nice familiar one. A hasty half-breed kidnapped a pretty Cherokee princess and swapped her in Boonesborough for a jug of rum and a horn of powder.

It turns out, though, that the princess is a white child brought up by a Cherokee chief after her parents had been dispatched by non-Cherokees.

Surely there must be a more rewarding way to spend an evening Thursday evening than watching this nonsense, even for 12-year-olds.

THE LITTLE WOMAN

Nuns as Printer's Devils Give Beauty to Book World

CALLOW END, England (CP)—"Printer's devil" is the common term for a press apprentice but the title is best used at nearby Stanbrook Abbey where gentle nuns work with ink and hot lead to produce some of the most beautiful books and broadsheets in Britain.

Before printing was invented, the "scriptorium" of an abbey was a busy place. There manuscripts were copied for distribution mainly among the clergy. Now Stanbrook's 40 nuns perform the scriptorium's modern equivalent. Books mainly of a religious nature are printed with painstaking care on handmade paper. Many are finished by hand illumination in gold and brightly colored inks.

The abbey was founded in 1625 and its printing history dates from 1876 when Brother Laurence Shepherd of the Order of Saint Benedict bought a small press and employed a local printer to teach him how to run it.

From then on, says the present printer, "we have passed the craft on from generation to generation, with occasional help from outside."

NO MEN ALLOWED

Now there are six presses, including the original one, and seven nuns running them. The nuns gallop the presses but if anything serious goes wrong with mechanical equipment, expert workmen are allowed into the cloistered abbey to carry out repairs.

However, typographical advice is spoken to the printer through a grille because technically no men are allowed inside.

No visitors may enter the press room itself, whether male or female, except the essential workmen. "All this is regulated by the Vatican," the printer said.

The spokesman's name can not be revealed. "Our object is to remain anonymous," a reporter was told. "We are strictly enclosed, behind grilles even—the strictest of all, known as Papal Enclosure."

The printer entered the Benedictine order in 1941. "I had never printed before and I didn't know anything about it," she said. "But I always loved books and collected first editions and beautiful bindings when I could afford them.

"I was put into the printing house to learn the craft when I was a novitiate. In 1956 I was appointed printer."

The press prints "fine editions" of poetry, medieval spiritual writings, histories of the Church Fathers and also plainer editions of liturgical books for the English-speaking laity in the OSB.

The actual printing operation is a whimsical but cunning blend of venerable and modern practices. The press on which the finest work is done has an automatic feeding mechanism capable of printing hundreds of sheets an hour. "But the automatic feed is detached and the damp handmade sheets are fed in slowly and carefully after stopping the machine between impressions," the printer said.

The nuns wear their usual habits as they operate about the machinery. However, long aprons protect the snowy-white portions of the habit.

After the sheets are dried and, in the case of books, bound, illuminated letters and designs are added. Much of this is done by two laymen—Harry and Margaret Adams, two Britons who collaborate with Stanbrook Press.

"We decide ourselves in consultation with the Lady Abbess what we print," the printer said. "We write things ourselves, and print what we write. Most of our publications are books that we either sell wrap, edit or translate."

Everything is subject to Roman Catholic censorship applied by the Roman Catholic archbishop in the Worcester diocese.

Distribution is done in various ways. Many books are available only to those inside the orders. Others are circularly toned work can be bought commercially. So can Christmas cards.

"We print for our own bread and butter," the printer said.

Some of the books are sold through rare - book dealers, mainly in London. Other purchasers hear about the press and write for lists. Still others form a large list of permanent subscribers to the press's publications.

Many permanent subscribers are in Canada. Cicely Blackstock, on the staff of the University of Toronto Library, has one of the best collections of Stanbrook work. The university displayed her collection last year.

Struggle Going on Among Indian Political Parties For Leadership of Unions

By RUKMINI DEVI
Canadian Press Correspondent

BOMBAY (CP) — A struggle is going on among Indian political parties for the predominant role in leadership of the country's trade union movement.

The situation underlines the concern of government labor officials and a few unattached trade unionists who are already uneasy because of the almost total domination of the union movement by politicians—Communist and non-Communist.

With 14 times as many factories operating today as there were 10 years ago, the industrial labor force in India is nearing the 20,000,000 mark. This has whetted the appetite of political parties ever anxious to add to their militant strength.

Among those unhappy with conditions is V. V. Giri, 70-year-old veteran trade unionist and a former labor minister in the Nehru government. He says the working classes for whom the trade unions presume to speak have little voice in the conduct of the movement.

Competing for the loyalty of the workers are four major trade union organizations, all tightly controlled by one or another of India's national parties.

These are the Indian National Trade Union Congress whose leadership is provided by the ruling Congress Party, the Communist All India Trade Union Congress, the Democratic Socialist Hind Mazdoor Sabha (League of Indian Workers) and the Communist-leaning United Trade Union Congress.

HINDUS IN FIELD

Recently the Jana Sangh, a right - wing party with strong Hindu religious overtones, also entered the trade union field, particularly in industrial areas around New Delhi.

The Congress party's INTUC claims the largest membership with control of 1,200 workers' unions in India. This claim is challenged by the Communist AITUC which says INTUC's real strength is obscured by the effects of its employment of "government patronage."

The Democratic Socialists seem to be scoring at the expense of both, judging from the many strikes and protest marches they have organized single-handed in the last two months.

There is perhaps not a single industry in India not bedevilled by bitter rivalries among the four national labor organizations.

For example, five unions are fighting for the loyalty of steel workers at Rourkela, the big plant built by West Germany in eastern India. The fifth union is an AITUC splinter movement which looks to Peking instead of Moscow for inspiration.

In the Soviet - aided lignite plant at Neyveli in Madras State in south India, Communist and anti-Communist unions are similarly locked in a fight for leadership.

CAMPAIGN OPENLY

Indian political parties make no bones about their anxiety to strengthen their grip on the trade unions.

Even the Federation of Central Government Employes (with a membership of 2,500,000 federal workers) now gets its directives from the Democratic Socialists.

"The whole movement has deteriorated into squabbling by the political parties," says Kanji Dwarakdas, an authority on the trade union movement. "There is also a new element—hooliganism on an organized scale."

Dwarakdas, a colleague of the late Mohandas Gandhi, adds that unless a genuine effort is made to educate Indian workers in sound trade unionism, the entire movement in Bombay—the country's biggest industrial centre — may pass into the hands of Communists or Communist - led hooligans within five years.

Spokesmen for the unattached trade unionists say the ruling Congress party has set a bad example by using the INTUC as a political pressure group to enlist workers' support for the government.

INTERNAL FIGHTS

The whole situation is further complicated by personality conflicts and group politics within each of the four national labor organizations.

There is a move to isolate the Communists from the trade union movement. But, ironically, the isolation is intended not to build a genuine labor movement but to strengthen the hold of non-Communist political parties over it.

One reflection of efforts to contain the Communists is the action of non-Communist unions in informing them they will not co-operate in a projected general strike being organized by the Communists to protest rising food prices As a result the Communists have shelved the strike plan.

Government labor officials say the real aim of the strike plan would be to slow down industrial and defence production at a time when the defence minister is expressing concern about the possibility of another Chinese invasion across the Himalayas.

United appeals through work of citizen budget committees, distribute campaign dollars approximately sixteen per cent to Red Cross, forty-one per cent to welfare agencies, twenty percent to health services and twenty-three percent to recreation programs.

Greetings to Royalty Expressed Many Ways

By HELEN CATHCART

How many ways do you know of saying 'Hello'? The Queen and Prince Philip know at least a thousand — and they're still collecting. When her transatlantic plane wings down to Prince Edward Island en route to her new type yacht will be Quebec and Ottawa, the first welcome will be largely a non-civilian one between Her Majesty and her Canadian Air Force.

In discussing their travels, both the Queen and Prince Philip, have often talked with enthusiasm of all the national differences expressed in a greeting. They're the world's greatest connoisseurs of cheers, claxes, street decorations and crowd enthusiasm.

OF EGGS ALL

The Queen will probably never forget the overwhelming college yell of thousands of Montreal university students, shouting, "Rah! Rah! betty Windsor-" as if they had somehow confused her with a hockey star. Yet probably the noisiest noise was when Prince Philip opened the Melbourne Games in Melbourne — and the sustained roar of 120,000 people could be heard seven miles away.

Though flag-waving seems the same in any language, Chicago triumphantly struck novelty by firing rockets which released a val- of Union Jacks and Stars and Stripes descending by parachute. In Portugal, running short of banners, people spontaneously decorated their balconies and window-ledges with colorful bedspreads. This was emulated on the Mediterranean Isle of Capri . . .except that people hung out their carpets.

Nationalism — and even cities — differ amazingly in expressing applause. In Panama, city streets are littered around the royal couple wildly ringing handbells. In Balboa a frenzied blaze of flowers greeted the Queen, while Colon acknowledged her with a thunder of rhythmic hand-claps.

RUN BAREFOOTED

When a torrential rainstorm drenched this clattery welcome, women tore off their shoes, the better to run alongside the royal car on the wet roads shouting "Viva! Viva!"

Jamaica of course greets the Queen with calypsos. A chant called "Welcome, young Missus!" proved a steel-band top pop the last time the Queen was there. One recalls how a Jamaican staged a Walter Raleigh by flinging down his coat. But this gesture was timid compared to the Portugese students who flung their black cloaks into the roadway to form a carpeted avenue half-a-mile long.

KNEE-DEEP IN CONFETTI

The Portugese, too, specialized in flinging confetti — and when the Queen rode in an open car in Quebec she was swiftly knee-deep. The Pakistanis deluged her with flowers often flung with such gusto that the blooms stung her cheek. Her Indian hosts banned the traditional welcome of garlanding the visitor with flowers, lest the blossoms stained her dress. Nevertheless a garland of gold thread was slipped over her head so deftly in New Delhi that the gesture could not be forbidden.

The Duke of Windsor once deer-bed the great touching fever he experienced when visiting Canada a Prince of Wales. Everyone wanted to touch him and souvenir-hunters tore the buttons off his coat. "Shake hands!" the crowds yelled, and capped the words so vigorously th his hand was soon blackened and swollen and the surgeons feared permanent disablement.

Fortunately the Queen has rarely experienced this rather frightening crowd reaction. A strange modern equivalent occurred in the Indian colony city of Ahmadabad. Workers vigorously thumped the royal car while shouting out any English phrases they knew, such as 'Hullo!' 'Happiness!' and 'What is your name?'

ARCS CONCEALS SMALL BOYS

The brilliance of India's festooned floral arches astonished the Queen, remembering that she is to triumphant arches. She has seen them worked in wicker, straw, frull and vegetables, paper and aluminum. The little Pacific isle of Tonga struck a new note, however, with a floral arch in which 32 small boys were concealed. At the crucial moment, as the Queen passed beneath, they thrust out chubby hands waving Union Jacks.

The royal tour was remarkably gets involved in hospitality. When the Queen visited a brewery in Denmark, she found her initials emblazoned in gigantic size in the gold-caps of beer-bottles. Amsterdam went still better with a large 'E.R.' worked in diamonds.

"LIZ AND PHIL"

Children of nearly every nation have been paraded to form the Queen's initials in arenas anc stadiums o every size. New York tried to underline democratic emphasis by hanging up banners reading "Welcome Liz and Phil."

The Broadway ticker-tape ride too, was a highlight in welcomes though the Queen did not particularly like being bombarded with torn-up telephone books. The street cleaning department reported subsequently that they had cleared 200 tons of waste paper from from office w indows. Yet the New York crowds were not particularly demonstrative. They "stared in silence" — to quote royal records — though Chicago folk chanted, "Queenie! Queenie! Attagirl!" and a red carpet 800 yards long was laid for the royal feet to walk on.

WIPES HER FEET

Red carpets laid for the Queen are always so spotless that she invariably wipes her feet before leaving an aircraft and stepping onto a red carpet at an airport. Sometimes a carpet is too short but royal chauffeurs have standing instructions always to approach a red carpet as closely as possible.

One notable failure occurred in New York when the Waldorf Astoria laid down a new-type red carpet fashioned in circles. When the Queen arrived the 'fuzz' hadn't dried and she had to enter the hotel with a side door.

RED, WHITE AND BLUE DYE

Bunting, too, can sometimes cause trouble. On the memorable occasion when the Queen was welcomed to Dundalk, N.Z., by the nostalgic wail of the bagpipes, the decorations outside her hotel consisted of surplus stock naval flags. The Duke of Edinburgh noted with delight that they gave the signal "Danger. Am Loading High Explosives." In another town, whose shame shall be nameless, the colors in the bunting run in a heavy rainstorm and dripped red, white and blue dye on the royal visitors.

Then there was the strange tramping fever that beset the crowds in Nigeria, raising such clouds of dust that the Queen's frock was soon stained others. All the world has welcomed the Queen with lance and song. Her own firm emotional control must be by snapped when 100,000 people sang "God Save the Queen" to her on the Melbourne cricket ground—and a remarkable tribute was similarly paid in Rome when an assembly of thousands of nuns and priests sang our national anthem in nearly faultless English.

MEMORABLE FAREWELLS

Farewells, too, are often memorable. Rotterdam achieved a superb effect by raising hundreds of champagne glasses at the quayside as the Queen said goodbye. She was deeply touched, too, when she concluded a farewell broadcast in New Zealand and then heard the crowds outside her hotel singing with deep emotion, "Will ye no come back again?"

The Queen invariably promises, "I'll be coming back!" a promise she will no doubt renew on this trip.

Given Five Years For Attempt To Murder Wife

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Michael Kafka, 29, of RR 2 Essex, was sentenced Thursday to five years in penitentiary for the attempted murder of Doreen, 28, of Elaine, at a Windsor home May 28.

In connection with the same case, Lewis Cavanagh, 30, of Windsor, was sentenced to six months in jail on a charge of possession of a weapon dangerous to the public peace.

Both were previously found guilty by Supreme Court juries and appeared before Mr. Justice Edson Haines for sentencing. Cavanagh had originally been charged with attempting to murder Kafka.

Aussie Landlord Houses Cats, Dogs, Offbeat Types

SYDNEY, Australia (CP)— Sydney's most uncommercial landlord, boarded John Cohan, has a problem. He can't find enough unconventional tenants.

He runs an apartment house where he welcomes cats, dogs, musical instruments and off-beat hobbies.

He prefers artists who clutter up the place with easels and pots of paint and decorate his walls with way-out murals. He likes people who blow trumpets, belt the bongo drums or clack-clack away on typewriters all night.

His apartment house is a 13-room former mansion facing Sydney's Centennial Park.

Its tenants include a drummer, four artists and an elderly lady who daily sunbathes a battered piano. There are also four cats and a dog.

Cohan's first potential tenants, an elderly couple, fled when they saw him riding a boy's bicycle along the corridor, his red beard flowing over the handlebars, then drummed them to their room on a set of bongos.

Cohen doesn't live on the premises himself.

"I used to, but the tenants drove me batty—or I drove them batty. It was either me or them, so I left and took up lodgings."

Fire Sweeps BCI Woodworking Shop

Passing Postman Spots Flames; Loss Extensive

Cause of Fire Unknown; Started in Storeroom

Fire swept the woodworking shop at the Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School this morning.

Cause of the blaze is unknown.

Unknown, too, for the present, is the monetary cost. It will be heavy, running into thousands of dollars. Not only were the walls charred, but machinery was also damaged. The determination of the extent of this damage must await inspection by experts.

Aside altogether from the monetary loss is the disruption which the fire will cause in the studies at the school.

The woodworking shop is at the south end of the building, near the John Street entrance. The fire was discovered about 8.45 by postman Collin Smith, who was making his early morning mail deliveries in the immediate area.

It is believed the blaze broke out in a store room at the east end of the woodworking shop. Cabinets which hung on the walls of the store room and a small adjoining office, lay in charred ruins on the floor.

Firemen were able to confine the fire to the shop. There was very little water damage. However, because of the dense smoke, firemen had to wear air packs in order to enter the building and smoke damage was extensive.

Chief caretaker, H. S. Thurston told officials that everything was under control when he left the building last night.

Three fire trucks from No. 2 station and one from No. 1 fire hall answered the alarm. Fire Chief Gerald Vance commended his men for keeping the blaze confined to the shop. He said the smoke was terrible and at times the heat became almost unbearable.

An investigation into the fire is being conducted by the Fire Department.

The school maintenance staff will have to work overtime during the weekend to clean up the hallways and upper storey classroom.

Blame Trio For Death Of Child, 2

TORONTO (CP) — A coroner's jury ruled Friday that "criminal negligence" on the part of three persons was responsible for the death of two-year-old Kathy Krac Aug. 25—her mother, Mrs. Nancy Krac, her grandmother, Mrs Elva Musgrove, and her father George Ash.

The jury found that Kathy, born with a facial disfigurement and called an "ugly brat" by her father, died because of "bodily beatings, lack of medical attention and general maltreatment."

Mrs. Krac is divorced and Mrs. Musgrove cared for the child while the mother worked during the day.

Mrs. Krac said that Ash had beaten her when she was three months pregnant, that he was had tempered during the five months she had lived with him and that he was "mean to "Kathy". But she said he never struck any of her other three children.

The jury recommended that legislation be passed requiring members of the medical profession to report suspected cases of child beatings and maltreatment to police.

Spy Trial Ended Abruptly

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. justice department, "in the interest of national security," has abruptly ended the spy trial of a mysterious Russian couple, presumably to protect U.S. counter-spy secrets.

This dramatic development came Friday in the fifth day of the trial in U.S. District Court. The jury had been chosen, and prosecutor John P. Hoey was about to make his opening statement.

Instead, acting on telephoned instructions from Washington, Hogy asked that the indictments against Alexandre Sokolov, 40, and his 34-year-old wife be dismissed. The courtroom was stunned.

Sokolov and his wife had time only for a quick embrace and kiss. As they left the courtroom immigration officials seized them. They now face deportation proceedings.

Dr. Dunn called large multi-purpose institutions, such as the Orillia school for retarded children, "not effective" and "if anything, they tend to depress the intellectual development of the child."

He favored an English experiment which removed children from a large institution placed them on a pleasant estate and provided kindergarten teachers and child development specialists on a 24-hour basis to attend them.

Special classes for retarded children now are providing "a high return in our investment," Dr. Dunn said.

"A child's IQ can go up 10 or 15 per cent. Certainly genetics set the limit on row far a child's mind can go, but so far we have not even begun to explore what we can do within those limits."

False Fire Warning Delays Trip of Cyprus-Bound Yukon

NICOSIA (CP) — An RCAF Yukon aircraft carrying 130 Canadian troops limped into Cyprus on three engines today, 14 hours late after a flight from Marville, France.

The aircraft's commander, Sqdn. Ldr. Doug Spence of Trenton, Ont., said he stopped the engine after a warning light system indicated it was afire. The system later proved defective.

"Outside of that problem the weather was clear and we had an uneventful flight," Spence said.

The same aircraft, with a different crew, had turned back to Marville earlier in the day with a fake warning of fire in the same engine.

Spence said the faulty fire warning light had been repaired after the first incident "but there must have been two short circuits or something."

The second difficulty with the system developed more than half-way on the 1,700-mile Marville — Nicosia flight.

Aboard the aircraft were 105 officers and men of the Canadian Guards from Picton, Ont. And 25 from the Lord Strathcona Horse whose home base is Calgary.

The Guards are replacing members of the Royal 22nd Regiment at battalion headquarters of the UN peace-keeping force in the strategic Kyrenia Pass.

The Yukon took off empty for Marville a little more than an hour after arriving, as there are no facilities on Cyprus for repairing the warning system. It was to have carried 130 members of the Royal 22nd's B company, who were scheduled to be moved in another aircraft due here today. Other departures have been set back by one day.

Banks Served With Subpoena On Yacht

NEW YORK (CP—A cruiser owned by the Seafarers International Union (Intl) was boarded by U.S. Coast Guard, immigration and customs officers in Brooklyn harbor Friday, and a United States marshal was reported to have served a subpoena on Hal C. Banks, 55, former president of the SIU in Canada.

The Toronto Globe and Mail says the subpoena calls on Banks to make a deposition in a $5,000,000 damage suit against three U.S. unions by Upper Lakes Limited of Toronto.

"Banks is required under the subpoena to appear within two weeks in a New York court to make a deposition in the damage suit," the newspaper says. It adds that the marshal obtained Banks' signature on a receipt for the subpoena.

Banks disappeared from Canada in July after a civil warcontempt charge for ignoring a court injunction in a ship walkout.

On Sept. 13, the Quebec Supreme Court rejected Banks' appeal from a conviction and a five-year sentence for conspiracy to assault a rival union official.

When he did not appear for the appeal, his $25,000 bail was forfeited.

The suit by Upper Lakes, which was the target of a long SIU picketing campaign after its crews ceased to be represented by the union headed by Banks, is against the SIU, the International Longshoremen's Association and the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association.

The unions have filed counter-suits against Upper Lakes, claiming loss of membership dues, The Globe and Mail says. Examination for discovery in rant was sworn out in Montreal inary to court action, has been under way in camera in New York for about a week, the newspaper adds. It says company president J. D. Leith of Toronto has been making his deposition during all that time.

After hearing that Banks was aboard the yacht in Brooklyn harbor, a Coast Guard petty officer went aboard Friday, and, according to a Coast Guard spokesman, was "given a bit of difficulty in that the people on board were not very co-operative."

The spokesman said the petty officer reported to his superiors, then the larger party was put under the command of a commissioned officer.

"They did not try to give the second party any problem," he added. He said the party held all those on board until the arrival of immigration and customs officers, but could not say to jail him for 30 days on a

Order Lakes Study

OTTAWA (CP) — A Commons committee has been handed the task of studying falling Great Lakes water levels to help the federal government draft a policy to tackle the problem.

Following a two-hour debate Friday the Commons approved Northern Affairs Minister Laing's motion to refer the subject to the mines, forest and waters committee.

The government accepted an amendment by Reid Scott (NDP — Toronto Danforth) to empower the committee to hire clerical and technical personnel.

Mr. Laing expressed the hope the committee investigation would aid the government to form a "sound policy."

"The present crisis in the livelihood and interests of many of our people in the Great Lakes basin requires that measures be taken which will not only meet current needs but will ensure the wise use of these water resources," Mr. Laing said.

He noted that in April water levels in all Great Lakes dropped below the average for the last 10 years, and Lake Huron's level reached its lowest point for the last 100 years.

The International Joint Commission at present has authority in regular flows only on Lake Superior and Lake Ontario, but Mr. Laing said he expects early agreement by Canada and the United States to study the feasibility of extending this authority.

WOULD TAKE TIME

But he said the study would take some time because of the complex problems involved and that immediate results cannot be expected.

The minister also said that until "complete knowledge" is available about controlling the water levels in the basin "we should be concerned about any plan to diminish large supplies of imported waters."

Mr. Scott said the falling water levels constitute a very "catastrophic and monstrous problem facing the entire inland waterway system and the results of this condition are a staggering economic loss to Canada running into billions."

"The low water levels affect the lives and the pocketbooks of every citizen in central Canada and also those on the Prairies because the movement of grain is also affected."

Eric Winkler (PC — Grey-Bruce) who charged that the government has no policy on the subject, called for creation of a federal water authority to group together all officials in several departments that touch on water resources.

Tight Security Ring Is Clamped Around Centre

Preparing for Arrival Of Queen's Jet Monday

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — RCMP officers were on duty at airports and ferry terminals in Prince Edward Island today as security machinery for Queen Elizabeth's visit here next week went into operation.

RCMP officials would not elaborate on security measures being taken by their officers, but it was obvious that many — if not all—people arriving in the island were being checked.

A tight security ring was expected to be clamped down around the Confederation Memorial Centre here during the day. All employees at the $5,500,000 centre have been issued identification passes. Only those with passes or official invitations will be permitted into the centre, which the Queen is to open officially Tuesday afternoon.

Queen to Dine With Chevrier

LONDON (CP) — The Queen, preparing for her trip to Canada, dines tonight with Lionel Chevrier, Canadian high commissioner to Britain. Some aspects of her trip may be discussed, although the dinner is being billed as strictly formal.

Accompanied by Prince Philip, the Queen will be paying her first visit to the Chevriers since they took over as Canada's official representatives from the George Drews last February.

The Queen and her husband leave for Canada by air Monday.

The Queen and Prince Philip are due to land at Summerside, 42 miles west of here, late Monday. Because of the Maritimes' tricky weather, preparations were also made to handle the royal jet at Halifax or Sydney.

Four destroyers sailed from Halifax Friday to rendezvous in the Gulf of St. Lawrence with the Royal Yacht Britannia, which will take the Queen from Charlottetown to Quebec City later next week.

THREE VISITS SET

The Queen is scheduled to visit the centre here three times. The first will be on Tuesday's opening. She will return for a variety concert Tuesday night and attend a ball on Wednesday night.

Members of the centre's staff said Friday that security checks began in early September and since then every part of the huge stone building has been checked thoroughly many times.

More than $10,000 has been donated to Belleville's United Appeal within the first three days of the official campaign. Of the total, $2,963 has been turned in directly to the United Appeal office.

Most of the money will come however, from the in-plant campaigns, most of which have not yet started in the bigger plants. Campaigns at Northern Electric, Corby's and American Optical are scheduled to start Monday, campaigns at Mead Johnson, Stephens-Adamson, Canada Cement, Stewart Warner and Union Carbide will start Monday or later.

About $3,000 has been collected so far, according to an unofficial report, at the C.N.R. in Belleville. The total represents an average gift of more than three dollars, or slightly more than 25c per agency served, from each of the more than 900 employees. International Harvester's in-plant campaign is reported to have collected more than $500 Friday from among the firm's 350 employees. Campaigns in these plants continue and campaigns at the Ontario Intelligencer and at the Ontario Hydro office are reported to have started.

BLAMES GOVERNMENTS

VICTORIA (CP) — An official of the Indian-Eskimo Association of Canada said Friday Canada's Indian communities are being bypassed by provincial governments. E. R. McEwen, the association's executive director, said in an interview the provinces "are giving only token adult education to the Indian communities."

Worms Squirm Most Intelligently If Fed on Ones Taught Previously

TORONTO (CP) — Experiments with cannibalistic flatworms may be the key to revolutionary new techniques in the treatment of mental retardation, Dr. Lloyd M. Dunn, coordinator of special education at the George Peabody College for Teachers in Nashville, Tenn., told the Canadian Conference on Mental Retardation Friday.

"It's a way-far-out thing, but they (train) flatworms to go through water mazes, ground them up and fed them to untrained flatworms," the Saskatchewan - born physician said.

"The untrained flatworms then learned to go through the mazes significantly faster than the first bunch."

Such biochemical research may yet prove to have direct application to the treatment of the mentally retarded, he said. "It's up in the air, but eventually maybe we can entertain the thought that brain food is a possibility."

Dr. Dunn called large multi-purpose institutions, such as the Orillia school for retarded children, "not effective" and "if anything, they tend to depress the intellectual development of the child."

He favored an English experiment which removed children from a large institution placed them on a pleasant estate and provided kindergarten teachers and child development specialists on a 24-hour basis to attend them.

Special classes for retarded children now are providing "a high return in our investment," Dr. Dunn said.

"A child's IQ can go up 10 or 15 per cent. Certainly genetics set the limit on row far a child's mind can go, but so far we have not even begun to explore what we can do within those limits."

Today's Chuckle

Opportunity has to knock, but it is enough for Temptation just to stand outside and whistle.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Gusty winds swept cooler air across Ontario Friday leaving touching off thunderstorms in many localities. Skies gradually cleared and winds dropped off during the night. Considerable cloudiness is expected to linger Sunday in the wake of the storm, but there should be some sunshine during the day.

Inspectorate Holds Annual Convention

The Teachers' Institute of the inspectorate of Hastings No. 2, Prince Edward No. 2, held their annual convention on Friday, October 2 at Campbellcroft-Corbyville public school.

Rev. F. Packman of Campbellcroft United Church conducted the devotions to open the morning session. Greetings were extended to those assembled by Reeve Clayton Hall on behalf of Thurlow township and by Mr. W. Wannamaker, secretary of the Campbellcroft-Corbyville School Board.

The highlight of the morning program was the professional and health education demonstration and discussion under the direction of Miss Janet Vallance and Mr. Hart Devenney, Inspectors, Physical Education Branch, Ontario Department of Education.

Following a most delicious dinner served in the church hall by the Canniton U.C.W. the teachers reassembled in the school to hear a most informative and challenging address, "Helping the Slow Learning Child in the Regular Classroom." by Mr. L. D. Haiden, Inspector, Auxiliary Education Services, Ontario Department of Education.

From Canniton the teachers motored to the County of Hastings building where they were met by County Clerk-Treasurer, C. Bateman. Following brief talks by Warden T. Sumsion, Registrar W. Hurt, Sheriff R. Bailey and Clerk C. Bateman on County administration the group was taken on a tour of the administrative offices.

An educational supply display, courtesy Jack Hood School Supplies, was available for examination by the teachers during their sessions at the school.

Thirty five of the company's workers have been with the firm a quarter century or more. An equal number of retired workers also attended the dinner along with plant supervisors.

This year there were no new workers eligible for membership in the quarter century club.

Canada Cement Company officials from Montreal and J. M. Legate, superintendent of the Point Anne plant, also attended the dinner.

Out of town officials included Canada Cement Company president V. C. Hamilton; vice-president Jack Clark, in charge of Ontario sales; vice-president, Ralph Johnson, Ottawa sales; J. A. Gronsdurth, general superintendent and A. O. Dyrdale, assistant to the vice-president of operations, and former superintendent at the Point Anne Plant.

TENOR DELAYED

TORONTO (CP) — The lead tenor was two hours late for a performance of the Opera Aida at the O'Keefe Centre Friday night, but no one seemed to mind. A faulty aircraft engine at New York delayed tenor Richard Cassilly, and the curtain finally rose at 10:30 p.m. when Mr. Cassilly arrived. Although patrons were offered a refund because of the delay, only a few left.

Between discovery of a new drug in a laboratory the time needed to prove safety and benefits is over five years. Reliable statistics show that only one new drug is useful for every 2500 substances studied. Four million dollars, the average cost of developing each drug discovery is a lot of money. But, new drugs are really responsible for the fact that since 1937 the death rate has so greatly decreased. Countless millions living today would be dead if the 1937 death rate had continued. A useful new drug is always a blessing.

Last night they defeated the county squad 4-1 in the first of their 2-of-3 OASA intermediate "B" semi-final series this weekend, scoring four late runs, three of them on a ninth-inning error.

Bloomfield must win tonight's game, played under the lights at Picton, at 8:00, to win all.

Should third game be necessary, it will be played at the CNRA Park in Belleville, Sunday at 2:00 p.m.

Sarnia Hospital Strike Possible

SARNIA (CP)—John Askin, president and business manager of Local 220, Building Service Employees' International Union (CLC), said Friday night the local will seek sanction from the international executive to take strike action at Sarnia General Hospital.

The local represents 175 employees in the categories of nursing assistants, housekeeping, dietary, orderlies and maintenance.

Mr. Askin said the action was decided following a breakdown in negotiations with the hospital management committee over a new contract. The local rejected an arbitration board recommendation on wage and contract issues a week ago and voted 90 per cent in favor of strike action.

Director of Cancer Society Is Held for $100,000 Theft

CALGARY (CP) — Robert Neville Talbot, 36, charged with theft of $100,000 from the Alberta division, Canadian Cancer Society, was remanded to Oct. 9 in magistrate's court Friday.

Talbot, executive director of the Alberta division, showed no emotion in his brief court appearance. He wore a topcoat and dark glasses, and was not represented by counsel.

Bail was set at $25,000 after Talbot reserved plea.

Police said a theft, which they believed was the largest recorded in the city, occurred over a period of approximately nine months, starting Jan. 1.

They said a theft occurred through manipulations of cheques issued to non-existent society employees supposedly chiref, to perform housekeeping duties for cancer patients.

Claudia Tennant of Belleville, president of the Alberta division, said she and other provincial executive members were unaware of the situation before Talbot's arrest Thursday.

Police said they were called after another society employee started a routine check of society payroll. A record was seized after Talbot's arrest.

Hurricane Hilda Drives Hard Towards New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, (AP)— Hilda, the erratic hurricane with 120 mile-an-hour winds, lashed the deserted coastal marshes of Louisiana at dawn today as she drove relentlessly toward this carnival city of 700,000 persons.

Raging tides and heavy rains battered the Louisiana gulf coast area — scene of a mass exodus unmatched in the history of this deep south state. More than 140,000 persons fled their homes to seek safety in inland shelters.

Forecasters said Hilda's giant eye, the calm centre from which furious winds spin off, would cross the coastline between deserted Morgan City and Grand Isle late this afternoon.

The weather bureau said hurricane force winds — 75 m.p.h. or higher — would reach as far eastward as Mobile, Ala., by late tonight.

Directly in Hilda's path, 90 miles southwest of New Orleans, lay Port Fourchon, once a bustling resort. Ile Dernieres was devastated by a hurricane more than a century ago and never rebuilt.

Hilda, its hurricane winds extending out 80 miles from the centre, teased southwest Louisiana's storm-exposed coast for two days before turning northeast Friday night toward New Orleans.

A tornado peeled away from the storm's advance winds and skipped through the southern edge of Golden Meadow, some 30 air miles south of here. There were no casualties, thanks to orderly evacuation. The tornado felled power lines and did extensive damage to empty homes.

Normally gay New Orleans took on a sombre air as Hilda slowly turned toward the city. Caught below sea level between the Mississippi River and Lake Pontchartrain, the city feared flooding more than Hilda's strong winds.

Red-and-Black hurricane flags went up from the mouth of the Mississippi eastward to Mobile Bay as Hilda approached land. At the same time, the hurricane watch moved up to Texas where a gale was called, off.

The Gulf coastal area from Mobile east to Panama City, Fla., displayed gale warnings.

In an early morning advisory the weather bureau said Hilda was 155 miles south - southwest of New Orleans, moving north at 10 miles an hour.

Life went on even as the season's mightiest storm approached.

A refugee gave birth to a girl in Morgan City shelter. The baby's name? Hilda.

Lonely National Guardsmen and deserted streets of the coastal towns to guard against looting.

The Clyde Beatty-Cole Brothers circus folded up its tents at New Orleans and slipped away.

SANDBAGS READY

Mountains of sand bags were piled at strategic points around the city ready to repel the first waves that threaten to lap over the levees.

The mass exodus from low-lying coastal areas was described as incredible by police defence officials. Cars, trucks and buses clogged roads and highways leading north for miles.

Special trains of boxcars took several thousand from Gretna to emed Morgan City and Franklin to shelters at inland Lafayette.

Residents of low-lying Alabama and Mississippi coastal areas got word during the night to get to higher ground: They were complying today.

Favreau Likes Civil Law Use Against Mergers

MONTEBELLO, Que. (CP)— Justice Minister Favreau said Friday he personally favors new laws that would authorize the federal government to go to court orders to break up harmful monopolies and mergers.

But he said the lawyers' convention here that it should be possible to develop the use of injunctions or other non-criminal procedures in such business practices that are against the public interest.

Addressing the Association of Canadian General Counsel in the Seigniory Club, Mr. Favreau stressed that he was expressing personal opinions.

He said federal anti-combines legislation in Canada now is less flexible than in the United States and other countries. The reason was that Parliament was restricted in criminal law in regulating business, under the Canadian constitution, with the provinces holding jurisdiction over property rights.

But Parliament might find it possible to pass non-criminal anti-combines laws under the heading of federal jurisdiction over trade and commerce.

Chaput Sees Civil War if Queen Killed

MONTREAL (CP) — Marcel Chaput, a former separatist leader, said Friday that if the Queen is assassinated during her visit to Quebec city "there could be a civil war in Canada."

He said such a war would pit "English-Canada against Quebec."

Mr. Chaput, who headed the now-defunct Parti Republique du Quebec (Quebec) republican party, said in a telephone interview that it is impossible to say whether prospects for the visit seem any more disturbing now than they did several months ago.

Mr. Chaput was among the first to say that the Queen's life might be in danger if she came to Quebec.

She and Prince Philip are due in the provincial capital Oct. 10 from Charlottetown and will leave Oct. 11 for Ottawa. Their visit highlights the celebration of the 1864 preparations for Confederation.

Mr. Chaput, speaking from his Montreal home, said he was not yet decided whether he will go to Quebec City for the visit. He said he understands that some persons may be detained by the police" as part of security measures prior to the Queen's arrival.

But he added there have been indications he is among those possibly singled out for detention.

2 Jailbreakers Being Returned

Following negotiations for their return to Canada where they face a total of 30 charges of rape, theft with violence, theft and jail break, the pair were ordered returned to U.S. department of immigration van. Commercial airlines had refused to transport them because they were considered too dangerous.

400 Register For BCIVS Night Classes

Over four hundred people have registered for the night school classes at Belleville C. I. & V. S. This number is approximately the same as in previous years and will likely grow to over five hundred.

As usual, a few courses are filled to capacity, most courses are open for additional registrations, and a few courses require additional enrollment in order for the subject to be offered.

The most popular course is advanced sewing. Only the first fifty registrations could be accepted for this course and these will be divided into two classes, one for Tuesdays, and one for Thursdays. Since the same condition prevails at the Moira Secondary School night classes school authorities regret they are unable to accommodate the many people on the waiting list for this course.

Other courses which are filled are welding and elementary typing.

Two courses requiring about five more registrations each are Grade 13 history and bricklaying. People interested in these courses are urged to come next Tuesday, October 5 at 7:00 p.m. and register so that those already registered will not be disappointed.

Registrations are also open in art, elementary auto mechanics, conversational French, Grade 13 English, English for new Canadians, crafts (leathercraft and mosaics), elementary millinery, shorthand, stationary engineering, Grade 13 trigonometry and statics, advanced typewriting and business machines, V.L.A. home construction and woodworking.

Group Captain Schroeder is retiring after 35 years of continuous service with the RCAF.

Yesterday's ceremony was attended by high ranking Air Force personnel, and many local and out-of-town dignitaries, including Mayor Jack Ellis of Belleville, Major Harvey McFarland of Picton and Mayor James MacDonald of Trenton. Representing Robert Temple, MP for Hastings South, was Mrs. Ariel Temple, his wife.

Preceding the ceremony, Group Captain Schroeder inspected the ranks of airmen and air women. Music for the ceremony was provided by the RCAF Station Pipe and Drum Band and by the No. 6 Repair Depot volunteer band.

heat blistered the paint for almost the full length of the first floor south and east hall, while the doorway leading to the hall from the southeast entrance was fire damaged.

Upstairs in one of the classrooms immediately over the woodworking shop, the walls were smoke smeared and a small section near the outside wall had to be ripped out to get at flames which caught in the floorboards.

Outside windows in the woodworking shop were broken as firemen turned firehoses into the flaming room to quench the flames.

Yesterday, apparently students of the classroom immediately above the now ruined woodworking shop were fire-drill minded.

Printed on the blackboard were the word — "In case of Fire, Run."

Wants New Constitution

Real Caouette, the leader of the Quebec Creditistes, does not want Canada's constitution "repatriated."

He is opposed to plans to ask the British Government to hand over to Canada the right to amend the British North America Act.

In a man who has time and again clearly indicated his rejection of Canada's ties with Britain, this attitude may seem strange. But it is easily explained. Mr. Caouette does not think it worth while to alter the BNA Act. He wants it scrapped and a whole new constitution written.

The difficulties involved in drawing a new constitution for a country with the diversity of interests and outlooks which prevail amongst Canada's population are obvious. The task would be well-nigh impossible.

There is no certainty, though, that the drafting of an acceptable formula for the amendment of the existing constitution, the British North America Act, will be any easier.

Some of the obstacles to amendment were made plain at about the same time that Mr. Caouette voiced his preferences for an entirely new constitution.

In the House of Commons Andrew Brewin described as "an immitigated disaster" the formula proposed by Hon. Davie Fulton, when he was Minister of Justice in the Diefenbaker government. Mr. Brewin's objection is to the proposal that changes affecting basic provincial rights would have to receive the approval of all the provinces. Mr. Brewin is ready to accept the requirement of unanimity for questions concerning education, language and provincial representation in the federal parliament, but balks at giving the provinces the power to veto over amendments concerning property and civil rights.

It is easy to make out a case against Mr. Brewin as a special pleader. His party, the New Democrats, proposes changes in property rights which are hardly likely to receive the approval of all provincial governments.

In fairness to Mr. Brewin, though, it might be pointed out that his stand is exactly the same as that taken by the CCF when, it was in power in Saskatchewan and when it was theoretically possible, because of the authority of the provinces in matters of property and civil rights, to alter the provincial economy in accord with its theories. It did not attempt to do so, for such changes in one province would have created chaos.

The truth of the matter would seem to be that, in today's world, no nation worthy of the name can exist without accepting the primary authority of the central government in economic matters, but that there is an increasing reluctance on the part of the provinces to place this power completely in Ottawa's hands.

Meanwhile, outside the House but still in the political arena, there was another development indicative of the difficulties which lie ahead for those entrusted with arranging any future amendments to the BNA Act.

The Canadian Press reports that the Liberal Cabinet has come under heavy fire from Liberals who fear that federal powers are being limited and the public is getting the impression that Quebec's interests are not compatible with relations with the provinces.

Though this is a healthy reaction to widespread efforts to convert the nation into a loose association of small sovereign states, it at the same time shows the hazards inherit in any effort to settle differences in a spirit of compromise. The impression which the public is getting, while of some importance, ought to take second place to the objective behind concessions to Quebec. This objective is, or ought to be, to win that province's confidence by granting it every possible wish in non-essential matters, in order that it may be induced, now to the traditional will to those questions where the maintenance, or possibly the increase, of federal powers is essential to the well-being of the nation.

None of these obstacles to the proper adjustment of our constitution to the conditions of today would be eased by attempting them in the framework of an entirely new constitution, rather than through amendments to the BNA Act. But the very fact that Mr. Caouette, and presumably some numbers of his fellow French-Canadians, would prefer such an approach is some reason for at least considering it.

The drawbacks are two-fold. The new constitution would have to be accepted in its entirety, while an existing constitution can be altered a bit at a time. And, probably a fatal objection, any acceptance of Mr. Caouette's proposal would be construed by many as just another unwarranted concession to Quebec opinion.

Ottawa Offbeat

Togetherness of Press, Prime Minister Causes Problems

By RICHARD JACKSON

From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Good editors don't particularly favor their correspondents involving themselves in the news.

Like Hell they do not — and few do — news and events have been involving the correspondents in spite of their preference and, indeed, public obligation to be spectators rather than participants.

The correspondents, at least on Parliament Hill, found themselves caught up in the news first when Conservative Leader Diefenbaker began blasting most of them for what he charged was one-sided, politically-loaded, personally-slanted and entirely inaccurate coverage.

Then to even things up — at least as between the two major parties — Prime Minister Pearson complained publicly in the Commons of misquotation by at least some of the correspondents after the Conservative Leader had met President Johnson.

For more than three years now, well before they lost power in the last election, the Federal Conservatives complained here, accusing the Parliamentary Press Gallery of biased coverage, and, indeed, to some extent, for their 1963 defeat.

Their protests were almost carbon copies of those "so bitterly made by the Liberals, just before and after the St. Laurent Government fell from power, seven years ago.

EARLY WARNING

Perhaps it is that Governments and prime ministers, with their always large publicity possibilities, calculate they have troubles enough without even inquisitive, probing correspondents with what invariably comes to be regarded as loaded questions and slanted interpretations.

Perhaps it is, too, that Governments and prime ministers, always under the pressure, become over-sensitive.

But it just might be that because Ottawa is the only metropolitan centre as world capitals go, but rather an average Canadian community, Governments and prime ministers and the press corps become uncommonly neighborly, even intimate.

Things get down to a first-name basis.

People become friends, perhaps even enemies.

And as such, a prime minister may feel betrayed when first name friends in the 100-man press corps call the shots as the inexorable play of the news dictates.

It is possible that in that focus of Ottawa - - a land-of-the-afternoon city, almost, as "outsiders" like to say, from the rest of the country - - what is objective to the reporting eye is biased to the prime minister.

And in reverse, when a prime minister says no, under the pressure of more important obligations, to cock drinks with, as "insiders" like to say, from the rest of the country - - what is objective to the reporting eye is biased to the prime minister.

Perhaps it was in power.

Quinte Needs Chinese Fish

BBC London Letter

Some recent immigrants to Britain with a useful job in view are fish from Hong Kong — baby grass carp. This breed has been keeping Chinese rivers free of weed for millions of years and in a new experiment which John Newell reported on in the BBC General Overseas Service program 'The Farming World' they are being introduced by Britain's Central Electricity Board for the purpose of keeping a dock of the Trent River weed clear of the 8-foot long weeds that infest it. This area of dock is used to import coal to the power station at Barrow-in-Furness in Lancashire. The fish have already been tipped into the water to start work, but as they were only about one inch long on arrival they are not expected to make much impression on the weeds for some months.

Although this vegetarian fish was one of the most abundant species of its kind in rivers in Burma, Malaya, Thailand, India and Ceylon, said Newell, it was hard to breed them outside their native rivers; but that they had only been bred elsewhere in the warm water of Moscow's biggest power station. Ronald Iles, the biologist in charge of the scheme for the Electricity Board, had plans to breed grass carp in the water from British power stations, but initially he thought it safer to import them. All but one per cent had survived the stressful flight travelling in plastic bags. On arrival they were put into a tank of fresh water and 25 per cent of sea water was gradually added to acclimatise them to the same mixture awaiting them in the dock, which was fed by a fresh-water stream. So far they had survived the change happily. Mr. Iles had already kept a small number in the dock successfully for several months.

This might sound a rather slow method of clearing weeds, said Newell, but when the fish settled in they would keep the dock free for the foreseeable future. The only other practical method (since weedkillers were illegal) was dredging. The total cost of buying and transporting the fish was 700 pounds, where as the estimate for dredging had been 40,000 pounds. If the experiment was successful, Mr. Iles hoped to breed carp which might help to clear the badly overgrown, English canal system.

Why Chinese Seldom Bald

Portland Oregonian

You seldom see a bald Chinese and the reason may be that the men of China for centuries wore a queue, a single braid of hair that weighed several pounds.

Dr. Li Shu Fân of Hong Kong, in this country to attend the International meeting of surgeons, suggested that the queue's bounding ground stimulated hair follicles. This gave Chinese men a protection against baldness that somehow has been handed down to the present-day Chinese who do not wear the queue.

One seldom sees a bald woman, either. This suggests that simply letting the hair grow long, with or without heavy braids, may prevent baldness.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

OCTOBER 3, 1944

Although the Bay of Quinte district is well known as an apple producing area and farm labor has been short all summer, farmers are having little difficulty in securing finding sufficient workers to pick their apples. At least this would appear to be the case considering the few appears which have been made to Selective Service officials in Belleville. To date only twelve workers have been detailed to apple picking, these going to the Trenton district.

Slackening off in the tomato season was suggested as the reason for the apparent non-interest of farmers in applying for apple pickers. With the tomato season practically over, canning factories are closing or preparing to close and labor is also released for other jobs on the farm.

30 YEARS AGO

OCTOBER 3, 1934

Cook stoves, heaters, cooking utensils, blankets, shoes and overcoats are a pressing need at the city's central relief bureau at the present time. Donations of clothing and other articles needed by families in distress, have been few and far between this season and since the beginning of colder weather only part of the many requests by relief applicants can be filled.

The new electric lights which are suspended in handsome globes from iron standards, were turned on last evening on Front Street. Ald. Allan Cameron McFee, chairman of the committee on lighting in the city council, turned a temporary switch at the corner of Front and Bridge Streets at 7.30 o'clock and immediately the street was aglow with the brilliant a light as one could wish. Manager O. H. Scott of the electric company, is to be congratulated upon the expert manner in which the installation of the lights was carried out.

To Your Good Health

Surgery May Be Necessary For Inflamed Pancreas

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What about inflammation of the pancreas. My doctor told me it is caused by alcoholism, but I don't drink and never did.

I am on a low fat diet. I get pains just below my chest when I am hungry and have a considerable amount of gas after meals.

Is this serious? Will I need surgery or can it be corrected by proper diet? I am 48. — Mrs. G. P.

Your symptoms are consistent with the diagnosis — more specifically, it is called chronic relapsing pancreatitis. It is, as you have been told, a matter involving inflammation of the pancreas.

It is true that alcoholism is a common factor in its occurence. About two-thirds of patients with this trouble have a history of too much drinking. But it can occur in non-drinkers, like yourself, too.

In such instances, there are several possible causes. About a third of these non-drinkers will be found to have gall bladder disease, either chronic infection or gallstones causing the gall bladder to function poorly. Another possibility is chronic inflammation of the duodenum, the first portion of the small intestine, into which the pancreas discharges digestive juices. Or there can be stones in this duct, or from some other cause it may be obstructed. Without any specific cause, the result is that the intestine is not being adequately supplied with certain of the materials required for ready digestion of food.

Is this condition serious? Yes in my view it is serious when a person has this condition, but constantly or recurrently miserable. You very well may require more extensive tests to help determine the exact cause of your trouble. If the root of it is in a gallbladder that has taken a bad bladder, then you can find the key to the solution. A substantial number of cases of pancreatitis are cured by correcting such defects.

Surgery may be necessary. Medicine and diet will not correct a diseased gall bladder or an obstruction of the duct which should be carrying secretions from the pancreas.

Is the gall bladder to be laid up for a fortnight or so if such surgery is necessary, but that is preferable to going on, year after year, with repeated pain and faulty digestion.

Dear Dr. Molner: T h r e e to five days before my menstrual period I crave sugar, and will ea. five or six cubes daily. I am 35, have two children, have had 5, 7, and 15 months, and weigh 110 pounds. What is the reason for this? Is it dangerous? What can I do about it?

I don't particularly care for candy or other sweets, but put my coffee or tea has to taste l i k e sugar before I can drink it. I am in the habit of this.

It could be a quirk of appetite occurring at that time. It may be due to hypoglycemia (l o w blood sugar), or may be related to low thyroid activity.

Or you could be doing plan tired. With three young children and your housework, I'm sure you have enough to keep you jumping. Then, with approach of your period, the strain begins to tell. Sugar is a quick form of energy, so you instinctively turn to it.

Possibly a physical examination is in order to see whether your thyroid is low, and some other factor is robbing you of pep. Or it may be a matter of budgeting your time so that you can have a short rest or two during your busy day.

25,000 to Live in Building

German Features

It will be 3,750 feet high, 190 feet in diameter and will have 356 floors above and 16 below the earth. These are the truly imposing dimensions of a housing skyscraper designed by West Berlin architect Robert Gabriel. He has calculated the steel cement foundation to measure 1,000 feet in diameter. The Empire State building with its 102 floors and height of 1,100 feet (excluding the TV mast) that has been the world's highest building since 1931, would be more than three times surpassed.

Roughly 25,000 people are to live in 8,000 apartments. Stores and repair shops are to be installed every 20 to 40 floors and in the subterranean floors. A new 4,000 cars as well as an atomic bomb shelter will be built. Several elevators are planned for this town in a house in addition to a theatre, a police station and a mayor's office.

Traffic problems will be non-existent in the "tower city." Six lifts consisting of 18 cages each to contain a maximum of 40 persons and to stop at every 20th floor, should be able to handle 6,000 persons an hour. "Piano-movers" will be available at 1.80 dogs will run between the intermediate floors. The cross-like steel construction of the tower will guarantee a high degree of fire protection.

* * *

The gigantic tower would not only reach the clouds but rise above them. More than half of the inhabitants would live above the clouds, away from noise and dust, thus enjoying more sunshine than the inhabitants of any other German city. The first prospective tenants have already applied for residence. They are Berlin's many apartment-hunters but astronomists and radio and TV station enthusiasts who are also very interested in the uppermost storeys.

According to the avantgardistic architect's data, swaying need not be feared. The tower's own weight — 500,000 tons of steel will be used in construction alone — practically rules out all wind movements particularly as the building has a narrowing degree of 1 to 20 despite its enormous height.

Of fundamental importance is of course the site of the new construction Berlin must be ruled out to the architect's great dismay because of the city's unsuitable soil condition and for flight security reasons. But Mr. Gabriel has taken a look around West Germany and

Death Duties Are Assailed

Fredericton Gleaner

It is generally conceded that the one thing the Canadian provinces need above everything else is more capital. Why then does the country persist in maintaining a system of death duties which militates against the formation of capital?

From the standpoint of revenue, succession duties do not bring in much money. The total collected in the taxation year of 1961, for example, represented only 1½ per cent of all federal and provincial revenues.

Yet succession duties are causing an increasing number of Canadians to rearrange their affairs in order to get a better break. Many prosperous citizens dole out their assets to potential heirs in bits and pieces; others quit the country, taking their capital with them, to resettle in more hospitable taxation climates abroad. Many a family business has been sold into foreign ownership in anticipation of death duties that will fall due on the death of a major shareholder. Still others have to be liquidated — often to foreign interests — on the death of an owner.

From the social point of view, succession duties once had their point. But in this day of increasing income tax rates, chances are that these death duties are now being levied on savings from earnings which have already been heavily taxed.

Death duties are a form of double taxation which brings in little revenue while creating substantial personal hardship and doing the economy considerable harm.

Your Car

When Battery Goes, Your Car Won't!

By EUGENE B. MILMOE

Year after year, turnpike and truck operators blame battery failure for most of the disress calls received. New cars, old cars, new batteries, old batteries. . .it happens to them all. And, often, the driver is aware he something has been weakening the battery, but he hasn't pinpointed the trouble. Yet, it isn't that difficult. There aren't too many reasons why a battery would be continually running down.

Insufficient charge is usually the first suspect and that's easy to checked, via the generator and regulator. If these are OK, trouble-check the fan belt for slippage. Excessive use of lights, radio, fan, heater, etc., overburdens the battery especially when the car is primarily used for stop and go driving. Faulty wiring or connections are conditions you may never know about unless a thorough inspection is made. Finally, remember the brake stoplight switch. If defective, it may keep brake light on at all times — day and night — thus draining battery strength.

H. N. asks: "Will proper front - end alignment benefit gas mileage?"

No! only does but tire mileage will also benefit. More importantly, you will have better steering control.

From A. L.: "While moving along an expressway at a good clip, my engine runs fine, but then if I run into a stretch of bumper-to-bumper traffic, it's rough and sluggish. Plugs and points are new, so I assume something else is causing this."

The fuel mixture may be a bit too rich.

R. S. writes: "If hydraulic valve lifters are noisy, is it because there's too much or too little clearance?"

Too much clearance. . .which can also ruin valve faces, stems tappets and cams.

From P.C.: "I may be biting the hand that feeds me, but after running a brake shop for the last 12 years, I'm convinced that few motorists know how to brake a new car, or one with new linings."

You're probably right. Brake linings must be broken in gently and gradually. Hard, heavy braking during the first few hundred miles can quickly ruin linings.

ANNOUNCE AWARDS

OTTAWA (CP) — The defence department Friday announced awards to three Canadian soldiers in recognition of service with the United Nations force in The Congo last January. Brig. J. A. Dextraze, 45, of Montreal, was made a commander of the Order of the British Empire for "superb leadership and control" during rescue operations that saved the lives of more than 30 missionaries and students. Lt.-Col. Paul A. Mayer, 47, of Ottawa, and Sgt. J. A. Leonce Lessard, 41, of Quebec City, were awarded the George Medal.

Banks Served

ada last March. . .

Since then, he has quit his $20,000-a-year post as vice-president and international representative of the International body, the SIU officials said. He also has resigned as vice-president of the maritime trades department of the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations, they said.

In Ottawa, an opposition demand for a special inquiry into the circumstances surrounding Banks' hall-jumping flight to the U.S. was flatly rejected Friday by Prime Minister Pearson.

"No such inquiry is necessary," he told the Commons. "I think the facts are quite clear and I do not think any useful purpose would be served at this time by establishing that kind of inquiry."

The former waterfront czar was seen Thursday by a Toronto Star reporter who located him aboard a union - owned yacht in Brooklyn harbor.

Armed with this report, opposition MPs threw a barrage of questions at Labor Minister Favreau, who had been telling them for weeks that he had no precise knowledge of Banks' whereabouts.

Garden Notes

You Can Move Blooming 'Mums'

By FLORA M. SAVILLE

You can move chrysanthemums even when they are in full bloom. If you have late mums in bloom or in bud in the back garden with they were in the front garden go ahead and move them. Soak the ground around them several hours before you plan to move them. This fills the leaf and the stem cells with moisture and gives them a better chance to adjust to the shock of moving.

Mum roots are not very deep but dig six to eight inches straight down on each of the four sides. Lift the soil block with the roots by forcing the spade under it. Place in a new setting and firm soil around it well. Water with weak liquid fertilizer, and shade from strong sun for a day or two if an exposed position. If the weather is cloudy or damp this will not be necessary.

It is a good idea to transplant on a cloudy, or damp day, or in the evening. When the sun shines on the leaves they give off a large quantity of moisture. Sometimes some of the root tips are damaged even in the most careful moves, they are not able to make up the necessary replacement of moisture from the soil. Wilting follows. With many plants this may mean death to the plant or severe set back. But, chrysanthemums are hardy and will bounce back. Give them every chance to make this adjustment and you will be rewarded with many weeks of bloom.

Leave the plants in their new position until spring, then take root cuttings.

PLANTS FOR INDOORS

You can use the same method to pot up budded or blooming plants for indoors. Use a little less soil. Shade from strong sun for a few days. Feed every two weeks with liquid fertilizer as long as the blooms last. The plants can be saved for next year to bloom in the garden by growing on the dry side in a cool basement.

In sheltered positions the plants could be returned to the garden in late fall. They would stand a fair chance of living over if given a loose mulch of boughs or twigs.

One woman breaks off the tops of all her mums after frost has killed the leaves and lays them over the clumps. They are held in place by a few bricks pushed into the soil. The falling leaves from the trees trap fine in the twigs and prevents alternate freezing and thawing. This loose protection keeps them in good condition until mid or late April, when they are removed and the new shoots allowed to grow on for a few weeks before the cuttings are taken. We have found that the yellow mums are more tender than the other shades and have to be replaced nearly every year. However, the Harvest Giants we planted last year have come bravely through and produced lovely large blooms on tall plants from late August. They will go on until hard frost kills off the tops.

Do not use a layer of leaves alone as mulch. These are down smother the crowns, and the plants die. The plants must have air to survive.

TINY NEW PLANTS

Before hard frost, look under short bushy annuals such as dwarf marigolds for tiny new plants. Pot them up and place in a sunny window. They will give you weeks of bloom. Save seeds from Heavenly Blue, or the Morning Glories mentioned previously. Plant eight to a dozen seeds in a pot and keep pinching out the tips as they get to six or eight inches high. They will soon bloom and go on blooming for a long time if kept in the sun and watered. Feed every two weeks as other house plants.

Pot up geraniums, coleus, and patient cuttings for next years bedding plants or for house plants.

Old geraniums can be pulled and stored in boxes or bushel baskets. Line the basket with plastic or foil and throw on a few shovels of dirt. Keep watered enough to keep from wilting. In February you can take cuttings for bedding plants.

If you have a root of that lovely Undulata Hosta, the small leaf, striped green and white plant that is used for clumps or borders, pot up a portion of the root. It makes a handsome house plant.

Hoya, Amaryllis, Azalea and poinsettia, and any other house plants you have in the garden for the summer should be kept in a cool sunporch or unheated room for a few days before bringing into the warm living room.

Could Be Disastrous to Operate Universities 12 Months in Year

TORONTO (CP) — There would be small financial savings from the year-round operation of Canadian universities, but the academic disadvantages could be disastrous, a special committee of the Canadian Association of University Teachers said Friday.

The committee issued a report based on the estimated student enrolment and costs for 1970. It said the savings resulting in that year from a 12-month semester system would be at most 4.5 per cent of the $700,000,000 needed to accommodate an expected 300,000 students.

Under the chairmanship of Professor B. W. Jackson of McMaster University, the committee visited nine United States universities which operate on a year-round basis. They consulted teachers and administrators in 51 U.S. and 16 Canadian universities.

The danger in a year-round system is that the ills of the present Canadian system might be magnified, the report said. The system would require a greater number of registrations and examinations, which would increase tensions and fatigue in teachers and students.

Faculty members could be deprived of time each year for research and study, which in the long run would defeat the purpose of the universities, the report said. Competition would be more difficult, since this free time was one of the chief attractions of Canadian universities for U.S. scholars.

While many students could finish university more quickly, others needed the free time for study, relaxation and earning money. Because of seasonal employment factors, it is essential to many Canadian students that they work in the summer months the report said.

With shorter periods for courses in three or four semesters a year, emphasis on facts and memory-work rather than on thought and investigation is increased, the committee said. There were complaints that students did not assimilate material in the shorter terms.

There was a danger of a university's administrative machinery assuming exaggerated importance because of the more complex operations. The prime consideration in the nine U.S. universities studied appeared to be one of fitting into the system.

"The system seems inefficient and costly as far as incomplete university is concerned," the report said.

ESCORTS SAIL

HALIFAX (CP) — Four Canadian destroyers left here Friday to act as escorts for the Royal Yacht Britannia, which will carry Queen Elizabeth from Charlottetown to Quebec City next week. The couple was accused of a six-year plot to send to Moscow secret data on U.S. rocket launching sites and atomic arms shipments. They were arrested July 2, 1963 in a Washington apartment, which the government said contained a powerful short-wave radio, codes and ciphers, and recording and photographing apparatus.

On the same day, U.S. agents arrested Ivan D. Egorov, a Russian United Nations personnel officer, and his wife, Aleksandra, in New York. The two were traded later for two Americans held by the Russians.

Kaarlo Rudolph Tuomi, a Finn with top-echelon rank in the Soviet espionage network, was to have been the key prosecution witness in the Sobolov trial. He was described by the federal government as a double agent and his identity was treated with top secrecy until the trial began in court. The defence succeeded in obtaining his name and home address from the government, despite bitter objections.

One Printer To Stand Trial

TORONTO (CP)—One printer was committed for trial and two others had charges against them dismissed Friday in connection with incidents surrounding the Toronto newspaper strike.

Ernest Cunningham, 24, of Toronto, employed as a printer at the Globe and Mail since the Toronto typographical union went on strike July 9, was committed for jury trial on two charges of possessing dangerous weapons.

Det. John McWatt told Magistrate Donald F. Graham that Cunningham had a five - inch lead beton with a leather thong handle in his possession when questioned. He said Cunningham explained he feared for his own safety during the strike.

Det. McWatt testified that Cunningham said he also had a shotgun and shells in his hotel room.

Goldwater Says LBJ May Recognize China

PEORIA, Ill. (AP)—Senator Barry Goldwater wheeled into his final day of Illinois whistlestop campaigning with a charge that the Johnson Democratic administration, by virtue of a newly revealed nuclear treaty proposal, wants to lead the United States "on the primrose-red path to recognition of Red China."

Goldwater, Republican candidate for president, said in a statement that press reports from Britain indicate there is "a new nuclear treaty already drafted and ready for immediate execution between Great Britain and the United States and—believe it or not — Red China."

The Arizona senator, who voted in the Senate against the limited nuclear test ban treaty, said he didn't know any details of the purported new agreement.

(In London, Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas - Home announced Friday that Britain and the United States have prepared a treaty for barring the spread of nuclear weapons. He said provision had been made in the treaty for the participation of Red China.

(State department officials in Washington told a later press conference the treaty pledges a nuclear power not to supply information on the manufacture of the weapon to non-nuclear countries. Washington officials described the treaty as a "working paper.")

Goldwater said "the treaty is not supposed to be revealed . . . until after the presidential election. Only then can you find where London Britain Johnson and his curious crew want to take you on the primrose-red path of recognition of Red China."

If elected Nov. 3, Goldwater pledged, he would put an end to "secret treaties, signed, sealed and spelled out in hidden rooms by hidden men."

Printers Jailed For Assault

OSHAWA (CP) — Striking printers Barry Dunsmoor, 25, and Richard Ellerbeck, 35, were each sentenced Friday to 14 days in jail for what Magistrate Harry Jermyn said was a deliberate assault on Mark Henkelman.

Henkelman, 17, is the son of Victor Henkelman, assistant general manager at the strike-bound General Printers Limited plant here.

Dunsmoor and Ellerbeck, both members of local 90 of the International Typographical Union (CLC), were convicted of the assault charges last week.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League
Eastern Ontario Club

QUESTION. Could you tell us if there is a provincial park on one of the highways going to Ottawa, and if so, how far is it from Belleville?

ANSWER: Yes, it is the Rideau Provincial Park, a 200-acre camping ground on highway 16, four miles north o. Kemptville. Picnicking, boating and fishing are offered. It is about 145 miles from Belleville.

QUESTION: We are driving to Manitoba and would like to know if our car insurance is valid there in case of accident?

ANSWER: Authorities in Manitoba will impound the car and can deprive the motorist of driving privileges until evidence of financial responsibility is produced. This evidence is established by a pink card issued by the province and is obtained through your local insurance agent. They also advise to keep your insurance policy in the glove compartment at all times when travelling out of your own province.

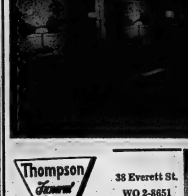
COMMON CAR PROBLEMS YOU MAY SOLVE YOURSELF

Car Does Not Start: Make sure that you are not out of gas and that the ignition key is fully in the "on" position. Check that the transmission is in the proper gear for starting. If switching the ignition key does not turn the motor, the battery may be dead. Try the horn and lights. Their failure to work properly means the battery is probably too weak. When the motor turns but does not catch and you smell gas, the carburetor may be flooded. Press accelerator to floor hold it there without pumping and step out on ignition. If the car does not start after about 10 seconds, stop, take foot off accelerator, wait a few minutes and repeat.

Frozen Door Lock: Heat the key over a match or a cigarette lighter or by holding it in your hand for several seconds. Put the key in the lock and turn slowly. Reheat if necessary. Do not force the key. It may snap.

Locked Bumpers: Should a bumper of your car become slightly locked with one of another car, you may want to attempt to disengage them. Rock the bottom car up and down with your hands on a fender. Should this fail, the National Safety Council recommends that you use a bumper jack to lift the top bumper. If neither works call a serviceman. Be careful your hands and body are not pinched between the cars.

Stuck in Mud, Snow or Sand: Straighten the front wheels. Shift to the lowest gear. Feed gas slowly and try to drive straight out. Should this fail, rock the car gently by alternately shifting from forward to reverse while feeding gas moderately. Or place some rough material under the front of the rear wheel on the driving side — boards, sticks, burlap. On ice or snow ashes and cinders are good.



Fog: Slow down. Stay well to the right. Run the windshield wipers. Use the defroster and wipe the inside of the windshield as needed. Keep the low beam light beam on, day or night. Stop by pumping brakes to allow the flashing taillight to alert cars behind, when the fog is too dense to see at least three or four car lengths ahead, pull off to the side of the road (get off the pavement if on a highway), turn off lights and wait for the fog to lift.

Skids: Steer in the direction of the skid. Ease off the accelerator. Do not apply brakes. When the front of the car is even with the rear, straighten the wheel and slow down by gently pumping the brakes. Should you run onto a soft shoulder, hold the wheel straight and reduce speed gradually. Then ease back onto the road. Do not slam on brakes.

School's Sorority Dance No Place for Father-to-Be

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Ev is 27 and I am 36. We have been married for two years and expect our first child any minute.

Last night Ev's oldest sister telephoned to say her daughter Barbara (age 17) was in tears. Barbara's date broke his leg and will be unable to take her to a very important high school sorority dance. She asked Ev if he'd be a "fill-e-saver" and take Barbara. Ev replied, "I'd love to."

I don't think a married man has any business at a high school sorority dance and I said so. Furthermore this is no time for him to leave me alone. He insists I am narrow-minded, jealous, plus a few other things.

If you tell me I am wrong I will apologize. Thank you. P.G. WIFE.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR WIFE — Your husband belongs at a high school dance like a skunk belongs at a lawn party.

If he is foolish enough to go I hope the stork visits you while he's out twisting with the kids. It would serve him right.

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am 18 years old now and it took me six years to figure something out.

I began to date when I was 12. My mother was probably afraid if I didn't start early I'd be an old maid. By the time I was 14 I looked 18 and acted 22.

Several of these boys I went with tried to talk me into doing things I knew were wrong. Some of them succeeded and I finally figured out why. I was so dumb I was flattered that the boys considered me desirable.

I realize now what a pass is no compliment. I was just being used. If these boys really cared about me, they would have treated me with respect. I know, too, that after some of them got what they wanted they lost interest and passed the word that I was a pushover.

I'm thankful I wised up and straightened around before I got into serious trouble and ruined my life.

Please print my letter, Ann. I wish I had seen one like it when I was 14. — SMARTER NOW.

• • •

DEAR SMARTER — You were a lucky girl and I hope your effort to help other teen-agers scores.

• • •

DEAR ANN — I'd like to share something with the mother who was distressed because her son married Miss X. She could see none of the girl's fine qualities which her son saw.

I have carried an article with me for 54 years. It appeared in the Jackson (Mich.) Citizen Patriot in 1910 — author "Annoymous." It reads:

"Is love blind? Our cynical friends tell us it is. But I do not agree. Love is the only thing that sees. Where would you be today if someone who loved you did not see things in you that nobody else saw?

"Who but your mother thought you were the finest baby ever born? And why did she have faith in you when no one else did? Because love saw.

"Then the best girl in the world said she'd marry you — even though her friend asked one another, "What did SHE see in HIM?' Love saw.

"When things were so black you even lost faith in yourself, a great-hearted man or woman became your friend and pulled you through. Why? Because love saw.

"There is something fine and big in every one of us, but only those who love can see it. Who can say love is blind?" — A LEADER.

DEAR READER — Thank you for sharing. After what the Senator from Colorado pulled at the Republican National Convention you can be sure I checked to see if the Jackson (Mich.) Citizen Patriot existed in 1910 — and indeed it did.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

QUESTION: A friend telephoned me the other day when I was in a rush to get chore done. During th course of the conversation, she left me hanging at least three times while she dashed away from the phone to stop her two-year-old from climbing on the furniture knocking things over or spilling cookie crumbs on the rug. The mother was calling, I finally found out, to invite my husband and me to a bridge game.

To me, th phone call was more annoying than anything, and I was inclined to hang up the third time she dashed away to grab something away from Junior. Unfortunately, several other friends often do the same thing in the midst of a phone call. Would it be rude to ask a distracted mother to call back when Junior's not underfoot and there's time to finish the call in peace. — Mrs. J. B., Pittsburgh, Pa.

ANSWER: When there are so many interruptions, it seems like the only sensible thing to do. Actually, when young children are around, mothers should try to make phone calls only when toddlers are napping or safely tucked away in the playpen or feeding table.

It is impolite, under any circumstances, to keep a person impatiently dangling on the other end of a phone. When it also becomes drastically inconvenient, it is permissible to suggest tactfully a return call at a more appropriate time.

QUESTION: My son has just been handed a list of flowers he's supposed to pay for when he gets married next month. The bride will make the selection. She's paying for the flowers her attendants will carry, but has specified that my son pay the bill for her bouquet and the throw corsages all boutonnieres for the men and corsages for myself and her mother. These, I understand, are usually bought by the groom

However, the list also mentions corsages for the bride's three aunts and her married sister. Naturally, if he gets corsages for the bride's side, he'll also have to provide corsages for his own grandmother, his four aunts and our own two daughters. This adds up to quite a flower bill and, since he has planned an expensive wedding trip for two weeks, he really doesn't have much left to spend on corsages. Would you please let me know if this expense is customary? Mrs. A. F., Lakewood, N. J.

ANSWER: It would be simply lovely if the groom could send corsages to all the female wedding guests. But, aside from corsages for both mothers, the groom is not obliged to send flowers to sundry aunts, sisters, cousins and whatnot — unless he has an unlimited budget and wants to.

LETTER:

Thanks a million for the recipe "Puffy Croissants" truly the most delicious thing I've made for ages, well worth the patience required. I've drizzled icing on them, sprinkled grated cheese on them and heaven knows what all could be done with them. You were quite right to mention baking just one or two sheets at a time, depending on the oven. . Mrs. A. E. H.

ANSWER:

I was pleased no end with your thank you letter. I knew those croissants (August 18/64) were wonderful and in a professional class by themselves and hoped readers would try them. We have received other gracious thank-you letters for that wonderful Croissants recipe.

QUESTION:

I wonder if you can help me. A few weeks ago I went by air to England and on the plane we had lunch. It was lovely so I wondered if you would have a recipe for it. It was Boeuf Braise Bourguignonne — beef braised in red Burgundy wine with lean bacon, small white onions and mushrooms. This will be my first attempt at cooking with wine . . . Mrs. J. L.

ANSWER:

Small wonder you liked it. I've tasted it too and came home to find the recipe, make it and add it to my file of treasures.

BEEF BOURGUIGNON:

3 lbs. tender beef sirloin, cut into 1" cubes, 2 cups red Burgundy wine, ½ cup butter, 2 cups quartered mushroom caps, ¼ cup chopped shallots or green onions (or ½ cup peeled small white onions), 1 tablespoon flour.

Melt 6 tablespoons of the butter in a deep casserole. Add beef cubes (if desired 1-3 to ½ cup chopped back bacon may be added at this stage). Cover and braise (bake) in a hot oven at 400 deg. Fahr for 20 minutes. Meanwhile saute mushroom caps and shallots or green onions or parboiled small white onions in remaining 2 tablespoons butter. Stir in flour. Add Burgundy and mix well. Pour over beef, cover and return to oven for 30 minutes. Serves 6.

LETTER:

Your many gluten-free recipes have prompted me to write. You should be amazed if you knew how many people you have helped. I have been on this diet for over seven years and have collected a number of recipes. I am inclining a recipe for you. I have changed the original ingredients to comply with my diet . . Mrs. E. L. C.

SQUARES — GLUTEN-FREE (courtesy Mrs. E. L. C.):

1 cup rice flour, ¾ teaspoon baking soda, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ cup margarine or butter, 1 cup brown sugar, 2 eggs, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

NOTE:

If tolerated, ½ cup chocolate chips or raisins or nuts may be added. Cream sugar and margarine or butter, add eggs and beat, then add dry ingredients and vanilla. Bake in oven at 375 deg. Fahr. for 20 to 25 minutes, in a greased 8 x 8" pan.

ANSWER:

Thank you ever so much for this welcome addition to our gluten-free files and for your kind letter. I am sure other readers on gluten-free diets will be grateful too for this tested recipe.

Mrs. Muriel Andrews hangs portrait of "Don" at the Sidewalk Cafe Art Show held at Tabernacle United Church Friday and Saturday.

Sidewalk Cafe Art Show Has Second Successful Year

So successful was the Sidewalk Cafe Art Show at the Tabernacle United Church last year that it has been repeated once again this fall. The show was sponsored by Unit 8 of the church which is composed of professional and business members with Mrs. Clifford Booth, president and was held Friday and Saturday.

Mrs. Muriel Andrews was convener of the affair with Mrs. Gladys Templer, co-convener. Twenty-three exhibitors from Bellevilie and surrounding localities, and from as far away as Ottawa, exhibited their work.

The entrance hall had travel posters covering the walls and a life-size mannequin wearing a painting smock and French beret was quite whitened as he worked at a painting on an easel.

Inside the hall a Paris street scene greeted the visitor. Flowers were everywhere, real and artificial, in metal white carte blue barrows, in potted marigolds across the front of the platform, in greenery on screens. The French atmosphere was then in the form of a monkey with a tin cup, a French poodle, a street lamp by the corner and a fountain on three levels.

The tables were gay with red and white checked cloths and green flasks holding a single candle. Each bench or benches marked off the coffee area, and from a long table coffee was available. French buffet style. Mrs. Keith Day was treasurer for the occasion.

There were 114 paintings on display around the walls with some excellent work being shown. There were fewer abstracts shown this year, and more still life. One large abstract in greens and blues flowing and shading like sea and sky with cubes blocked out, caught the eye immediately. A nice scene of the market in Ottawa was in masterful colors, as was a scene of Belleville's own market.

A fine oil painting of Tabernacle Church was hardly dried in time to show, but exhibited a wealth of detail with the stained glass windows and the warm glow of the brick like the aftergiow of the sunset.

Untramed water colors made an interesting contrast in the show. There were several rural scenes, waterfront scenes of the harbor here, sea and landscapes, many still life pictures of flowers and fruit and one portrait of a youth, showing depth and interest in the skin tones.

An unusual picture was one done with a palette knife with thick strokes. It showed a Chinese mandolin in greys and black tones. It was mounted on burlap on a block that made it look three-dimensional, and was framed in white.

Looking at this fine exhibition one was reminded of the number of artists in Belleville whether hobbyists or semi-professional, is growing and improving in quality.

From Margarine to Cyprus, All Is Grist for Her "Mill"

VANCOUVER (CP) — The byline says Penny Wise.

Last month it was over a story that said in part:

"No woman I know wouldn't adore to have one of the hand bags. . . . Some of the clutch bags are quite pretty too, and there's a small type that appeals particularly to the older woman . . ."

Friday's story said:

"Cyprus used to be called the Island of love. Now there is so much hate you can see it everywhere. . . . The whole city (Nicosia) is a tinder box with hate on the rampage and not a single hope of a true compromise or truce."

To readers of the Vancouver Sun all this means that Evelyn Caldwell, 55, has forsaken her shopping column again.

She's done it before—to go to the Korean war, Russia and more recently Hong Kong—as she pursues a reporting career that has taken her to 30 countries and seen her touch such subjects as margarine war and poverty.

The housewives who have supported her campaigns and even voted her in as an alderman, she is always Penny Wise —the byline he uses even on foreign stories.

Erwin Swangard, managing editor of The Sun, was asked why she was sent to Cyprus. WANTED TO GO

"It's just that she wanted to go so we decided to send her," he said.

"These are the kind of things that come up in a conference. We were just kicking it around. . . . She said she thought she could get an airlift with Canadian troops I said 'if you can get it, go.' She did.

"She will do atmosphere, moods and that sort of thing.'

Penny is the product of experiences garnered while a reporter for five Vancouver newspapers, three of them now folded.

She has been in many battles. She successfully defended the sale of margarine in British Columbia and her demands resulted in 3,500 letters being sent to federal MPs by housewives. Then she sparked another letter campaign to provincial politicians demanding colored margarine. Both types eventually went on sale in the province.

In 1957 many Vancouverites learned her real name for the first time when she successfully ran for alderman. She stayed in office only one term, recalling with a smile afterwards the satisfaction of being the city's acting mayor briefly.

In 1940 she covered the Berlin airlift. In 1951 she went to Korea. Each time she returned to her shopping column, telling the housewife the best buys—without naming brands. Twice she went to Hong Kong, telling of living conditions there, then returned to her "Shopping Guide."

SEE NO EFFECT

WINNIPEG (CP) — Agnes MacDonald, of Elmwood High School, the only woman principal among Winnipeg's nine high schools, says "the fact that I'm a woman makes no difference at all." She says her only job is to help "youngsters grow up in a difficult world and my only responsibility is to help them get an education and cope with problems."

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

Mrs. T. W. Horton Sr. who has been visiting her son and family, Dr. and Mrs. Horton Jr. Quinton, has returned home.

Scholarship Winner Is Announced

The Educational Secretary, Mrs. H. G. Birkenshaw of the Argyll Chapter I.O.D.E. is pleased to announce this year's winner of a $100 scholarship, Miss Katharine Maund, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Fred Maund, 8 Greenlawn Ave. To be eligible for this award the pupils must be the son or daughter of a Canadian or Commonwealth veteran.

Katharine graduated from Grade 13, Nicholson College with a high standing of 77.1%. An accomplished musician she has been active in school groups particularly in the Sodality group. Katharine is presently in the first year nursing class at St. Michael's Hospital in Toronto.

Historic River Thames Offers Fascinating Life of Its Own

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLOANE

LONDON — Like most big city rivers, the historic Thames has a life of its own.

Famous landmark bridges span it, and beneath them ply sea-going freighters and dinghies, crew shells and sightseeing boats, lighters and unusual craft. The girders of giant cranes forest the dock areas, but out toward Kew Gardens there are homes and gardens, pubs and restaurants, and views of the great city quite different from anything on shore.

Of all the Thames' unique facets, perhaps the most unusual is a corner near the heart of the West End known as Cubitt's Yacht Basin. Here, in a fashion long out of style in most cities, some 40 individualistic families live on a variety of boats not likely to be seen in a boat show.

FAR FROM SLUM

Privately owned Cubitt's is far from a slum. Its residents are artists, writers, and lawyers, He owner a member of Parliament. A vote of the community is required before a new resident is admitted.

Miss Jocelyn Lukins for example, is a comely professional photographer who, with architect Tony Cross-Smith, owns a ship of a strange-looking vessel that is so rare it could bring almost as much as a house if it were put on the market. Her wooden sailing barges which once brought all of London's coal in from the sea up to London. Today the job is done by other and speedy craft like lorries and barges.

Miss Lukins paid only a few hundred dollars for the 75-year-old "Venta," now has it insured for $8,500. Master of the rare vessels, up for sale at about being $50,000. With Smith, crewman Nicholas Thompson, and a professional captain, Miss Lukins this summer picked herself up and sailed to the pine, hard as stone after three-quarters of a century. It is quite ideal for living, and Miss Lukins and Smith have fixed it up with all the comforts of home — a gallery, library, and one of the best rooms to sleep nine, and a decor compounded of brass lamps and rare sailing gear.

SAILING ANOTHER STORY

Sailing a Thames barge is another story, for it is a two-man job requiring a combination of brute strength and elaborate seamanship. In a stiff breeze the mast on a single 100-foot fir mast is designed to be handled by two crewmen, the only known such rig in the world.

The last of the wooden Thames barges was built in 1924, and those who now own or rent one ring — there is one other at Cubitt's — take great pride in their appearance, which is traditional. Most are painted black with blue, yellow and chocolate trim, their red sails are treated, in a timeless manner, with a mixture of ochre, fish oil and water, to keep them moist and flexible.

As if living on and sailing these monsters weren't enough, most of the owners engage in one or more of the four annual barge races. There is one here on the Thames, Medway, Black Water and Orwell Rivers. Ordinary sailors have been known to turn pale witnessing the feats of seamanship involved in struggling with the polished oak helms, heavy anchor winches, cumbersome stabilizers and sail rigs.

Most of the people who live at Cubitt's are self-admitted characters, having in common only their inscrutable love of living on water or being able to go out and sail when the spirit moves (though comparatively few of the vessels are licensed to move).

Peter Barnes, son of a country vicar, is an executive of a car hire firm. He says his wife wouldn't have married him if he hadn't agreed to live with her on a boat. He never intends to live anywhere else, already has snatched away the red ensign which will signal his ultimate burial at sea. .

Among the wild variety of boats in the basin are a converted Thames lifeboat, a square bonneted boat with strapped boilers, a former wartime tank landing craft with a striped awning, a one-time ferry, a retired Royal Navy gunboat, and a steel lighter with a deck house that makes it look for all the world like Noah's Ark. Maybe it is; most of the vessels here are historic or rare in one sense or another.

Typical of the odd riverside life of the Thames is a nearby community known as Strand-on-the-Green, which is neither a strand nor green. It is an embankment walk, a favorite haunt of afternoon strollers, lined with a row of handsome, fashionable and expensive Georgian homes. The "local" is a pub known as the City Barge and is one of the few in London where, at high tide, you may row a dinghy up to the entrance. The same high tide frequently laps the front stoops of the homes, making it rather dangerous to let tilt kids 'step outside to play without a careful look.

Most of the Thames is lined with similar little insular communities, but essential to the fascination waterfronts have always held for men. And women like Jocelyn Lukins.

WEDDING

JENKINS — VILNEFF

MARMORA — A pretty autumn wedding took place in St. Andrew's United Church, Marmora recently when Joyce Carol Anesta Vilneff, daughter of Mrs. Vilneff of Marmora and the late Mr. Simon Vilneff became the bride of William Joseph Jenkins, son of Mrs. Jenkins, Marmora and the late Mr. Robert Jenkins. Rev. J. M. D. McLeod performed the ceremony and Mrs. McLeod played the wedding music. The soloist was Mr. Frank Baker of Pickering.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Douglas Vilneff of Marmora and her only attendant was her sister, Mrs. Gilbert Gaunt, Marmora.

The groomsman was Mr. Robert Jenkins, brother of the bridegroom and ushers were Mr. Grant Galloway of Glen Miller and Mr. George Brown.

The bride chose for her wedding a short gown of nylon and rayon lace over net. An overlay of lace formed the bodice and sleeves. The skirt billowed at the two flounces bordered with lace. A crown of bells and lily of the valley held in place her veil and she carried a bouquet of red roses.

Mrs. Gaunt as matron of honor wore a pink nylon sheer over taffeta with embroidered bodice, matching the bouffant of a short head veil. She carried white and pink carnations.

A reception was held in the church hall where the bride's mother was wearing a two-piece lace ensemble in taffeta with matching accessories and a corsage of pink carnations. The bridegroom's mother wore a two-piece knitted suit of wool jersey, matching accessories and a corsage of yellow carnations.

For the wedding trip to points north, Mrs. Jenkins wore a three-piece knitted suit in blue with corsage of white carnations, white hat and black accessories.

HUGHES — KIME

MARMORA — A pretty wedding was solemnized in St. Michael's Church, London, Ont., recently when Patricia Anne Kime, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Kime of London was united in marriage to James O'Neill Hughes, son of Mr. Shad and Mrs. James Hughes, Chatham, formerly of Marmora and Belleville. Rev. James Williams officiated at the ceremony.

The traditional wedding music was played by Mr. Alex Clarke who also accompanied the soloist, Frank Jervis, in several appropriate selections.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length bridal gown of Swiss Alpaca with long flowing train. Her veil was the one worn by the bridegroom's mother at her marriage. She carried a bouquet of orchids and stephanotis and wore a pearl necklace, a gift of the bridegroom.

All the bride's attendants wore short raspberry colored wool crepe dresses and carried bouquets of pink carnations and garnet Sweetheart roses.

Mr. David Hughes, brother of the bridegroom was groomsman, while Messrs. John and Grant Kime, Mr. Thomas Kime, Mr. Lawrence Organ and Mr. John Nash, all of London, were the ushers.

The reception was held at the Kimbrae Farms north of London.

For the wedding trip to Crowe Lake near Marmora the bride wore a three-piece wool suit. Here they renewed acquaintances with many relatives in the area. They will reside in Toronto.

Successful Living

Writer Says Children Are Noisier Than Barking Dogs

DEAR DORIS — I've read in the newspaper that a city has formed a committee determined to do something about barking dogs.

I live in a neighborhood that is crowded with children and maybe five or six dogs and I wouldn't trade my dog for any two children around here. It's too bad the city can't form a committee to stop the screaming and crying of the children and the shouts of their mothers, that go on continually all day and every day.

We also have a barking dog in our neighborhood, but if the committee took time to find our why he barks so much they would find that he is continually teased by the children and neglected by his owner. It's not the dog that needs dealing with; it's the owner.

I no doubt sound like an old witch who prefers dogs to children. On the contrary I love them both, and some day I hope to have my own family. If my children are only half as obedient and loyal as my pet dog, I will be a happy Mother. My dog received her fine qualities with plenty of love and simple discipline. Some of you mothers should try it. It works much better than shouts or spankings.

I apologize to all mothers of quiet and well-behaved children, — A DAILY READER.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DAILY — I daresay it won't be the dogs who are fined. Isn't the owner upon whether it's dogs or children? But can you muzzle children?

I'd like to hear from you again, say ten years and three bouncing babies later!

DEAR DORIS — Why do we see women wearing pearls more often than the lovely crystal necklaces? Are the crystals less fashionable?

Would it be correct to wear a good single strand, matinee length crystal necklace in the daytime? — CRYSTAL GAZER.

DEAR GAZER — Pearls are perenially popular. Good ones glows with a subdued brilliance which makes them wearable on occasions calling for moderation.

Brighter stones give that sparkling look which goes with evening or dinner dress; but a single crystal strand, with no other jewellery, can be quite effective for daytime wear.

I am sending you my Rule of Fourteen, which will help you avoid that Christmas Tree Look.

Is Fighting Delinquency In Congo

ELISABETHVILLE, (AP)—A Dutch Roman Catholic priest is waging a battle to save the youth of this Congo city from delinquency.

Rev. Gerard van Asperdt, 33, a former officer in the Royal Dutch Air Force, also holds an architectural degree. He thought it worth an effort to try to save the thousands of youths who sleep in gutters and spend their waking hours in bars.

He started with only the blessing of the local father superior of the Salesian Order. He cleared some waste ground three miles out of town to build the home of his dreams—a city of youth.

The local Lions Club donated $800—and Father van Asperdt has built a modest house for his own living quarters, a kitchen and a chapel.

The next phase of the project 111 cost $160,000 and van Asperdt hopes to have it finished within two years. It will provide accommodation for 600 boarders and 900 day boys. Youths of from 15 to 25 are acceptable but, he added: "We shall take older boys if they are unable to find work."

Although he is a Roman Catholic, Father van Asperdt said "We shall help everybody who needs our help, Catholic, heathen or Protestant."

The project will comprise workshops, a bakery and a technical school. Products will be sold in town to raise funds.

CARPETS CAUSE HUSH

The use of carpets in schools has been found to eliminate loud talking and horseplay and to promote dignified behavior and neater dress.

GENA BRANSCOMBE

"Dear are remember'd things, fire-light and home,
Pines white with glist'ning snow, bays bright with foam.
Our solemn pledge we give, thro' years to be,
Canada, Canada, guardians are we,
Proudly thy ships will ride, keeping thee free."

—from "Arms That Have Shelter'd Us," the words and music by Gena Branscombe and dedicated to The Royal Canadian Navy on its Fiftieth Anniversary.

"Compose an exercise every day, for a song, a musical instrument, or voices for choral work. Have courage and refuse to be discouraged," Picton born gifted Gena Branscombe advises those aspiring to be composers.

Golden words are these from a composer of more than 150 songs, many choral works, 55 choral arrangements of classical and modern compositions, and written works for violin, piano and orchestra.

Now, today, one of America's leading and distinguished women composers, conductors and poets, Gena regards her United Empire Loyalist ancestors with great pride and will tell you: "my mother's people, the Branscombes, landed where the Brooklyn Navy Yard is now, in 1640, from the little Elizabethan village of Branscombe on the south Devon coast, landing earlier on the coast of what is now New Hampshire." Recently, she had the pleasure of visiting the lovely old rambling manor house "Edge Barton", where 12th century old Bishop Branscombe, (who built Exeter Cathedral — his ornate tomb with effigy is there) was born.

That the tales and stories of her adventuresome pioneer ancestors have played a direct part in shedding historical significance on some of her work is evident in a major work entitled "Pilgrims of Destiny" which has to do with early American history; the courage, faith and vision that came with the young English Pilgrims who sailed on the Mayflower, (?) teh I knew much of the passengers on that ship personally, after finishing all the research on them. . .")

This, her longest and perhaps most ambitious work, a choral drama, (of which Gena also wrote the text) was sponsored by the National Federation of Music Clubs at historic Plymouth in 1920, and has since been the recipient of various awards and citations, among which was a performance during the 100th anniversary of Broadway Congregational Church's founding.

"Has any of your work stemmed directly from your Canadian background?" we asked.

"Oh, but definitely," she answered, and spoke of the pleasure she's had of writing the music for poems written by such Canadian poets as Katherine Hale, Ont. called "Dear Lad O' Mine" was used in World War I and all the royalties were given by the publisher, poet and composer to the Canadian Red Cross.

"Another influence was Arthur Stringer. . ." and she set to music his "Our Canada From Sea To Sea" which was played by bands and sung by massed choruses across the country when King Geege and Queen Elizabeth visited here in 1939. It was played at the White House by the U.S. Marine Band (orchestra) during the dinner given by President and Mrs. Roosevelt for the Royal couple; by the Coldstream Guard Band and by the Detroit Symphony Orchestra under Barbirolli up at Fort William.

"Other poems of his for which I composed the music were "Of My Old Loves", "Old Dr. MacGin" and one of his last poems, "Blow Softly, Maple Leaves," which was written upon the occasion of maple trees being sent to England for planting on the graves of Canadian service men buried there, after World War II.

My mother, Sara Branscombe, who was a wonderful writer, but had little opportunity to develop her writing, also influenced my work. . .Then" she continued, "the cycle for chorus and orchestra entitled "Youth of the World" (again her own text) "has a middle movement called "Maples". which has to do with trees growing along the Bay of Quinte at Picton. The closing movement, which gives its name to the cycle, "Youth of the World" contains the lines: "And Canada's sons, with bright fair hair, Met French who settled at Quebec in the 16th century," and was first performed by the Chicago Women's Orchestra with the composer conducting.

War are we forgetting her Navy Hymn (for which she wrote both words and music as a tribute to the land of her birth) which was officially adopted into the repertoire of the Royal Canadian Navy in 1960 the words of which grace this column, by the kind permission of the author. This hymn we played by the massed bands of the Atlantic Fleet and sung by Navy choruses.

"But," declared Gena, "my birthplace are one of treasures for which I'm ever indebted, namely the love affair which I have had with brass all my life. This, you see, started when I heard the military band leading its regiment through Picton in the middle of the night enroute to the summer encampment on the Quinte bay-shore. My earliest musical memory is of being awakened that night by sounds of such haunting, uncanthly beauty that my little three-and-a-half year old heart almost burst with longing.

"Every orchestral work I've written has leaned heavily on the brass section — there are two suites for French Horn — and I've always used brass (and low woodwinds) when instrumental ensembles were indicated, with my chorus. . .

"The epitaph I'd like best, would be: "She walked to the sound of invisible trumpets"."

"And it's my firm conviction that all composers, down deep in their hearts, feel exactly the same way."

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

The semi-storm of protest fired by irate parents of minor hockey players over the new regulation fees set down by the Belleville Minor Hockey Association was assuaged somewhat yesterday by a statement by Tom Neill, president of the Belleville Minor Sports Association.

What started the parental furore was the bare statement issued by the Belleville Minor Hockey Association, a subsidiary of the Sports Association, that registration fees for playing youngsters would be $3.00 per head-or $6.00 family rate.

It was a bare statement with no accompanying explanation as to why these rates should be charged.

There was nothing forthcoming from the BMHA as to where the money was going, for what purposes and for what reason the rates were being charged.

Norm Carter, recreational director, issued a statement which appeared recently in this column which revealed what other cities and centres were doing along registration charges line, but so far nothing from the BMHA officials.

President Neill offered reasonable explanations, some of which will be readily understood by minor hockey players' parents.

Said Neill: "At the 1963 annual meeting of the city Parks Board we (the BMSA) were told by members of the Recreation Commission that the Belleville Minor Hockey Association would have to pay ice rentals in 1964."

I do not know what 1964-65 ice rental prices are but Pi wager anywhere between $12 and $14 per hour when some 1,400 youngsters expect to play organized hockey.

This amount, says Neill, will be taken care of out of registration fees. There are also advertising bills, BMHA playdowns registrations, travelling and other expenses.

Told the Belleville Minor Sports Association, which includes hockey, softball, baseball, soccer, etc., was a member agency of the United Appeal Fund, Neill said the money which falls far below expectations, goes to the purchase of equipment and other necessities.

"All moneys collected," he said, "are turned over to the city manager for disbursement."

Neill claims through investigation that house leagues in the city have been registration free. In Trenton, Cobourg and Newmarkville the kids are charged with a $2.00 fee. In Madoc where there is natural ice they get tabbed a dollar.

In the past few years, and this is due to lack of the proper ice-time, I have had dozens of letters from parents claiming their boys do not get a fair share of playing time. This is partly due to coaches using their best players for win sake.

Neill, however, says that this season the house league teams will rotate all players who register. "This is a must in all divisions," he says.

There are parents who claim, and in most cases rightly so, they cannot afford the $3.00 or $6.00 registration, plus one dollar insurance fees for their youngsters.

BMSA president Neill says — and I quote: "All kids whose parents cannot afford to pay the required registration, will not be denied the chance to play. President Wally Willmott of the Belleville Elks Club says his club will take care of this" . . . end quote.

Be that as it may. The city council or any other body cannot halt the forces of nature. Every year sees some 100 youngsters graduate to the hockey-playing age. But the playing facilities of the creaking Memorial Arena remain the same.

Hockey is the natural sports heritage of Canadian youngsters. And they should not be denied the right to play it. Oshawa, Peterborough and other cities have special facilities for minor hockey players alone.

I have no objection to registration fees. I think they are necessary to pay the operations bills. But you can scarcely blame a parent for objecting when he goes to the arena and sees his son sit on the bench while the favored few get the most of the ice time available.

Its about time that somebody in the seats of the alleged mighty wake up to the fact that hockey-minded youngsters of this city (and there are few that aren't) should be provided with the facilities that are their rightful due.

White Sox Stay Alive ★ ★ ★ ★

Weekend Win Gives Flag To Yankees

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

Yogi Berra is making every move the right one.

The Yankees claimed a piece of the American League pennant Friday night when Whitey Ford, saved by manager Berra for the occasion, whipped Cleveland 5-2 on a fancy four-hitter.

The win assured New York of at least a tie in the pennant race with Chicago White Sox, who started off extinction in a doubleheader with Kansas City.

"Maybe we'll have a little party after the game tomorrow," he said as he left Yankee Stadium Friday.

They will indeed if young Al Downing holds the fort against the Indians today in the season's next-to-last game.

The White Sox, meanwhile, stayed alive and boosted their winning streak to seven by sweeping the Athletics 3-2 and 5-4. A Yankee victory today—or Sunday—will end it regardless of how Chicago fares in its final pair with Kansas City. The White Sox trail the Yanks by two games.

Ford—held out of the Wednesday-Thursday four-game set with Detroit Tigers—fell behind 2-0 after two innings and then blanked Cleveland without a hit the rest of the way, retiring the last 16 men in facets.

A five-run third inning gave the 35 - year - old southpaw a working margin as he coasted to his 17th season victory.

KNOCKED ORIOLES OUT

New York's tie-clinching victory knocked third-place Baltimore out of contention despite the Orioles' 10-4 pasting of Detroit. The Los Angeles Angels nipped Minnesota Twins 5-4 in an afternoon game. The second Sox and Washington Senators were idle.

Singles by Phil Linz and Bobby Richardson got the Yankees untracked in the third against Cleveland Indians' Jack Kralick and an intentional walk to Mickey Mantle loaded the bases.

Elston Howard doubled home two runs and Tom Tresh drove in the rally with a three-run homer, his 16th.

Ford, who has lost six, was touched for single runs in the first and second but permitted only one other Indians base runner—Joe Azcue drew a walk in the fourth—while running his career scoreless streak to 23 inn. He struck out eight and lowered his earned run average to 2.13.

Bill Skowron's bases-loaded single in the ninth inning completed the White Sox rally after Juan Pizarro drove in two runs in the opener and posted his 19th victory.

Pizarro needed a four-inning relief assist from Hoyt Wilhelm in the first game after the bases-loaded single with two out in the fourth gave the Sox the lead.

Brooks Robinson drove in four runs with his 29th homer and two singles and Jerry Adair drove in three with a bases-loaded double as the Orioles ripped the Tigers. But they remained 2½ games behind New York with only one game remaining.

Felix Torres drove in three Los Angeles runs with a pair of singles and Bob Rodgers homered, but the Twins almost pulled even in the ninth with three runs off Angels ace Dean Chance, who was making an infrequent relief appearance.

Offered Patterson Fight

Chuvalo Stops Doug Jones In 11th

NEW YORK (CP)—Canadian heavyweight champion George Chuvalo of Toronto stopped fourth - ranked world heavyweight contender Doug Jones of New York in the 11th round at Madison Square Garden Friday night and was immediately offered a Nov. 27 fight against former champion Floyd Patterson.

Chuvalo, 27, using a vicious left hook, outscored the 27-year-old Jones through 10 rounds and won on a technical ko-knkout at 1:28 of the 11th round after putting him down for a six count. It was a scheduled 12-rounder.

"We plan to offer Patterson $25,000 Monday for the bout (against Chuvalo)," said Harry Markson, head of the Garden boxing club. "We'll see what happens then. Chuvalo said it was okay with him."

Chuvalo was-ranked No. 8 by the World Boxing Association before Friday's fight. The win moved him into Jones's No. 4 berth behind champion Cassius Clay, Sonny Liston and Patterson, the top two heavyweights in that order.

START ELIMINATION

The fight was also the first of an elimination tournament to declare a new world heavyweight champion to replace Cassius Clay, who has been stripped of his title by the WBA for signing for a rematch against Sonny Liston.

It was a long comeback trail for Chuvalo, who went into the Garden six years ago as a 9-to-5 favorite over Pat McMurty of Tacoma, Wash., and was battered through 10 rounds to lose a unanimous decision.

He was 2-to-1 underdog in Friday's clash with Jones.

Chuvalo recently signed a five-year contract with a five man syndicate headed by Irving Ungerman of Toronto. He won' his first fight under the new administration July 27 when he knocked out Dan Proul in the third round.

Chuvalo, noted in the past for his habit of bleeding profusely, who has never been knocked off his feet, has refined his style under Ungerman. A crushing sweeping left hook became a short-armed hook Friday night. Jones, a master hitter, tried to outbox the Toronto fighter but crumpled before Chuvalo's heavy artillery. Steadily left hooks to the head pushed Chuvalo ahead of Jones on points before the referee ended the bout.

Chuvalo landed a crushing left hook to Jones's stomach in the 11th round. It doubled the New Yorker up and he retreated. Chuvalo followed and drove Jones into the ropes. The New Yorker bounced off the ropes. Chuvalo rammed home a right and down went Jones.

Chuvalo said later he hit his opponent with a left hook to the chin and then crossed the right as he sagged.

Jones was up at six, but took a mandatory eight count from referee Art Mercante. It was a brief respite. And Chuvalo attacked savagely before Mercante intervened with Jones helpless on the ropes.

It was only the second time in 30 bouts that Jones had been decked.

Chuvalo weighed 211 pounds to Jones' 184 and now has won 28, lost eight with two draws. Jones has won 34, lost six with one draw.

Garden officials announced attendance for the fight as televised bout at 5,200 and the gross gate at $15,000. Chuvalo's share of the gross is 20 per cent.

Chicago manager Tommy Ivan said that centre Fred Stanfield will be brought up from St. Catharines Black Hawks of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A League.

Montreal, still smarting from a 5-3 loss Thursday to Quebec Aces, sent eight players, including goalie Gump Worsley to the minors.

Worsley, right - winger Leon Rochefort, centre Gary Peters and defenceman Bryan Watson were sent to Quebec.

Right-winger Andre Boudrias and defencemen Jean Gauthier and Noel Picard were shifted to Omaha Knights of the CPHL. Keith McCreary goes to Hershey Bears.

The changes left two new faces on the Habs' roster for their final exhibition games—right - winger Yvan Cournoyer and defenceman Ted Harris.

National League
In Case Of A Tie-This

BOSTON (AP) — Joe Cronin, president of the American League, set up the formula Friday for playoffs in the event of a two- or three-team tie for the pennant after the conclusion of the season Sunday.

Arrangements were made in a telephone conference among the three contenders and Cronin.

If two teams tie for first, they will meet in a best-of-three series starting Monday afternoon and continuing without a day off until it is completed. All games will start at 1.30 p.m. local time.

If Chicago White Sox and New York Yankees tie, the first game will be played at New York and the second and, third, if necessary, at Chicago.

If Chicago and Baltimore 'Orioles tie, the first game would be played in Baltimore and the others in New York.

MAY HAVE ROUND-ROBIN

In the event of a three-way tie a round-robin will be played with a split being declared when it has lost two games. This would run a minimum of four games and a maximum of five.

In the event of a three-way tie, the following schedule would be followed. Oct. 5 Chicago at New York; Oct. 6 Baltimore at Chicago; Oct. 7 New York at Baltimore.

The teams that have not been eliminated will play Oct. 8 with either New York at Chicago, Chicago at Baltimore or Baltimore at New York. If more than one is left after that they will play Oct. 9 in the home park of the club that has had fewer home games.

"Anything can happen" said Cronin. "We thought at ought to have a draw to alert the teams and their ticket offices to get ready for Monday.

Voters May Decide On Coliseum

VANCOUVER (CP) — Toronto Leafs' offer to build an $8,000,000 coliseum here may go before ratepayers in December in civic elections.

City council decided in closed session Thursday to draft a motion that would end the offer of Stafford Smythe, president of the National Hockey League club, to the voters.

The motion would be presented at Tuesday's open meeting.

The Leafs' offer to build the coliseum included a firm request for a gift "with no strings attached" of the land for the building.

"We have only got one proposal and that is from Leafs," president Stafford Smythe," Alderman Ernie Broome said in an interview.

"It is the only thing before us and we've got to do something about it."

Smythe has told the council his offer expires Dec. 30. Civic elections are held Dec. 5.

If ratepayers approve the Toronto offer, the decision will be left with council, Mr. Broome said.

The Canadian National Institute for the Blind offers services to over 25,000 blind or partially blind Canadians. Vocational training and rehabilitation assistances are essential. In many communities the CNIB is a member of the United Community Fund.

Cards, Reds Lose; Race Gets Hotter

Anybody's Title

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

There's only one thing certain about baseball's National League pennant race: It won't end today.

It may not even end Sunday.

What it could do is develop into a four-way playoff That possibility is remote, however since a victory by first place St. Louis Cardinals would cut Philadelphia Phillies and San Francisco Giants loose from the chase.

Instead of becoming clearer, the race grew zanier Friday night. The Cardinals lost to the cellar-dwelling New York Mets 1-0 but retained their telt-game lead over Cincinnati Reds, who lost to the third-place Phillies 4-3.

The Reds and the Phillies have one game left — with each other Sunday. The Cardinals play the Mets twice. And the Giants take on the Chicago Cubs two more times. San Francisco dumped the Cubs 9-0 Friday.

WOULD CLINCH TIE

A St. Louis victory today would clinch at least a tie for the Cardinals and place the pressure on Cincinnati.

The Reds apparently already were feeling the pressure after the loss to Philadelphia. A post-game argument erupted among the Cincinnati players in the dressing room, and acting manager Dick Sisler had to be called to quell it

Sisler, however, termed the dispute "only minor difficulties," adding:

"It was nothing, just forget it. In the heat of a pennant race like this, players say things before they think It is a thing that has happened before elsewhere and will happen again. I went out and quieted the boys. We're a happy team, and I think we still can win."

St. Louis manager Johnny Keane naturally would h ve preferred a victory over the lowly Mets, but he looked at the situation optimistically.

"We'll do it; we'll make it," Keane said. "It isn't at all bad. Had the Reds won it might have been critical. Now I think we'll win it."

In other games in the National League Friday night Milwaukee Braves beat Pittsburgh 7-2 in 10 innings before losing 5-4, and Houston Colts belted Los Angeles Dodgers 6-1.

The Mets snapped the Cardinals' winning string at eight games behind Al Jackson's five hit pitching. St. Louis got three of the hits in the eighth inning but failed to score. Dick Groat lined out with the bases loaded, ending the threat.

The Mets scored the only run of the game in the third inning off Bob Gibson (13-12) George Altman singled, stole second, advanced a third on an infield out and scampered across as Ed Kranepool rapped a single to left field.

The Phillies trailed 3-0, mostly because of their sloppy fielding, when they exploded for four runs in the eighth. Jim O'Toole had pitched a three-hitter until then. Tony Taylor singled in the first run before Richie Allen lashed a two-run triple and scored on a single by Alex Johnson.

Cincinnati scored twice in the sixth as Allen and Bobby Wine made errors on a double steal by Chico Ruiz and Vada Pinson.

A Reds' threat in the fourth inning was halted abruptly when Tom Haller is gunned off their third triple play of the season. Left fielder Alex Johnson started it with an outstanding catch of Deron Johnson's fly.

Bob Bolin (6-9) limited the Cubs to three hits in keeping the Giants mathematically alive. Tom Haller hit a three-run homer, his fourth blast in as many games, while Willie Mays and Jim Davenport each contributed two runs batted in. Jim Hart hit his 31st homer. The Braves avenged their winning streak to eight games in the first game of the double-header. Every Clonginer picked up his 19th victory against 14 defeats when the Braves scored in the 10th inning on Wilbur Wood's bases-loaded walk to Woody Woodward.

Gene Alley and Roberto Clemente socked homers for the Pirates in the nightcap. Clemente's homer with Mazi Mota aboard proved to be decisive.

Danny Coombs of Houston earned his first major league triumph although he needed relief help from Jim Owens in the sixth. Rusty Staub slammed a two-run homer for the Colts.

Unbeaten Lions Favored Over Argonauts

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Canadian Football League swings into action at Toronto tonight in what the fans and odd-makers have written off as a sod-testing ceremony for British Columbia Lions of the Western Football Conference.

The Lions, undefeated in nine games and boasting a record seven point favorites over third-place Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Football Conference are already being picked to compete in the annual Grey Cup classic at Toronto Nov. 28.

In other weekend action, Saskatchewan Roughriders, who are currently tied with Calgary Stampeders for second place in the WFC, meet Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the EFC in another interlocking game at Hamilton Sunday, and Calgary visits Winnipeg Blue Bombers in regular WFC play.

The Lions - Argonauts game will be televised nationally over the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation network beginning at 8 p.m. EDT Saturday, and the Saskatchewan - Hamilton match will be televised nationally by the CTV network beginning at 2 p.m. Sunday.

A victory by one of the four teams playing in the east could create problems for nearly all the five other CFL clubs.

A win for Toronto would carry them out of a two-way tie with Montreal Alouettes and give them sole possession of third place in the EFC. It would also snap the Lions' unbeaten streak and give Calgary or Saskatchewan to overcome British Columbia's one - point lead in the WFC.

On the other hand, the Lions would maintain first place with a win over the Argos.

A Hamilton win would give the defending Grey Cup champions a first-place tie with Ottawa Rough Riders in the EFC, but a win by Saskatchewan, coupled with a win by the Argos, could put them into first place in the west.

Calgary would also benefit from a Toronto win, since a victory for the Stampeders against the grounded Blue Bombers would leave them in a tie with Saskatchewan and even sole possession of first place.

The Lions are aiming at becoming the first team in the Canadian football to finish a full season undefeated since the formation of the CFL, and the first team in Canadian football to finish a season unbeaten since Calgary Stampeders effected it in 1948, winning 15 and tying one.

The Lions can boast that no team has scored more than two touchdowns against them in regular action this season and have yielded only 82 points in nine games, just over an average of nine points a game.

The club averages 249 pounds a player.

The front foursome tought will include newcomer Gus Kapsis, 252 pounds, obtained from Chicago Bears of the National Football League, ex-Argo Dick Fouts, Mike Martin and Mike Cacic.

Darron Fieldgate, Jesse Williams and Paul Seale are the linebackers with Ron Morris taking over for the injured Steve Shafer in the secondary with Neal Beaumont, Bill Munsey and Bo Bailey.

Toronto, hard-hit by injuries, will be without the services of linebacker Milt Campbell, who suffered an ankle injury against Calgary last Tuesday.

John Rauch will dress and bring the Canadian player limit to 17, while Jim Leo will replace Campbell on the left corner. Dave Privie will take over Leo's defensive end position.

The Tiger-Cats have lost a pair of players this week but half back Willie Bethea, who returned to action this week after a seven-game layoff, will be back in action.

A win for the Roughriders would stretch their win streak to six games—the longest of any CFL club this season.

Although the Lions are undefeated they have three ties included among their six wins.

Moira Gridders Win Pair

By ROBERT SNEFJELLA

Moira senior and junior Trojans defeated Prince Edward Collegiate 20-6 and 19-3 to gain victories in their opening games in Bay of Quinte COSSA play.

The games were played in mud and rain under the lights at the fairgrounds yesterday evening.

In the second quarter Moira drove 73 yards for a major. The main play was a 40-yard pass by quarterback Babcock to end Garry Grey. With third and goal, Bob Gibson took a two-way into punt formation, but instead of punting he sneaked around right end for the T.D. The conversion attempt was missed.

Bailey added another point in the third quarter when he kicked a single.

A fumble by quarterback Ray Hobson on the next play turned into a Moira major. Garry Grey picked up the lose ball and raced into the Picton goal area. The two - point was again missed.

On an almost identical play the score was made 19-0 when Dave Heisted recovered a fumble in the Picton end zone. Bailey kicked the convert.

Some sharp passing by Hobson gave the losers their six points. He threw a 25-yard pass to end Bart Fredricks, and on the next play an identical one to Paul Jones in the Moira end zone.

Moira junior Trojans scored all of their 19 points in the first half and just hung on from there on the driving winds and rain in the second half made it impossible to throw or even run well.

Picton took advantage of the wind in the final quarter when they scored a safety touch and a rouge.

Moira's first touchdown came from two yards out when Pete Bishop scored to climax a 50-yard drive. Ralph Woods scored the second touchdown on a fine run of eight yards and in the second quarter Alex Mc-Cleave smashed over from one yard out. The convert was good.

Jet Car Smashes Record

BONNEVILLE SALT FLATS, Utah (AP) — Walt Arfons' jet-powered car, the Wingfoot Express, broke a world speed record Friday with a clocking of 413.2 miles per hour on the western Utah salt flats.

The mark of 407.65 miles per hour was set last year on the flats by Craig Breedlove, also in a jetpowered car.

Tom Green of Wheaton, Ill., drove the Arfons' designed car that averaged 413.20 miles per hour over a distance of one kilometre and 413.20 miles per hour over one mile.

Breedlove's 407.65 was over the mile.

The runs are timed going and coming over the route.

Green's first run over the mile was 406.55 miles per hour. On the return it was 420.07.

The average of those two speeds was 413.31, but the computed average, taking into consideration wind and timing, was 413.20.

Donald Campbell, Britain's speed ace, has a mark of 403.136 miles per hour, set on dry Australian salt bed last July.

His car's engine was directly connected to the wheels. The wheels were directly turned by the engine and some claim that is the real land speed record.

In the slim and sleek four-wheeled Wingfoot Express the jet engine does not have a direct connection with the wheels.

But Green and Arfons consider their speed a record for a land vehicle, despite the technicality.

Both of Campbell's runs were at speeds of 403.1 mile per hour over a measured mile.

Breedlove set his mark Aug. 5, 1963. Campbell set his July 18, 1963.

Breedlove, of Los Angeles, plans to try again on the flats here later this month.

The jet engines in Breedlove's and Arfons' cars have about 5,000 horsepower.

OTTAWA (CP) — Hillinger Kari Hilsinger Night at Lansdowne Park Tuesday when Saskatchewan Roughriders meet Ottawa Rough Riders in an interlocking game of the Canadian Football League.

Hillinger played halfback for Ottawa, Saskatchewan and Montreal Alouettes.

Earlier this year he was seriously injured in a car accident and had both his legs amputated above the knees.

A plaque will be presented by captains Kaye Vaughan of Ottawa and Reg Whitehouse of Saskatchewan which will be turned over to Hillinger in hospital in Montreal.

Gals Are Happy In Tokyo

By BARBARA JACKSON

TOKYO (AP)—It may look like a jail and be almost as impregnable as Fort Knox, but the women's Olympic village has gone over well with the female competitors.

The former barrack-style austerity has gone with the arrival of many of the teams.

Behind the virtually impenetrable 15-foot-high wire surrounding the four storey blocks of the female section, all women are happily relaxing in their spacious rooms.

There are three or four beds to each gaily curtained, large-closeted room.

A squad of women employees of the Tokyo Olympic organization are kept busy daily ironing, washing and mending feminine garments in the many utility rooms.

The village is almost impossible for anyone except accredited women competitors and officials to enter.

Women reporters, usually permitted access to elsewhere, are seldom allowed to pass through the closely guarded gate even on production of an identity card.

Each has to apply for special permission and is conducted around each block by a village official. Female, naturally.

Vancouver Hoopsters Beat Peru

VANCOUVER (CP)—Vancouver All-Stars applied fast-breaking play to hand the Peru Olympic basketball team a surprising 68-54 defeat Friday night in an exhibition game.

The Canadians were held to a 13-10 lead through the first 10 minutes of the game but sprang into a solid lead from there and enlarged the second half ahead 28-20.

The Peruvians, whose American coach Jim McGregor was fired last week, seemed far from their best, fouled often, and lost cohesion in their attack through the latter stages of the game.

Peru has been seeded among the top 12 teams at the Olympics. It leaves for Tokyo Sunday after a rematch with the All-Stars here tonight.

Metro Jrs. Won't Play Down East

TORONTO (CP) — The nine clubs of the Ontario Hockey Association's Metro Junior B Division contended Friday night that last year's interlocking schedule with Eastern B4-000, and voted unanimously to refuse to participate in it this year.

The OHA had ordered the Toronto-area clubs to play one game in both Kingston and Peterborough, with the eastern clubs to make return trips to Metro rinks.

The schedule for the nine Metro clubs has a tentative starting date of Oct. 22

Last year 24,694 blind persons were registered with the Canadian National Institute for the Blind to receive treatment and vocational assistance. Donations to the United Community Fund campaigns help these Canadians regain an active and productive life.

Axe Falls On Wolves Manager

By ALAN WALKER

LONDON (CP)—When a soccer team's fortunes fall, the manager's head cannot be far behind.

This standard rule was applied with its usual ruthlessness to Stan Cullis shortly after the English soccer season opened.

His once-great Wolverhampton Wanderers found themselves in the cellar of the first division. The axe fell on Cullis.

He was the 54th soccer manager to be sacked since the end of the Second World War. With 22 teams in all divisions, that adds up to a lot of sacrifices—an average of nearly six a team.

Cullis's dismissal came as no surprise. A week earlier Joe Mercer, who left Aston Villa during the close season, commented on Wolves' poor start and said: "Stan will need all his friends now."

What was surprising is that Wolves should do so badly not long after they had won the Football Association cup.

FINISHED 15TH

Cullis had played or worked for Wolves since the early 1930s. After a year as assistant manager he took over as manager in 1948 and steered the club to the cup in 1949. They won it again in 1960 but last year finished 16th in the 22-team division.

Their poor form last year was despite expenditure of £150,000 on new players Ray Crawford, Jimmy Melia, Pat Buckley and Bobby Woodruff.

"This was Cullis's Achilles heel," said Bernard Joy, former Arsenal player, after Cullis was sacked. "There was no one superior at finding and grooming youngsters, but his touch was unsure when it came to buying an established player."

The aftermath of the club's decision to dispense with Cullis proved there was more in his job than originally met the eye.

Sports writers, fans and players fumed for a couple of days and finally prodded Wolves' board of directors into issuing a statement. In it they spoke of "events and pressure inside the club" and "complaints and transfer requests from a number of established players."

DENIED RUMORS

Cullis denied these allegations. He also denied persistent rumors that he was in poor health and nearing a nervous breakdown.

Most writers here felt Cullis was just another manager who was blamed because other teams had proven better than Wolves. But when suddenly slips, there is always bitterness and it tends to huddle on the manager's shoulders. Cullis knew this. He had said months ago:

"Being a manager is not a profession. It is a hazardous occupation. He cannot justify his work where it matters most—on the field. Only the players can do that."

There was some speculation that Cullis might join an Italian team at a big salary. He considered offers for a few days and then decided to leave football.

"I'm sick at the way I was dismissed," he said. "I don't think I'd ever feel the same about another club.

"My immediate plans, such as they are, are to try to find a job in this area." At 48, he feels he has a good chance to make a new career in another field.

St. Paul took a 1-0 lead in the first period but the Nationals stormed back in the second period to outscore St. Paul 3-1 and added the final goal early in the third period.

Gaels Miss Injuries In Bus Mishap

WOODSTOCK (CP) — The 41-man Queen's University Golden Gaels football squad escaped unhurt Friday night when their bus blew a front tire and plowed into a ditch alongside Highway 401 just west of here.

The bus, driven by Fenwick G. Freeman, of Kingston, blew the right front tire at about 40 miles an hour. It swerved off the highway, took out a guard rail and plowed up 160 feet of sod.

Several players said the driver managed to hold the bus on the highway for some distance while reducing its speed and leaning on the horn to warn other motorists.

A bus from Woodstock took the players to London where they play the opening game of the Senior Intercollegiate season against University of Western Ontario Mustangs today.

The Trots

CAMPBELLVILLE Ont. (CP)—Keep Me Hot, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Jack Kenney of Ancaster, Ont., won the feature Ontario Harness Horseman's Pace for two-year-olds at Mohawk Raceway Friday night, defeating Lee Direct Opeongo.

THE BEATLES' FEATURE FILM OPENS HERE

Yeah, yeah, yeah, the Beatles have completed their first full-length motion picture, "A Hard Day's Night." The feature film, a comedy with music (of course) opened last night at the Belle Theatre.

Filmed in and around London, "A Hard Day's Night" is a fictional account of 36 eventful hours in the lives of the fabuquarted Paul McCartney, John Leanon, George Harrison and Ringo Starr. Beatlin Paul and John have written six new songs for the film, which are issued in a new album by United Artists record. The slide-of-life movie was written by Alun Owen, directed by Richard Lester and produced by Walter Shenson. Shenson, Lester and Owen previously were teamed on the comedy hit, "The Mouse on the Moon".

Wilfred Brambell, comedy star of Britain's top TV show, "Steptoe and Son," is also starred in "A Hard Day's Night," playing Paul's crusty grandfather. Anna Quayle, honored with a "Tony" award on Broadway for "Stop The World I Want to Get Off," also is featured. A troupe of Featurettes precede the feature offering.

Continuous showings Saturday will be presented at 1.00, 3.00, 5.00, 7.00 and 9.00 at the Belle Theatre in Belleville.

Retired Couple, Two Children Will Swap Homes for Holiday

By THOMAS COLLINS

A couple now retired in Florida is planning to play Santa Claus to their two married children next January, and in the process get in some petting of their five grandchildren.

The couple, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Thrasher, own a very small two-bedroom house in Florida. They bought it two years ago after Mr. Thrasher retired from his job in New York, and after he and his wife gave up hope of moving near their children. One lived in Indiana, with two of the grandchildren, the other in New Jersey with three. The Thrashers thought it wasn't wise to choose between them.

"We hoped the children would visit us often enough in Florida," Mr. Thrasher says. "But it hasn't worked out. Our house is too small for a couple and even two children. Anyway, our children don't have the money to be bringing their families this far. . ."

So the Thrashers will swap houses with the two children in January. And keep the grandchildren.

"We'll swap first with our daughter and her husband in Indiana," according to Mrs. Thrasher. "We'll drive to their home and take over everything just as is, including the children." The next day our daughter and her husband will take off for ten days of freedom in our house and the sunshine.

"When they come back, Daddy and I move on to New Jersey, where it's just as cold in January, and take over the house and three children of our son and his wife, and let them go for ten days."

PROUD OF PROJECT

The Thrashers are rather proud of their project and the children, it appears are ecstatic. Mr. Thrasher thinks he has a clever scheme worked out on the transportation. He says he and his wife will drive their car to Indiana, then let the daughter and her husband drive it back to Florida. They will leave it there and fly home. Then the New Jersey son and his wife will fly to Florida, and drive the Thrasher car back to New Jersey. The Thrashers, when they move on from Indiana to New Jersey will fly, and pick up their car for their own drive home.

Ten days in the homes of each of their children, and all that baby-tending may grow a little tiresome. But the Thrashers are prepared for it, and they think the opportunity to be so closely acquainted with the grandchildren is well worth the effort. "Their ages range from 4 to 12," Mrs. Thrasher says, "and only one of these (in New Jersey) won't be in school most of the day. So is Indiana Daddy and I will be free from 8:30 to 3 every day. In New Jersey we can easily take the 4-year-old around with us during the day."

The Thrashers will establish the house-swap as a regular thing — maybe every two years — if the project works out all right in January. They think they can eventually work things out so the five grandchildren can be moved into one home, and let the mothers and fathers have a winter vacation together.

"The grandchildren will be easier for us all the time," Mrs. Thrasher says. "Every year they are five years older — five children times one."

The Thrashers have intended all along to live in Florida for only five years (which is why they bought an economical house). They then want to move to Arizona or California for five years. After that, they'll decide where they want to spend their advanced years, or whether they'll enter a retirement home. "I think retired people sell their freedom cheaply when they don't live everywhere they can, and see and experience everything they can. We aren't going to make any more permanent attachments — our family at this point in life is all we want. And we aren't going to have many permanent friends — they pass on too quickly. So why not live in different places?"

The house swap deal will also work in Arizona or California, the Thrashers think. Transportation costs will be more, but the children should have more money as the years pass. And it will give the Thrashers a chance, as it will next January, to get back and see the East again.

HYDRO CONFIDENT

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — J. M. Hambley, general manager of the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission, Thursday told members of the Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association Ontario Hydro is confident energy produced by future nuclear power plants will be cheaper than electricity from coal-fired generating stations. Mr. Hambley, president of the association, said there is "the probability of 3,200,000 kilowatts of nuclear power on our system by 1975."

Choral Society Plans Recital In November

Well known and respected far beyond the bounds of this city, Robert and Hazelanne Reid are being featured in a sacred recital to be given by the Belleville Choral Society in Bridge Street Church on Nov. 9. Indispensable to the Society and the soloists because of his great skill as accompanist is Mr. S. Alec Gordon.

This recital marks another milestone in the history of this wholly local group, already remembered for its fine performances of "Messiah" and "Elijah". Leaving the field of oratorio temporarily, the choir will assist Mr. and Mrs. Reid to present a varied and interesting program of individual sacred works beloved of all who enjoy fine music.

Under the direction, since its inception, of Miss Phyllis May, the choir first came to the attention of music lovers with its presentation of the Easter portion of the "Messiah". The next year the choir performed selections from all three parts of Handel's famous oratorio. Then came Part Two of "Elijah"; and last year the main chorus and solos from th entire orotorio.

Those who thrill to the music of Bach, Handel, Mendelssohn, Elgar, Gounod, Palestrina and Vaughan Williams will have a taste of all these great composers at this next presentation of the local choir.

Hilda Leaves Trail of Death, Damage

35 Deaths Attributed To Tropical Storm

Declare Area Eligible For Disaster Aid

GOAL $106,000

GAINED $10,000

Nearly 12,000 relatives of D.V.A. hospital patients were overnight guests at eight Canadian Red Cross Lodges across Canada last year. In many communities you can support the Canadian Red Cross through your donations to the United Community Fund campaign.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Hilda, no longer a hurricane, spent the weekend in Louisiana, leaving behind death, destruction and misery.

President Johnson declared the region eligible for federal disaster aid.

Thirty-five deaths were attributed to the storm, which also wiped out nearly half of Louisiana's $100,000,000 sugar cane crop, and caused millions of property damage.

The last remnants of Hilda, now only a weak low-pressure cell, were being pushed into the Gulf of Mexico around the resort town of Fort Walton Beach Fla., early today by a strong surge of cold air from the north.

High winds and heavy rains from Hilda knifed across southern Georgia and into South Carolina today.

At Bloumstown, Fla., Lake Hilda, swollen by rains from hurricane Hilda, overflowed and water sloshed into numerous homes.

Larose, a fishing town of 5,000 on the banks of Bayou Lafourche 50 miles southwest of New Orleans, was struck by one of the many tornadoes which spun off Hilda's driving winds. Twenty-one persons were killed and nearly 200 injured.

At Erath, the city's water tower buckled under hurricane winds, toppled in city hall and killed eight persons, all civil defence workers in the small Vermilion parish town.

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Torrential rains Sunday sent flood waters rushing down the Blue Ridge Mountains in North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia. One man was killed in one of several evacuations. Hundreds of persons were evacuated to high ground and at least three small dams of several bridges gave way to the swirling waters.

Shotguns, Bullets Stolen

QUEBEC (CP)—Six shotguns, hundreds of knives and a large quantity of rifle bullets and shotgun shells were stolen during the weekend from a hardware store in suburban Beauport.

A Beauport police spokesman said Sunday night there was no evidence to link the theft to terrorists and the Quebec Provincial Police left the investigation in the hands of the municipal force.

The RCMPi detachment in Quebec City said the theft was within the jurisdiction of the QPP and municipal police.

Marcel Simard, manager of the store, said five of the stolen shotguns were locked up and one was on display in the window of the store Saturday night. The theft took place, he said, between 7:30 p.m. when he left the store and 9:40 p.m. when he returned.

Mr. Simard said two of the shotguns were .410-gauge, three 12-gauge and one 16 - gauge. Hundreds of shells fitting all but the .410-gauge shotgun were missing as well as bullets fitting 303-calibre and .22-calibre rifles.

The manager said the thieves stole hundreds of hunting knives, penknives and daggers.

Organized Labor Says Third Of People Live in Poverty

NORTH BAY (CP)—The 800,000-member Ontario Federation of Labor swings into its annual three-day convention today with a call for a war on "poverty" as its central theme.

Up for discussion and approval are 134 resolutions on a wide range of labor issues, and a 2,000-word statement on poverty in Canada's richest province.

Prepared by the federation executive, the statement says that while a majority of Ontario citizens live in growing affluence, an alarming number are in poverty or near poverty because of the job-reducing effects of automation.

"Our studies indicate that there are almost 2,000,000 non-farm persons or 32 per cent of the people in Ontario, living in various stages of deprivation, poverty or destitution."

Noting President Johnson's drive against poverty in the United States, the statement urges that the problem also be given top priority in Canada.

As short-term measures to meet the situation, it urges an immediate cut in income tax for lower income groups, an increase of at least 30 per cent in unemployment insurance benefits, increased government spending on housing, education greater encouragement for new industry, particularly in those areas where little industry now exists.

For the long term, the statement calls for a royal commission investigation into the whole question of poverty in Canada, improved collective bargaining laws and a higher minimum wage law, greater emphasis on education and the re-training of displaced workers, and a serious attack on the shortage of low-cost low-rental housing.

President David B. Archer of Toronto had some sharp criticism of Ontario Labor Minister Leslie Rowntree.

A year ago Mr. Rowntree had announced a plan to establish a foundation on automation and unemployment. "It is now one year later and we have not heard one word about this foundation or from the department of labor in this regard."

The statement on poverty also recommended special programs to increase the income of marginal farms and improve the living standard of Indians, "possibly the worst of any group in this country."

Current welfare payments were "geared to subsistence levels and are completely inadequate in today's affluent society," it added.

OBSERVES CO-OP WEEK

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson said Sunday both co-operative and private enterprise have a responsibility in building a bigger and better Canada.

Pave Way To Settle GMStrike

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corporation and the United Auto Workers announced tentative agreement today on a national labor contract, paving the way for an end to a United States - wide strike that has made idle some 280,000 workers.

In a joint statement, the two parties said:

"General Motors and the United Automobile workers today announced tentative agreement on terms for a settlement of all national economic and national contract issues between the parties.

"The parties will now concentrate their efforts in resolving local issues."

Louis G. Seaton, vice-president of General Motors in charge of the GM negotiating team, said GM and the union had yet to resolve local issues in 117 of 130 plants across the U.S. He said the new national agreement would not become effective "until these matters are resolved and the agreement is ratified."

Seaton said the two sides would continue to attempt to solve the local problems—still numbering nearly 16,000 — "so all of our employees can go back to work."

Due To Arrive In Afternoon For 8-Day Visit

Security Precautions Have Been Completed

By JAMES NELSON

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — All was in readiness — except possibly the weather — for the arrival of the Queen and Prince Philip in this cradle of Canadian Confederation today for the start of an eight-day visit to Eastern Canada.

Civic authorities delayed putting up flags and bunting until high winds dropped, but weather forecasters said they should be able to do so in time for the Royal arrival. The weather is not expected now to force a possible flight diversion for which authorities have made preparations.

Security precautions are complete. A building - by - building check is being maintained on parade routes.

The Queen's BOAC jet airliner is due at Summerside RCAF station, 85 miles west of here, at 4:35 p.m. EDT. After welcoming ceremonies, she will go aboard the royal yacht Britannia in Summerside harbor and arrive formally in this capital of Prince Edward Island Tuesday.

EXPRESSES ANNOYANCE

Mayor A. Walthen Gandet of Charlottetown told reporters Sunday night they should not look anywhere in P.E.I. for signs of disaffection with the monarchy. He said he is proud of his French ancestry, and is "deeply annoyed" at questions being asked here about Quebec separatism and dangers to the Queen's visit.

The days ahead, after Tuesday and Wednesday in Charlottetown, include Saturday and Sunday in Quebec and Monday in Ottawa. The Queen's visit here climaxes a summer - long celebration of the island's part in Confederation preliminaries 100 years ago.

The Fathers of Confederation met here in 1864 to explore the possibility of bringing all British colonies in North America under a federal system of government. They sealed the bargain in Quebec in October, 1864.

It was raining here Sunday—clear skies and shirt sleeves temperatures — when the final preparations were being made. High winds, however, whipped through the country-side and tore at some bunting and flags already raised for earlier centennial celebrations.

NEW FLAG FLIES

Making its appearance for the first time during the past month is the island's new provincial flag — a gold lion on a red field, surmounting a white field with green trees, the province's emblem.

LONDON (CP) — The Queen flew to Canada in sunny autumn skies today, serene and smiling despite unprecedented anxiety for her safety.

Many Britons offered a silent prayer for the Queen and Prince Philip as their jet airliner carried them to Prince Edward Island and the first stage of their controversial Canadian visit.

The specially-fitted chartered Boeing 707-aircraft took off at 3:01 p.m. London time (10:01 a.m. EDT) and was due to arrive at Summerside, P.E.I., at 5:30 p.m. ADT. (4:30 p.m. EDT).

The Queen then was to proceed to Charlottetown.

The Queen blinked into the sun as she walked up the plane ramp at London Airport after saying goodbye to Sir Giles Guthrie, chairman of British Overseas Airways Corporation, the state-owned airline which provided the royal craft.

The royal couple said goodbye to their four children at Buckingham Palace. A scattering of people lined the streets.

WEATHER GOOD

Just before entering the plane, she turned and waved and smiled to the crowd. Good weather was predicted for the flight.

Following the Queen into the plane as the royal standard broke out on the 707's nose was Prince Philip, dressed in a dark grey business suit.

The Queen wore an aquamarine suit with a close-fitting helmet-shaped velvet hat of a darker shade and pearl-colored shoes and gloves. She also wore a diamond brooch.

Reports that separatist demonstrators in Quebec have prepared an unfriendly welcome for Her Majesty have caused alarm in the British press.

Lionel Chevrier, Canadian high commissioner in Britain, appeared on television Sunday night to dispel some of this alarm.

He told of the Queen's attendance at a dinner at his Mayfair residence Tuesday night and quoted the Queen as saying:

"I am not worried about the visit and we are quite relaxed."

Chevrier said he is sure no harm will come to the Queen during her eight-day Canadian tour.

"She is a courageous woman, and a strong one, and I am sure that when the crowds see her in Quebec and elsewhere, she will get a warm and cordial welcome," he said.

Guests at the dinner said the FBI Probes Mississippi Bombing Of Freedom School Headquarters

VICKSBURG, Miss. (AP) — U.S. federal agents Sunday sifted for clues to the latest Mississippi night bombing in the water-soaked wreckage of a house used as headquarters by a civil rights organization.

The rear of the two-storey "freedom house" of the Council of Federated Organizations (COFO) was demolished by an early morning blast.

The explosion which police said apparently was caused by dynamite, slightly injured two persons — Mrs. Bessie Brown, about 50, and her five-month-old grandson, Hank Brown. The Browns are Negroes. They suffered minor cuts and bruises.

The incident followed by only hours two shotgun blasts which damaged the home of a freedom school in Meridian, directly across the state to the east. There were no injuries.

The Vicksburg and Meridian events came a day after the arrest of a fourth man in connection with a bombing at McComb in southwest Mississippi. There have been 16 racial bombings in the McComb area since June.

Today's Chuckle

High heels must have been invented by a woman who had been kissed on the forehead.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Cold air plunged southward to cover the province Sunday accompanied by gusty northwest winds and extensive cloudiness. Winds dropped off during the night and with some clearing parts of southern Ontario temperatures skidded downward reaching the freezing mark in many localities.

In the central and northern areas where cloud persisted a few snowflurries were reported and temperatures hovered near the 39-degree mark. The cold air now seems firmly entrenched and continuingly mainly cloudy chilly weather is the prospect for the next few days.

World's Per Capita Food Supply Declines

ROME (AP) — Skyrocketing population has outstripped the increase in world food production in the last 12 months. Mankind had less food per person, and almost everywhere food cost more.

This was the grim picture painted today by the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization in its 1964 annual report. It came against a background of recent food riots in India and the lengthening shadow of hunger over much of the rest of the world.

The over-all balance between population gain and food production increase may even be darker than FAO described. Its report contained no figures for China, which has almost one-fourth of the world's population.

The report said it appeared there were some increases in food production in mainland China during 1963-64, but it was unlikely the increases had kept pace with China's population gain of 15,000,000 a year.

Soviet Russia, with its massive population, had actual food production decreases in the last year.

The FAO report for the year ended July 15, 1964, said world population had increased two per cent but food production had gone up slightly less than that.

Much more significant than the single-year comparison was the fact that "for five years now there has been no increase in world agricultural production per capita," the report added.

The last year, however, was th first time FAO has reported production gains actually below population increases.

The increases in production were mostly in North America, four per cent, and Oceania, three per cent. Both regions already were relatively well.

In developing regions, where malnutrition is more common, the gains were described as "very slight."

There was "a further slight reduction during 1963-64 in the overall level of consumption of agricultural products." Stocks of wheat and dairy products were lower, but those of cotton and coarse grains rose.

FAO said that in 74 of the 85 countries for which statistics were available the cost of living in 1963 was, on the average, higher than in 1962, largely because of an increase in retail food prices.

FAO said inflation sent food prices up by more than 100 per cent in Indonesia, 68 per cent in the Congo, 57 per cent in Brazil, 49 per cent in Chile, 39 per cent in Colombia, 25 per cent in Korea, 23 per cent in Argentine, 17 per cent in Iceland, 15 per cent in Uruguay and 10 per cent in Spain.

The Soviet Union and Communist countries of Eastern Europe, striving hard for crop increases, apparently suffered serious setbacks because of unfavorable weather, FAO reported.

Grain deliveries to the state were only 44,800,000 tons in 1963, 21 per cent less than the year before. Milk and egg production fell.

57 East Germans Flee by Tunnel Ere Machine Guns Seal It Off

BERLIN (Reuters) — West Berlin authorities said today 57 East Germans had escaped into West Berlin through a tunnel since Saturday.

But the machine-gun fire from the other end early this morning indicated the East Germans had discovered the escape route.

Heinrich Albertz, city senator for security and public order, said the refugees—23 men, 21 women and three children—fled to the West in several groups, the last of them early this morning. The escapes began Friday.

This is the largest number of people to escape into West Berlin by tunnel.

The tunnel led from a house in East Berlin into the French sector district of Wedding.

West Berlin police said there were no refugees in the tunnel when the shooting occurred. A quarry at the tunnel's west, several more cars and an ambulance arrived on the East Berlin side. One person was carried off on a stretcher and put in an ambulance.

A West Berlin city government spokesman said no further details about the tunnel and the escapes would be released, for security reasons.

Interviews with the refugees would not be permitted.

The last big tunnel bored under the wall was in March 12, 1962, when 13 East Germans escaped through a 24-inch-high opening.

In 1962 four tunnel projects became known to the public. A total of 84 East Germans escaped through them.

Despite Fire Classes Are Operating Normally

Ted Butcher Gets Moose Near Marathon

Despite Saturday morning's fire in the woodworking shop at the Belleville Collegiate, which caused several thousand dollars in fire, smoke and water damage, classes are operating almost normally today.

"The clean-up crews did a marvellous job," stated Mr. Arnold Orr, supervising principal.

For the time being the school woodwork shop classes are being conducted in the old auto shop, while students in the second-storey classroom immediately above the woodworking shop have been switched temporarily to another room.

Despite the fire which swept through the woodworking shop, machines were not extensively damaged and all have been sent out for inspection, cleaning and greasing.

"We expect that the machines will be unusable to a large extent," Mr. Orr said.

After years of possibly better than average luck as a deer hunter, Ted Butcher, 95 Cedar Street, and Steve Bakay, employee of Stewart-Warner-Alemite, have come back with a moose from the Northern Ontario woods.

It was the first time hunting moose for Mr. Butcher and he got his kill on Thursday, the first day out.

Mr. Butcher and Mr. Bakay were hunting in the Marathon district in Northern Ontario and returned to the city with their quarry on Saturday.

Mrs. Butcher hopes to be cooking her first moose steaks this evening.

S. McConnell, will conduct a short service and President H. S. Dracup will lay and dedicate a wreath in memory of the White Battalion. The parade will then move back along Station and Front streets to the armouries base will be situated at the west end of Campbell St.; then along Bridge St. to the Armouries.

Party Must Overcome Slur Of Communism

- - Fisher

NORTH BAY (CP) — The Communist smear still is being used against the New Democratic Party in Northern Ontario and it has resulted in strong Roman Catholic support for the Liberals, Douglas Fisher said Sunday.

Speaking at a political education conference sponsored by the Ontario Federation of Labor, the New Democratic Party member of Parliament for Port Arthur said the Labor-backed party must make a strong effort to overcome "the old slur of communism," particularly in the north.

He said there has been a long history of Roman Catholic support for the Liberal party.

"I'm not saying the Liberal party is the labor party," he added.

But in many parishes "there is a tendency for the priests to pass the word around that we are not safe people to vote for."

Mr. Fisher also said the NDP must concentrate less on trade union support and more of getting the whole community behind it. Those who maintained that once the labor party's base was solidly behind the party everything would be rosey were far off base.

"I say that you are successful in politics only when you can get elected." No other movement in the community was sufficient to win an election.

The fall for a greater effort by trade unions in backing the New Democratic Party was underlined by Donald C. MacDonald Ontario NDP leader.

Mr. MacDonald said labor support of the party, formed three years ago in alliance of the old CCF and the Canadian Labor Congress, has been disappointing.

A recent national poll of trade union members had shown an increase in support for the Liberal federation along with a set-back those favoring the NDP had slipped to 17 per cent from 25.

Support among union leadership was increasing, Mr. MacDonald said.

HAVE SLIPPED

"But at the rank and file level, with the exception of certain areas, we have slipped back from the enthusiasm of the founding years."

In addition, paid party membership were lagging even among those in favor of the NDP. "There is many a truly unionist who is convinced of the need for political action yet he doesn't match this conviction with his money."

Sunday's conference on political education also gavith a separate session on automation, was a prelude to the OFL's annual three - day convention which opens today in Memorial Gardens Arena.

Nearly 800 delegates registered Sunday and another 200 were expected today.

Mr. MacDonald said the NDP's recent victory in a Toronto Riverdale by-election was the work of plenty of bodies. With enough willing workers, "we can win Riverdale all across this province."

Worker Found Dead on Road

HASTINGS, Ont. (CP)—The body of 56-year-old Arthur Taylor, a farm worker, was found Sunday by the side of the road on the outskirts of this village 20 miles east of Peterborough. Police said he was probably hit Sunday by a vehicle which failed to stop.

READIES FOR WINTER

MONTREAL (CP)—The Montreal roads department estimates 75,000 tons of salt and 50,000 tons of sand will be spread on city streets and sidewalks this coming winter.

BULL TO CUBA

MUCH WENLOCK, England (CP) — An 18-month-old Hereford bull from Shropshire is to be exported to Cuba to help build up the country's herds with first class stock. Said breeder Richard Milner: "The Cubans are buying a lot of Hereford from Canada, but they want one from a British herd to see how they compare."

Money Problems Take Priority In Commons

OTTAWA (CP) — Farm finance problems take priority again in the Commons debating time today over the problem of protecting Canadian ownership of Canada's big financial institutions.

Scheduled for debate are the details of a bill authorizing loans to groups of farmers for the co-operative purchase and use of farm machinery. Next on the list is the first stage of a bill establishing a federal fund to re-enforce provincial crop insurance programs.

Both measures are almost certain to consume all of today's debating time, but the government has declared for the third Hem Finance Minister Gordon's complicated and expensive bill amending the laws governing insurance companies.

While supporting the farm machinery legislation bill in principle, Conservative MPs have complained its details do not cover problems that could arise in practice. They urged last week that the bill be sent to the Commons agricultural committee, where farm organizations and others could be called to testify.

Agriculture Minister Hays, sponsoring the farm machinery legislation introduced by the present government, has promised that if any amendments are needed after a year's operation of the new act, they will be submitted to the committee.

Vatican Meet Decides Church Not Blameless

By GERALD MILLER

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican Council, a historic vote today, overwhelmingly agreed that the Roman Catholic Church was not blameless in the discords that have split the Christian world.

The council, a gathering of Roman Catholic prelates from around the world, also voted approval of a declaration urging all Catholics to work for Christian unity.

Both votes came as balloting started in the assembly in St. Peter's Basilica on a crucial 16-chapter schema on Christian unity, the Dedumenismo (on ecumenism).

Altogether four votes were taken on various parts of the first of three chapters in the schema. In the voting, the prelates:

—Accepted a statement that restoration of Christian unity was a main aim of the council (2,094 to 16.

—Affirmed that Christ had desired unity of all men (2,094 to 16).

—Declared differences that have caused separations in Christianity, and declared that such separations occurred "sometimes not without fault on both sides" (2,051 to 57).

—Approved an appeal to Catholics to work for Christian unity, advising them to avoid mistruths about other Christians and to follow lives that would bring credit to the Catholic Church in the eyes of non-Catholics (2,056 to 50).

APPROVES NEW WAY

Council spokesman, briefing reporters, said the voting in effect also approved a new Roman Catholic way to refer to protestants. The document uses the term churches, and not communities or sects, as in the past.

The approved articles were phrased in this manner.

Along with modernization of the Roman Catholic Church, the issue of unity was the outstanding objective foreseen for the council by Pope John XXIII when he called it together.

Pope Paul VI has made it clear he regards the issue the same way.

Québec Separatist Groups Differ as to Methods of Achieving Independence

By CY FOX

MONTREAL (CP)—Québec's separatist groups may be alike in their pursuit of independence for the province but they differ about the means, toward this end and in their economic aims.

All represent the feelings of what seems to be a minority of the roughly 5,500,000 people in the province.

But with the forthcoming visit of the Queen to Quebec City, the opinions of the separatists about the royal tour and the more general aspects of Quebec life have received much headline attention, particularly outside the province.

Apparently the largest of the separatist groups is Le Rassemblement pour l'Independance Nationale, (the rally for national independence) which says it has a membership of 7,000.

Now led by Pierre Bourgault, a Montreal newspaper man, Le Rassemblement was founded in 1960 as "an instrument of propaganda" for the cause of an independent Quebec.

Mr. Bourgault says the party has "nothing against the Queen personally" and that she is "just an instrument in the hands of the réal guilty ones—Prime Minister Pearson and Quebec Premier Lesage."

HAS HAD SPLITS

Le Rassemblement has seen several splits in its career, the major one involving its former president, Marcel Chaput, who resigned to form his own party in December, 1962.

Mr. Chaput had shown enough desire for participation in parliamentary elections to alienate others in Le Rassemblement less inclined toward such tactics.

The most recent exodus from the group occurred last month when Dr. Rene Jutras of Victoriaville, Que., and 13 other top members of Le Rassemblement left because of what they called the party's "revolutionary" tendencies.

They later established a separatist party of their own, Le Regroupement Nationale, (national regrouping) with Dr. Jutras as president.

Dr. Jutras is a former leader of Les Scouts Catholiques, Quebec's French - language boy scout movement. He said his new party will contest all 95 seats at the next provincial general election, but the extent of his current following is not immediately known.

Mr. Bourgault has scoffed at the character by Dr. Jutras of saying Le Rassemblement is against violence. The party also plans to enter the electoral races although it now is known mainly for peaceful demonstrations rather than for participation in the more conventional forms of parliamentary electioneering.

It condemned last year's wave of terrorist bombings in Montreal but added that "the true fomenters of disorder (are) those in power who tolerate the causes that gave birth to such acts of despair."

Mr. Chaput's separatist party Le Parti Republicain du Quebec, (the Quebec republican party) folded earlier this year and he has since claimed headlines primarily as the man who first said that the Queen might be in danger if she came to Quebec.

Another group, called Le Front Republicain pour l'Independance, (the republican front for independence), rose out of the ashes of the PRQ and is reported to hew to a more leftwing line than did the old Chaput organization.

The terrorist groups in the province were dealt hard blows last year and this, with the trials and convictions of many persons said to be in their ranks.

The most highly-publicized of them, Le Front de Liberation Quebecois (the Quebec liberation front), claimed responsibility for a 1963 wave of bombings in Montreal, while members of another group, L'Armee de Liberation du Quebec (the Quebec liberation army), were arrested this year in a string of crimes that included the theft of weapons and explosives in Quebec province.

Membership of the two underground organizations was never determined but police have expressed concern over the recovery of the last of the armory weapons-loot. They said the recovery will allow them to breathe easier" about the safety of the Queen.

Meantime, another group called Le Front de Liberation du Quebec (the liberation front of Quebec) appeared as sponsor of a bi-monthly news sheet called La Cognee (the hatchet).

The mimeographed publication, appearing for at least the last seven months, had advised supporters to greet the Queen with a forceful, if not violent, demonstration.

Anti - terrorist police forces have been aware of the mimeographed sheet but have not found the authors or their machines. The variation in names apparently indicates that their movement is distinct from the old FLQ.

Separatism is espoused by several groups in Montreal organized for the publication of "little magazines."

One such group publishes a monthly called Parti-Pris, (liberty, choose a standpoint) which espouses socialism with Ju Quebec nationalism.

Greek King In Row With His Cousin

By PHIL DOPOULOS

ATHENS (AP) — King Constantine of Greece has defended Queen Mother Frederika against a public charge by his cousin, Prince Peter, but she has caused friction in the royal family for the last 17 years.

Constantine, 24, interrupted his honeymoon with Queen Anne - Marie and returned to Athens to rebuke 56-year-old Prince Peter, who also challenged the order of succession to the Greek throne.

Peter, who lives in Paris, is second in line to the throne after Crown Princess Irene, 22, Constantine's sister.

Peter told a press conference Sunday he was studying the constitution to see how the present order of succession was arrived at.

Peter claimed that according to the Greek constitution the succession should come to the male members of the same dynasty, independently of the family branch, which would make him crown prince.

He charged Frederika with causing dissension within the Greek royal family but declined to give details. He said he wanted to talk with Constantine before possibly giving out the details of his difficulties with the 47-year-old German-born Queen mother.

Speaking through Premier George Papandreou, Constantine accused the prince of "improper personal behavior." He said Peter had raised the question of succession to the throne for personal reasons.

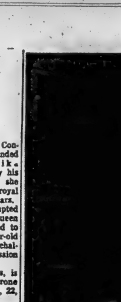
The statement said: "His statements are incorrect, improper and are denounced."

Says Canadians Prevented Civil War in Cyprus

QUEBEC (CP) — Lt. - Col. A. J. O. (Andy) Woodcock, commander of the 1st Battalion of the Royal 22nd Regiment, said Sunday on arrival from Cyprus that United Nations forces on the Mediterranean island prevented a civil war from erupting.

Col. Woodcock arrived at Ancienne Lorette Airport by RCAF Yukon transport early Sunday with two officers, members of the Royal 22nd returning after six months' service with the United Nations force in Cyprus. Several members of the Royal Canadian Dragoons also were aboard the aircraft which flew on to Trenton, Ont.

"We certainly contributed to the saving of human lives," said Col. Woodcock, a native of Sarnia, Ont., "and we prevented a civil war to say the least."



He said he was pleased that not one member of his battalion had been lost during the six-months' tour of duty. The Royal 22nd is being replaced in Cyprus by the 1st Battalion of the Canadian Guards and the RCDs by the Lord Strathcona Horse.

RESPONSIBLE JOB

"We were given the job of guarding an area where we had great responsibility and the work was done by professionals," Col. Woodcock said.

"My men were well trained and they were in constant touch through situations for which they weren't even prepared," he referred to attacks on his unit by Turkish women.

On arrival, Col. Woodcock was presented with a telegram from Defence Minister Hellyer which said: "Well done Van Doos." He was welcomed by Brig. Marcellin Lahaie, newly-appointed commander of the army's eastern Quebec area.

Transistor Radio Replaces Native Sounds in Africa

By ANDREW BOROWIEL

TUNIS (AP)—A new fetish is conquering Africa, gradually replacing the sounds of drums, the voice of village elders and fires lit on the crests of hills.

The transistor radio is sweeping the continent, penetrating into walled Arab villages of the north and the swamps of the rain forest in Africa's heart.

The "box that talks" knows no frontiers. It has carried bell camel drivers in the sun-scorched Tunisian south, by helicopter to the gentle pirogue boats on the Niger River, by bouseboys of European settlers in the bush.

Since 1948, the number of radio transmitters in Africa has grown from about 270, and the number of individual sets from 800,000 to 3,500,000.

At the same time, according to United Nations statistics, the circulation of daily newspapers has increased by 50 per cent to a total of 2,000,000.

Two per cent of Africa's 289,000,000 people own radio sets—the price often represents five per cent of their annual income, perhaps 10 times as many people profit from the sets.

The radio has become an influential propaganda tool in the hands of Africa's power-minded statesmen and foreign countries struggling for influence in the awakening continent.

FLOOD AIR WAVES

Voices speaking in all major languages and most widespread tribal dialects pour from the either day and night. Conflicting ideas and information spin the heads of the plains in the savanna of Cameroon in the sands of Mauritania.

The Voice of America using some of the world's most powerful transmitters, beams a total of 28 hours every day in seven languages including Arabic and Swahili.

The Soviet Union has 17 hours of Africa - oriented broadcasts daily, while other Eastern-bloc countries broadcast one to three hours.

Communist China, struggling for influence in Africa, broadcasts 40 hours a day in English, Arabic, French and Portuguese.

The CBC international service in Montreal beams to Africa daily 43 minutes of news, commentaries, talks and some music in English and 43 minutes in French.

Among Africa's own radio voices, the most powerful is that of President Nasser's United Arab Republic. The "voice of the Arabs and "radio free Africa" beam 20 hours daily.

Morocco maintains a battery of 21 transmitters, most of them working for Africa.

As soon as the wave of independence began sweeping Africa new nations started demanding their own radio stations. Aided by the former colonizers and foreign technicians, the capitals soon were equipped with beaming radio buildings and transmitters.

Some were not so lucky with their experiments. The Guinea radio, which calls itself "the voice of the revolution," discovered that it could not reach beyond the immediate vicinity of Conakry. Some East-bloc technicians who constructed it failed to notice that a nearby mountain of iron would interfere with broadcasts.

Mayor Empowered to Sign Agreement for New Bridge

TRENTON — Trenton took a step closer to a second bridge across the Trent with the weekend announcement by Mayor MacDonald that council had empowered him to sign an agreement with the federal Department of Transport, whereby the department would pay $350,000 towards construction of the million dollar bridge.

One stipulation in the agreement is that the town take over the repair and maintenance of the swing portion of the old bridge, ordinarily the responsibility of the department.

As the old bridge is in need of repair to bring it up to an A-1 condition, (estimated cost of repair is between $50,000 and $80,000), the mayor had hoped to get the federal body to donate closer to $400,000 towards the project. However, he said yesterday that the federal council was first to work on the bridge should be got underway and that the government was "the best deal" the town could get. The provincial government has promised a grant of 75 per cent of construction costs. The construction of the bridge, the acquisition of land for approaches and work on the approaches themselves will cost close to $2,000,000.

Mayor MacDonald said on Sunday he would start immediately to buy up land for the approaches, once the agreement between the town and the department was signed. Council voted this year $150,000 towards the acquisition of land for recoverable through government grants.

From Ottawa, Robert Temple, M.P. for Hastings South, said the Board of Transport Commissioners should bring down approval of the project within two weeks.

It is expected the entire project will take from a year and a half to two years to complete.

Elks Hold Auction

TRENTON — A good crowd attended the Trenton Elks Club (No. 469) public auction Saturday night, and Exalted Ruler, Wilton (Curly) Halladay, said today the auction had been a financial success. The money raised will be used for beneficial purposes, with special emphasis on work with crippled children. Auctioneers were William Bigford of Brighton and Harry Seymour of Trenton.

1,155 Boats Use No 1 Lock in Trent

TRENTON — James Howard, the lockmaster at Lock No. 1, reports 1,155 boats locked through so far this season. Navigation's official closing date is October 18 this year. Last year, 968 boats were locked through. Thus, 1964 is the best year on record for travel on the Trent.

Meanwhile, with navigation's closing in sight, Department of Transport workmen are making repairs to Locks 1, 2 and 6 at Frankford. Repairs to the recently replaced gates are minor. Electrical systems of the turnstiles are being checked.

Dismiss Charge

TRENTON — A charge of failing to stop at the scene of an accident in 1963, before the Belleville main, Stanley Regent, 8 Cherry Gardens Drive, was dismissed in last week's Brighton court.

The accident leading up to the charges charge occurred on Highway 33 at the 401 under pass, last month. A car, driv en by Helen Rose Bayne of Batawa, south-bound on Highway 33, struck a stone embankment, resulting in damage of $250 to the Sharpe car.

AND WHEREAS it is desirable that the attention of the public be directed to the extent and underlying causes of the preventable loss of life and property by fire and to the best and most practicable means for its control and that a specific period of the year be set apart and properly designated for the dissemination of such information;

THEREFORE I DESIGNATE THE WEEK COMMENCING SUNDAY, THE FOURTH OF OCTOBER, AND ENDING ON SATURDAY, THE TENTH OF OCTOBER, IN THE PRESENT YEAR AS

"FIRE PREVENTION WEEK"

(1) All dwellings, public buildings, stores, warehouses and factories be carefully inspected by their occupants and all conditions likely to cause or promote the spread of fire be removed.

(2) All theatres, hotels, hospitals, institutional and assembly buildings be inspected and provision made for all changes necessary to protect the occupants in case of fire.

(3) Fire drills be held for the children in all schools, for the inmates of all institutions, and for the employees of all factories, in order that a greater degree of safety be ensured by acquainting the occupants with the best and most expeditious mode of exit in time of danger.

(4) Special instruction on the subject of fire prevention be given by the teachers and Fire Department officials in the schools and that such appropriate literature as may be available be distributed to the pupils.

Riddance Not Good Enough

"It's good riddance."

That is the way David Archer, president of the Ontario Federation of Labor, regards the fact that Hal Banks, former boss of the Canadian section of the Seafarers' Union, is relaxing on a yacht at Brooklyn.

Mr. Archer can be forgiven for the practical approach. Organized labor had its troubles with Banks. He gave unions a bad name. Now he is gone, they are understandably happier.

"Good riddance" though is no attitude for those charged with the administration of justice. For them Banks is merely a convicted criminal who is successfully evading punishment.

There is no way his evasion can be terminated. Banks is an American citizen. That does not mean that he is being sheltered by the U.S. Government. It merely means that as a U.S. citizen Banks had certain rights which the U.S. government cannot infringe, and these rights include the privilege of remaining in the U.S. unless the charges on which he was convicted in a Canadian court is not covered by the treaty on extradition between the two countries. If Banks were a Canadian, the U.S. Government could deport him as an undesirable. Paradoxically enough, the Canadian Government's re-appraisal of Banks' character, which came late, by denying the Canadian citizenship is now helping to protect him.

The whole record of the Banks case is a tragedy of errors and there is little to be gained now from reviewing them unless we are prepared to learn from these errors and avoid duplicating them in the future. The first mistake was when the Canadian Government and organized labor co-operated to induce Banks to come to Canada, because they thought he could wage a successful fight against the Red-led Canadian Seamen's Union. He did, but the cure was as bad as the disease. This should teach us the dangers of fighting fire with fire.

Before Banks was charged and convicted of a crime, most Canadians would have joined with David Archer in regarding his departure from Canada as "good riddance" This ceased to be a satisfactory solution as soon as Banks was proven a gullty, rather than an innocent man.

Today the mildest reaction which can be expected from a reasonable man is that voiced by Vernon Singer, a Toronto Liberal.

"The government has been made to look foolish," he declares.

At least that, at the very least that.

Fire Prevention Week

This is Fire Prevention Week.

There may be another "week" to match Fire Prevention Week's unusual nature, but off hand we cannot recall one.

Most "weeks" cost someone money. Fire Prevention Week is designed to save money, for everyone.

Nobody, absolutely nobody, benefits when there is a fire. Many people are richer when fires are avoided, not only the man whose property stands unravaged by flames, but all his fellows who buy fire insurance, and can hope to see their rates reduced, all the firemen who have not had to risk their lives, all the municipal taxpayers who have the help of taxes on the unburned building in meeting the city's needs.

Last year Canadians burned up an estimated $155,000,000 in property, exclusive of forest fires. This amounts to $8.21 per capita, enough for every community the size of Belleville to spend a quarter of a million on parks, or street improvements; enough to dot the country with community centres within a few years; enough for a memorable weekend outing for every family.

The people who take the greatest interest in fire prevention are firemen and fire insurance representatives. They are the only ones whose livelihood would be harmed by complete success in the campaign, but they know that such success will never be achieved. Fire, a good servant but a harsh master, will never be completely tamed. We can, though, keep its toll within reasonable bounds. Those who know best how to achieve this are the people whose business it is to deal with the results of its ravages. Listen to them. They are "selling" one of the few "weeks" designed to save everybody money and to save many from agonizing injury or death.

There is not such thing as a white lie; a lie is as black as a coal pit, and twice as foul.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Stirstly Personal
'Bitter End' Not Same as Bitterness

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

"Wedlock" has nothing to do with a lock of any kind. The "bitter end" has nothing to do with bitterness. "Plain sailing" has nothing to do with plainness. And "sweetheart" has nothing to do with the heart.

One could cite dozens of similar examples of words and phrases that have taken off on their own, regardless of their original meaning or derivation. And the secondary meaning, that we almost always carelessly give them, soon becomes the "true" one.

In the examples above, for instance, the "lock" in "wedlock" comes from the Old English lac, meaning a present, and does not imply that the couple is "locked" in marriage. The "bitter end" is a sea term, meaning the end of a cable fastened to "bitts," or wooden posts on the dock.

"Plain sailing" is also a nautical phrase, and refers to the art of determining a ship's position on a plane, instead of a spherical surface, which is an easier way of computing distances. "Sweetheart" was originally "sweetard," and the -ard element was attached to the word to denote a dotard, sluggard and coward. Sloppy diction turned it into "sweetheart."

Nobody, of course, uses these phrases in their original ways. When we open our mouths in the act to "the bitter end," we mean "bitter" in a distressing or disagreeable sense. We have reshaped the word to fit our need for a suitable expression, and etymology be damned.

There is nothing, wrong with this, of course; it is how language grows and develops and stays alive. So much of Shakespeare is difficult for the modern man for the reason that only because many of the words he used meant such different things than they do today. This is the tragedy, but also the renewal, of vital languages.

For instance, in the opening scene of Hamlet, Bernardo and Francisco are changing places on the platform before the castle, and Bernardo says: "If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus, My rivals of my watch, bid them make haste."

To modern ears, it sounds as if Horatio and Marcellus were enemies of Bernardo. But "rival," in Bernardo's mouth, means companion, partner or sharer, and that is how Shakespeare meant his audience to understand it. Today, of course, "rival" has lost its earlier significance.

All living languages represent a continuing struggle between change and stability. The purists insist that words should mean what they have always meant in the past; the modernists insist that words should mean what most people today think they mean. Both sides are partly right: if we flaunt tradition, we barbarize our language; if we blindly worship tradition, we petrify our language. Extreme in fashion is definence of words is no virtue.

Blame Dad For Dropouts

Washington Post

Today's school dropout can blame it on his dad, in part.

And if the old man won't hold still for it, today's dropout can cite a flock of studies showing the very good chances that an uneducated father has of having an uneducated son.

The figures show that young men are staying in school longer than their fathers, but the education they get is influenced largely by the education and occupation of their fathers.

Of every 100 men between the ages of 20 and 24 in 1960, 53 of them were high school graduates. Of the 100 fathers of these men; only 24 of them finished high school.

Furthermore, only 14 per cent of these men had any post secondary school education as compared with 39 per cent of their fathers.

The figures also show that the more education an older brother has, the more likely it is that a younger brother likely to get.

Another factor that seems to determine how long a young man will stay in school is how his father earns the money to keep him there. Among men whose fathers had only high school education, 48 per cent with whitecollar fathers had finished at least some college, as compared with only 22 per cent for the sons of blue-collar fathers and 28 per cent for the sons of farmers.

With bedlam breaking loose at the Hume Arena during Wednesday night's professional wrestling bouts, Referee Cliff Fox of this city was set upon by excited patrons and physically attacked. As the result of the pugnacious outbreak a man and a woman were apprehended by police and held in custody at the police station, for some hours. Both will be charged with creating a disturbance.

Police say that during the melee the woman removed her shoe and struck Referee Fox over the head with the heavy shoe heel. A three-inch gash was opened across Mr. Fox's forehead necessitating medical attention. Eye witnesses also contended the woman struck the wrestling official over the head with her handbag.

The cairn at Carrying Place Prince Edward County has been completed by Historic Sites and Monuments Board of Canada. It stands eleven feet high, composed of field stones, which were gathered in the locality and cement. It is seven feet square at the base, narrower at the top and capped by square stone. The base is concrete to a depth of five feet in the ground. An iron fence surrounds the cairn. The cairn makes one of the most interesting scenes in Canadian history, and it bears the following inscription: "Historic Sites and Monuments Board of Canada. The historic Carrying Place of the Bay of Quinte. Here Cartier, 1535, Sir John Johnson concluded the treaty with chiefs of the Mississaugua Indians, by which they ceded to the Crown lands extending westward from the Bay of Quinte to Etobicoke River and northward from Lake Ontario to Lake Simcoe and the Rice Lakes. To Russian, With Love

BBC London Letter

Russian voices struck a new note recently in the BBC program "Calling the Antarctic," broadcast each week throughout the year. Antarctic winter specially for the members of the British Antarctic Survey. Messages for each member of the team from the families from whom they are cut off are a regular and warmly appreciated feature of the program, but naturally these messages from English homes are in English. The Russian voices were those of the wife and mother of the man who in a sense is perhaps the most isolated member of the team—geologist Dr. Garrick Grikurov, who is serving as Observer to the B.A.S., on Adelaide Island; and is the first Soviet scientist to work with the British in the frozen South. A British glaciologist is similarly working at the Russian Antarctic base at Mirny.

Dr. Grikurov, who is a member of the Scientific Research Institute of Arcti Geology, Leningrad, expressed a wish to be included in the message service of the program, and the BBC, in co-operation with the B.A.S. headquarters, was able to obtain messages from his wife Dina and his mother recorded in Leningrad, and transmitted them across the world to bring Dr. Grikurov news of everyday life at home and the progress of his six-year-old daughter.

Few Begrudge Doctors Pay

Guelph Mercury

Canada's doctors seem a bit sensitive about the size of their incomes. While this is understandable throwing medical care insurance into new and sharper focus, the medical man may be unduly exercised for three reasons, among others. (1) gratitude of the average patient eclipses grumbling of others (whom it is submitted are a small if vocal minority) over the size of medical bills; (2) no federal government is at all likely to jam through any medicare plan which does not recognize doctors' right to practise outside the plan; (3) and not many of the fair-minded begrudge doctors what they make.

As the department of medical economics of the Canadian Medical Association demonstrates in a report just issued, a National Health and Welfare Department study covering the 1953-1961 period credits general practitioners with earning an average of $17,000 in the last year, the real average actually was $14,375. This is because one third of the doctors have fixed salary incomes which average $7,586. They work for clinics, hospitals, the armed forces or the government or are engaged in research or teaching.

The medical association's economist sum up . . . . . while doctors do make sizeable incomes, they often do not as large as is frequently made out, and the extended hours which the doctor works in order to meet the demands of his patients is often not taken into account." This is very true. Many doctors drive themselves to degrees of fatigue which they would sternly condemn in the patients in whose service the exhausting and irregular hours and the strains are experienced. This fact, coupled with their university years, their apprenticeship, and the never-ending necessity for the physician or surgeon to continue to study will strike the layman as the crux of the case for the doctor.

To Your Good Health
Hyperactive Children Not Necessarily Retarded

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have a six-year-old grandson who suffered brain damage at birth. He is high strung, hyperactive and retarded. What medication do you suggest? — Mrs. D. W.

A hyperactive (or hyperkinetic) child is not necessarily retarded nor the victim of brain damage. However, there is some reason for his being subject to excessive anxiety, short periods of unrest, jittery moving about, compulsive talking, or an uncontrollable urge just to always "do something." There are any number of ways in which such a child can, obviously, be a nuisance to others around him, in school or elsewhere.

This is what we mean by "hyperactivity." It can occur in varying degrees. Some such youngsters are so distracting that they can't be allowed in ordinary classes. In milder instances, they may be sufficiently controllable.

These hyperactive youngsters (they may be of average or of brighter intelligence) are the ones for whom special medications can be quite useful. Their explosive energies can be "focused" and controlled rather than expended in bursts of pointless activity.

Experts have recognized this condition as something other than "high-strung." There are, I dare say, plenty of borderline cases in which it is hard to draw the line between one and the other.

I doubt that, for practical purposes, you can expect much or perhaps any useful improvement in cases of severe retardation.

I am not saying that nothing can be done. We have learned quite a bit about the training of retarded children. We cannot help but be enormously gratified at the change of the attitude of society. We have emerged from the stone age viewpoint of shutting away and trying to forget these children.

The last couple of years have seen action at federal level to foster encouraging care, training of retarded children, and study aimed at preventing retardation.

But we must also be realists. We must not fool ourselves into believing that we can give medicines and correct retardation. It isn't that sort of thing. Mild sedatives or small doses of tranquilizers may be necessary to curb the hyperactivity until other adjustments can be made.

* * *

Dear Dr. Molner: Can a 15-year-old girl remember an incident that happened when she was three years old? My husband and I disagree on this. —Mrs. M. R.

Madam, I don't like to be drawn into such disagreements, but the facts are that some incidents at the age of three (often quite unimportant) are vividly recalled at the age of 25. And at the age of 50. I will tell you whether I can still remember them at 75. It is equally possible for other individuals to remember a "remembrable" incident until ages four, five, six or so.

Note to Mrs. P. K.: Please don't ask me to guess what your eye trouble is, or whether it "will become worse." Consult a specialist.

Today in History

Christopher Columbus discovered the site of Costa Rica 462 years ago today—in 1502. Columbus is believed to have made the discovery during his fourth and last voyage to the New World. On the Caribbean shore, the Spaniards found the gold they sought and a settlement was established. A small group of Spaniards, headed by Columbus' brother, Bartholomew, was attacked by local Indians and a number of Spaniards were killed. After which the Spaniards sailed farther down the coast and rejoined the main group. The name Costa Rica was adopted by about 1540. 10 years after the country had been pacified.

1812 — The Indian chief Tecumseh was killed in fighting between American and British-Indian forces in Ontario during the War of 1812.

1849 — Composer Jacques Offenbach died.

First World War

Fifty years ago today, in 1914, German armies on the Western front took up offensive positions in the Aisne area and crossed the Meuse River. Russians claimed that Germans had been routed in Russian Poland.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today, in 1939, Washington announced receipt of a warning from the Germans, saying that the American steamer Iroquois with 384 passengers was to be sunk when it neared the U.S. coast. Russia signed a mutual assistance pact with Latvia giving Russia more Baltic bases.

Need Extreme Moderation

(Walter F. Carey, president, Chamber of Commerce of the United States.)

It is no longer enough just to be moderate. If moderation is to prevail, it must be more than a silent and negative reaction to extremism.

I am suggesting that moderation must become an affirmative objective — a cause to be defended and advocated — actively, fearlessly and, if need be militantly.

If it is a paradox to suggest that moderates be militant in support of moderation, or in opposition to extremism, then so be it. As with fire, perhaps we must resort to one paradox to combat another.

Tanganzibar? Zanzibyika?

Halifax Chronicle-Herald

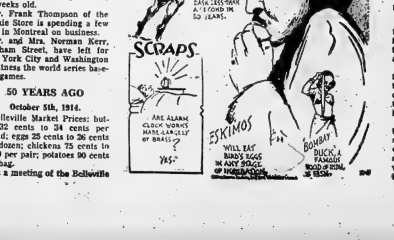
One of those thorny problems which crop up where and when they are least expected is now being faced by the combined state of Tanganyika and Zanzibar. It is the question of what to call the union.

A natural sympathy is readily extended to those who have to wrestle with this perplexity. Understandably enough, both countries will want their names represented in the result; but the matter of how this is to be done is one of no small difficulty.

The most obvious possibility is that which was adopted, for the sake of convenience at a recent Geneva conference on trade — Tanzan. But even the most unaesthetically - minded person would admit that it sounds more like the trade name of a sunburn oil, or Tarzan's twin brother.

The trouble is largely that the two names are not easy to combine in a manner which harmonizes euphoniously. Tanganyika to Tanganzibar is too much of a mouthful. Zanzibyika is almost unpronounceable. And almost any other shorter compound sounds dreadfully reminiscent of the Jonsher Willie or Willie which frequently characterize country colleges.

World history in country have ever been, admitted to the councils o. the United Nations if its name had been Lusitania, say Corsica, in an effort to give expression to its constituent parts? Or can one imagine the United Nations being known from the beginning of the seventeenth century as Englo-land, or (more rightfully) Scongland?



What the new union probably needs is some method of avoiding this compounding of names by the adoption of something entirely new — like Britain. Or, if no similarly historically satisfying common title suggests itself, why not follow the example of the United Arab Republic," whose titular reference to union has survived the actual existence.

The United States of East Africa is perhaps unobjectionable title; the United East African Republic is too lame, as well as being far too prosaic.

We would much rather hear a name which has an exotically musical sound to it. Popocatepetl and Paramaribo may not be the easiest words for the English tongue to pronounce, but they have an appeal which is independent of pronunciation. Surely, something similar could be discovered for Tanganyika and Zanzibar — anything to counteract the flat and unpleasant uniformity of basic English.

Attempt May Be Made To Kill Canadian Member Of Queen's Entourage Claim

By ALAN WALKER

LONDON (CP) — The Sunday Telegraph quotes Quebec "terrorists" as saying an attempt will be made this week to kill a Canadian member of the Queen's entourage, but not the Queen herself.

The article, by Peter Gladston Smith, the newspaper's special correspondent in Quebec, says Quebec terrorists have "ruthless leaders outside Canada." He adds:

"Police believe that some of them have been trained as guerrillas in Cuba. . .

"Information has reached the combined police anti - terrorist squads about secret training camps in Quebec forests. Many of the student supporters, aged 18 to 25, have adopted the Marxist creed."

Smith says he met "terrorist sympathizers" at a bar in Montreal.

"From there I was taken to a secret place where a leader will, the code name 'Le Gaspesian' declared that a revolutionary army was being formed by ex-servicemen and others who would terrorize by threats and kidnapping those French-Canadians who did not support them."

PREDICTS ATTEMPT

Smith says "Le Gaspesian" told him there will be an attempt to kill someone in the Queen's entourage. The Queen was comparatively safe, but "there was much more danger for Mr. Pearson, the Canadian prime minister, or Mr. Lesage, the Quebec premier."

The Sunday Times and The Observer color magazines both devote space to articles by Canadian journalists who take a gloomy approach to the Queen's visit.

Montreal-born Mordecai Richler says the Queen's life is not in danger but that "it is clear the royal visit has been badly timed."

"The Queen and Prince Philip are going to a country that is divided, drifting and deeply troubled about its future," he writes in The Sunday Times magazine.

"Their stay, unfortunately, will only heighten differences already sufficiently acrimonious between English-speaking and French-speaking Canadians."

CRITICIZES GOVERNMENT

Donald Newnham, a Montreal Star reporter, also criticized the Canadian government. He says that although "responsible spokesmen" have called for the cancellation of her visit, "the brutal fact is that if the Canadian government did this it would be an indication of weakness."

"It would mean capitulating to the threat of physical violence from a shadowy group of terrorists."

Writing in The Observer magazine, Newnham says that in Canada hunting is one of the national recreations and that "almost every other home has a rifle in its corner."

"The demonstrations by the students and the separatists will stretch the security arrangements to the breaking point. The chances for an assassination — however unthinkable that idea may be—would be ideal."

SEES DANGER

The mass circulation News of the World has a front-page report from Montreal that speaks of "a dark cloud of danger and uncertainty" there. It retells old tales of bombs and death in Quebec, blamed on separatists, and says this will be the most challenging royal tour the Queen has ever faced.

The Sunday Mirror's reporter in Canada says the Queen will be "constantly exposed" during her visit. At one point she will appear on a balcony overlooking a main street. The reporter quotes an unnamed royal tour official as saying:

"It would be simple for a sniper to shoot her then . . . just as they got Kennedy in Dallas."

The Daily Mail today quotes the Queen as saying she believes that reports that her life may be in danger are exaggerated.

The paper under a front-page banner headline quotes the Queen as saying: "I am not worried about the visit and we are quite relaxed."

Tomato Plant In Full Bloom Among Petunias

Mrs. Wesley Conley of 144 Yeomans Street on visiting her petunia flower bed over the weekend was surprised to find a tomato plant in full bloom. How the plant got mixed in with the petunias is hard to figure but there it was blooming beautifully in the cool October air. Whether it will bear fruit is a question that can only be answered later this fall.

And while on the oddities in nature Hilliard Lockwood of R.R. 7 Belleville, was passing through a field near Bilmour and looking down spotted a seven-leaf clover. This is a rarity and probably Mr. Lockwood will be twice as lucky as finding a four-leaf clover."

If you still don't know what the Volkswagen 1500 is, make this simple test.

Get in a VW 1500. Now act tough. Take it for a ride. Way out in the rough. Climb some hills and take some bumps. Stop in a hurry. And start in a rush. From zero to 50 mph in just 12 seconds. Now you know what a Volkswagen 1500 is. It's a tough little car with a lot of guts. A low center of gravity helps it hug the road. And each wheel is individually suspended. Four torsion bars muffle the bumps. Anti-sway bars hold it steady. The VW 1500 has amazing traction because the engine weight is back over the drive wheels. Where you need it. Extra big tires help you hold tight. And there's no radiator to boil when the going gets hot. That's what a Volkswagen 1500 is.

But it's hard to believe until you drive it. That's the true test.

Successful Living

Change in One's Self May Be Change for the Better

DEAR DORIS — I'll never forgive my parents for moving here. It broke my heart to leave my friends, my school, and especially Bill. We lived in a small, chummy town. I came here with a chip on my shoulder. I am 16.

I get more and more miserable. The kids here have poor taste in boy friends. I took to eating and I've gotten fatter and fatter till now I'm 10 pounds overweight. Then when my old pal from the small town invited me up I didn't want her to see me so fat so I turned it down.

I fight with my mother and my brother and my marks at school have gone away down. Why couldn't we have stayed where we were? — MISERABLE.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR MISERABLE — Once I heard a lecture on the topic: "Thermometer or thermostat: Which are you?" The thermometer merely records the temperature; the thermostat does something about it.

You are even worse than that. You record cold, chilly things. You see the bad in everything. How about a little contribution to a fair-and-warmer outlook?

Start looking for your friends, your mother, your brother. Start liking yourself enough to tackle a dieting program. The only change you can make is in you — nobody else. Right now you can begin setting the temperature of your own personal thermostat for life.

DEAR DORIS — Thank you for your letter about my husband-trouble. I feel a wife makes a big mistake in living completely for her husband and family. Everything I say, think or do is for them. I am a physiotherapist but since starting a family, felt my place was only with them. I'm years behind in new techniques, courses, etc., and I feel badly having wasted a real gift.

I would like to get my feet back in medicine again — in a volunteer or helpful way. — NEEDS A LIFT.

DEAR NEEDS — Spending every waking minute on husband and home may sound noble but it can be strangling. There's a spot that needs your skill for that...part of your time that you can devote to it (perhaps the old familiar stamping ground in your hospital's P.T. department!)

(Ask Doris about what's troubling you. With your question enclose a five-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.)

African Bishop Addresses Diocesan WA

The Ontario Diocesan Women's Auxiliary held its first monthly meeting of the autumn at St. Peter's Church, Brockville. The Diocesan president, Mrs. S. G. Jackson, presided, and the rector, Rev. D. B. Chatterson, said the opening prayers. Mrs. Lindsay Mawson, president of St. Peter's auxiliary, extended a welcome to the members present.

Rt. Rev. Erica Sabiiti, Bishop of Ruwenzori, Uganda, Africa, was the guest speaker. The Bishop prefaced his remarks by calling those present "Sisters in the Lord and Partners in Prayer". He brought greetings from our sisters in Uganda and especially the Diocese of Ruwenzori.

STATUS OF WOMEN

Before Christianity came to Africa the women did not have any say in the home, nor very much regarding the marriage of the daughters. Marriages were decided by the parents and after marriage the girl not only belonged to her husband but was responsible to all the members of his family. Christianity is still very young in Africa but now wherever the Gospel goes it seems to change things. It changes the status of women and sets her in the right place in the home. The Bishop further stated that when Jesus comes between man and wife there is a three-fold chord which is not easily broken.

Education of girls is still lagging behind because it is felt the boy must take priority in being educated. Many girls are now going to universities for further study but the number must be compared to the boys. He asked here for prayers that more girls may receive higher education.

CANADIAN DEACONESS

The Bishop spoke of Miss Thelma Storey, a Canadian girl formerly of Montreal, who is a deaconess in Africa, and of the wonderful work she is doing. He asked for prayers that more workers, especially nurses and teachers, may volunteer for service since they are badly needed to help his people.

The speaker was introduced by Mrs. Jackson and Mrs. George Davies, Prescott, the Prayers Partners' Secretary expressed the thanks of those present by telling the Bishop we would remember him and his people in our prayers.

WEDDING

SMITH — McGOWAN

BATAWA — Sacred Heart Church, Batawa, was the scene of a lovely fall wedding recently when Miss Anne Marie McGowan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter S. McGowan of R.R. 1, Frankford, and Carl Elmer Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Smith of R.R. 2, Frankford, were united in marriage.

The double-ring ceremony was performed by Rev. W. H. Dunphy. Ushers were Paul Rixler and Wayne Walchuck. The church was decorated with arrangements of white gladioli and orchid pink 'mums.

The wedding music was played by Miss Joanne Lewis of Roma and a selection was sung by the junior choir of Sacred Heart Church, Batawa.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a semi-bouffant white satin gown of French taffeta with a square neckline and long lily-point sleeves. The bouffant skirt was of Alencon lace and crystals and fell into a chapel train. The neckline was accentuated similarly with an applique of Alencon lace and an insert of crystals. The back interest of the gown was a large bow with tapered streamers falling from the waistline. Her bouffant veil of pure silk illusion fell from a headpiece of pearlized hand fashioned French taffeta and organza petals. She carried a cascade spray of dusty pink Talisman roses.

The maid of honor was Miss Elaine LeFleur of Trenton and bridesmaid was Miss Joan McGowan, sister of the bride. They gowned identically in dresses of pink orchid silk organza over taffeta bodices with cap sleeves and Sabrina neck-lines. The skirts were a set-on bouffant with a back-sweep overskirt enhanced by a floral motif. They wore matching wedding ring headpieces trimmed with a self bow and silk illusion veils.

They carried nosegays of pink orchid 'mums and carnations.

Groomsman was Mr. Wayne Wetsels of R.R. 2, Frankford. The ushers were Mr. Gordon Smith, brother of the bride, Frankford, and Mr. Raymond Foley of Belleville.

The wedding reception was held in the Legion hall, Frankford, where the bride's table was centred by a three-tiered wedding cake and tall pink tapers.

The bride's mother received the guests wearing a mink-toned brocade dress with bracelet length sleeves and accessories of beige and mink-toned organza with velvet petalled cloche hat. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother, wearing a sheath dress of peacock blue crepe and bone velvet pillbox hat.

For travelling the bride chose a pink suit dress of wool and mohair boucle, black accessories and bag with a white maribou pillbox hat with black feathered crown.

Mr., Mrs. Ben Bleecker Happily Wed 50 Years

Happily married for 50 years, Mr. and Mrs. Ben D. Bleecker of Holloway were "at home" yesterday as they observed their golden anniversary.

A family dinner was enjoyed at noon while the couple received friends and neighbors during the afternoon and evening.

Born in Belleville, Mr. Bleecker as a young man worked in the Belleville Post Office but returned to his father's farm in the 7th concession of Sidney before he was married.

Still actively engaged in the raising of beef cattle although not on the homestead where they lived almost all of their married lives, Mr. and Mrs. Bleecker built a new home on a second farm nearby.

"But we still keep about 20 head of Scotch Shorthorns and Herefords" Mr. Bleecker said.

Mrs. Bleecker is the former Laura Cummings.

INTERESTED IN FAIR

A life member of the Belleville Fair, Mr. Bleecker served as fair president for two years, was secretary for nine years and acted as treasurer for a ten-year period.

He recalls the Belleville Fair being held on the "old" fairgrounds (where American Optical is now located) and remembers the driving cattle down his Holloway farm to show at the grounds. He is also a member of the Sidney Fair.

He is former president of the Ontario Association of Agricultural Societies.

"Ben," as Mr. Bleecker is popularly known, has also taken an active interest in the political affairs and served for 14 years on his township council, for 10 as a reeve, and for 15 years on the school board.

He has taken an active interest in the affairs of Marsh Hill United Church and for 30 years was recording steward for the Foxboro charge.

The couple have three children, two daughters, Mrs. Gerald (Bessie) Frederick of Peterborough, and Mrs. Charles (Evelyn) Mosier of Foxboro, and one son Donald of Foxboro. There are four grandchildren.

Two Bachelors Forced To Be Antique Dealers

By BOB TAYLOR

ST. MATHIAS, Que. (CP)—A former Winnipeg designer and an Australian advertising copy writer find themselves being forced into the antique business in this village near Montreal.

"People keep dropping into our house to admire the furniture, then tell us of their various pieces," says Norman Woodburne, 29. "Once and I suggested to an enthusiastic amateur collectors into full-fledged antique dealers."

Mr. Woodburne, the Australian, became friends with Vincenzo Marucco, 31, through a mutual friend for early Canadians. They agreed one evening that their Montreal apartments didn't provide an dramatic setting for their collections.

"What we needed," says Mr. Marucco, "was a house like one of Montreal's exclusive fashion houses, was an 18th or 19th-century one."

One day after a visit to nearby Jacques de Granby Historic Village, Mr. Marucco and they drove into this community just across the Richelieu River from Fort Chambly.

RESTORED HOUSE

There it was—a 150-year-old house with a familiar look to the front door and traditional multi-paned windows. They decided to buy. In their spare time during the next two years and with the help of professional craftsmen, they restored the two - storey stone-and-timber house.

The two bachelors furnished it with such antiques as a cherry-wood dining room set, four-poster beds, corner cupboards, maple blanket chests, chairs, settees from Upper and Lower Canada, an 1850 Quebec grandfather clock and a Canadian Regency sideboard.

"Somehow," says M. Woodburne, "I could get anyone that a couple of English - Canadians were living in some sort of a museum in St. Mathias. Pretty soon people were making the 20-mile drive from Montreal on weekends just to take in "Not just weekends," Mr Marucco recalls. "An American couple drove up in a station wagon one Tuesday night just as we were eating dinner. They left with our six dining-room chairs, a set of carved curly maple."

CHANGE OF PACE

Why the interest in antiques? With both of them involved in the business, the couple says they find their working hours filled with "What's new?" and "What's in vogue?"

"With antiques as our hobby," says Mr. Woodburne, "we're able to fill our days dealing with 'What's old?' and 'What used to be in vogue?'"

Mr. Marucco, who studied design in Winnipeg, Montreal and London, feels there is a special charm in doing business in a village. We enjoy spending time with people who like hunting for antiques. As we serve our little weekend business enterprise outside of working hours, we avoid any feeling of pressure or hustle."

The goods on sale are not set out in the open but in a shop. Tables are laid as if for dinner, chairs are arranged in front of a fire, dishes are displayed in corner cupboards and pictures are hanging on the walls.

When they first moved to St Mathias, the two spent some of their spare time calling at remote farmhouse in search of antiques.

Nowadays they rely mainly on the full-time picker, a sort of middleman between a farmer with an attic full of cobwebbed furniture and the dealers.

In spite of what the books say, there are plenty of Canadian antiques still hidden away — if you know where to look," says Mr. Woodburne.

B.C. Champion Of Indians Dies of Stroke

VANCOUVER (CP) — Matile Hurley, 76, a beloved and eccentric woman who was the champion of British Columbia's Indians and defender of things right, died in hospital Saturday after a stroke.

She was active to her death as editor and publisher of The Native Voice, which she founded 18 years ago as Canada's first Indian newspaper.

And to the last she fought for her claim that B.C. was the only place in North America where a treaty was never signed with the Indians.

An outgrowth of this has been a case now before the B.C. Appeal Court, in which two Nanaimo. B.C., Indians are claiming that the B.C. Game Act does not apply to them and that they should enjoy the unrestricted right to hunt and fish in unoccupied lands.

Her second husband, criminal lawyer Tom Hurley, died in 1961.

Mrs. Hurley was a descendant of the famed Scots houses of Montrose and Argyll, and a cousin of the present Duke of Argyll. Her forebears were among the builders of Britain's colonial empire.

She often appeared herself in courts on behalf of Indians and once went to jail herself.

Ann Landers

Parrot's Prattle Plagues Practical Joke Victim

DEAR ANN LANDERS — You can print this letter just as I am writing it because everyone in town already knows about it anyway.

Our neighbors have a parrot named Plato. This parrot is so smart it is frightening. When Plato rattles off radio and TV commercials he sounds just like the announcers. His Edward P. Morgan is the greatest.

ANN LANDERS

The other evening our neighbors had a party—The guests gathered to listen to Plato do his routine. Suddenly Plato shrieked, "Bernie cheats on his wife. Bernie cheats on his wife."

Bernie is my husband and I didn't think it was very funny. All the guests roared.

Do parrots know what they are saying or do they just pick up phrases and repeat them?

I've heard a variety of opinions and I'd appreciate an answer from you. — STANDING BY.

* * *

DEAR STANDING BY — Parrots do NOT know what they are saying. They imitate sounds. I suspect this is a big, fat gag and if I were you I'd forget all about it.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am 16 and my boy friend is 17. We were out the other night and Bob had his father's new Ford. I just got my driver's license and was real excited about it. I asked Bob if he'd let me take the wheel and he said O.K.

The car I learned on is a Chevrolet and I wasn't accustomed to a Ford. Don't ask me what I did wrong. Aum, but I hit a tree and the damage added up to $275.

Bob lied to his parents and said he was driving when we had the accident. I didn't tell my parents anything. Now I feel guilty because I'm letting Bob take all the blame. He says to keep quiet or I'll get him into more trouble. My conscience is killing me. — SLEEPLESS NIGHTS.

* * *

DEAR SLEEPLESS — Insist that Bob give you permission to tell your parents. Bob is trying to be noble but it's unfair of him to impose this burden on your conscience.

Your parents should discuss the situation with Bob's parents and decide what is the fair and honorable thing to do. (I think fair and honorable is a 50-50 split on costs.)

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Will you please tell me how a church-going, God-fearing woman who is trying to run a respectable rooming house can protect herself against the funny stuff being pulled off these days?

Three weeks ago a young couple drove up, said they were just married and would like to rent a room for a few weeks. I should have known something was fishy. She was carrying only a hatbox and he had a shaving kit.

They stayed Saturday night and left Sunday morning. The money was on the dresser so I wasn't out anything. But I'm burned up because they lied to me. I know these kids were not married.

Last weekend another couple checked in. They had no suitcases and said their car had broken down. They stayed one night. The next day a man came by looking for his daughter. I'm sure it was the same girl who had spent the night here, but I said, "No," because I didn't want to make trouble.

Must I ask every couple who wants to rent a room to show me a marriage certificate? — NO PARTNER OF SIN.

* * *

DEAR NO PARTNER — If you demand a marriage certificate as proof of purity you'll have an empty rooming house, lady. I'm afraid you, like all other inn-keepers, will have to trust people, and your own judgment.

* * *

Do you feel ill at ease . . . out of it? Is everbody having a good time but you? Write for ANN LANDERS' new booklet, "The Key To Popularity," enclosing with your request 40c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Noodles and Cheese Sure to Please

by Mary Moore

When Mrs. R. G. wrote that she had an economical casserole and would send the recipe if I cared for it, my reply was in the mail in one hour flat. "Yes, please!"

We needed big eaters for guinea pigs for this dish so Eleanor's family were the chosen four.

The flavor is fine, the cost is comparatively low, it is filling, and if your family is smaller, half may be frozen. Eleanor says she would like more meat or less noodles. I wanted more cheese. But try it for it is a good basic casserole, comparable to macaroni and cheese in its category, and the noodle, meat and cheese ratio can be juggled according to your individual needs or appetites or tastes. But "do not change the seasonings — they are very important to the success of this dish" Mrs. R. G. says.

MONDAY

Dinner Menus

Chicken Stew with Dumplings; Parsley Buttered Carrots; Cottage Cheese-Stuffed Tomatoes on Lettuce; Chilled Watermelon; Cocoanut Bars; Coffee.

MRS. R. G'S NOODLE CASSEROLE:

One 12-oz. package noodles (or less), 1 box sour cream sauce mix, ½ cup milk (first amount), ½ cup (or more) shredded cheese, 1 lb. ground beef (or more), ½ cup chopped onion, 1 can cream of mushroom soup, ½ cup milk (second amount), ¼ teaspoon thyme, dash of pepper, soft breadcrumbs (see below), 2 tablespoons butter, additional grated cheese (optional).

Cook noodles in 3 qts. boiling water, adding 2 teaspoons salt. Boil for 7 to 10 minutes. Drain well through colander. Turn sour cream sauce mix into saucepan, add ½ cup milk (1st. amount) gradually, stirring with fork until blended. Add shredded cheese and cook until cheese melts. In large hot frying pan, brown meat and onion, stirring. Remove from heat and add undiluted soup, ½ cup milk (second amount), thyme, pepper and the sour cream sauce. Butter a large (or 2 smaller) casserole. (Eleanor used her 8 x 10½ x 3" oval casserole. It was just right.) Turn in drained noodles and meat mixture in alternate layers. Sprinkle crumbs over top. (Note: Eleanor and her family like large fresh bread crumbs, so she pulled apart 3 half-inch slices fresh white bread by hand into ½" pieces.) Dot with butter and sprinkle with additional grated cheese, if desired. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 45 minutes for one large casserole; or for 30 minutes for two smaller casseroles.

MAIL CALL

Question: A friend of mine was in the hospital for a check-up, so I dropped by to see her for just a few minutes to see if she needed anything. During the time I was there, she rattled on about all the gifts other friends had sent her, and I had the feeling I shouldn't have arrived empty-handed. If she had been ill, I would have brought her something, but since she was in only for her annual check-up, I didn't think it was necessary, especially since her stay was so short. Should one feel obliged to bring a gift to someone in the hospital, or isn't a kind-intention gift enough? — Mrs. S. C., Trenton, N. Y.

Answer: It's customary, but not obligatory, to bring a gift to a patient in the hospital. Flowers and books are meant to cheer up an ill person and give him something to occupy his time while recuperating. Even though a person is not really sick, it's still thoughtful to bring a few posies or a some other small token to show your concern. But I must admit it was quite tactless of your friend to itemize what others had sent and brought her and to make you feel sheepish, since you arrived with nothing.

Queen and Prince Philip both feel reports of terrorist activity in Quebec have been exaggerated.

HAPPY ABOUT VISIT

Canada's revenue minister, E. J. Benson, one of the 20 dinner guests, said Sunday the Queen told him she was happy to be visiting Canada again.

"I told her she would get a great welcome, as great a welcome as she ever got in Canada."

However, the British press continued to draw parallels between the Queen's visit and President Kennedy's trip to Dallas where he was assassinated last Nov. 22.

The Daily Sketch says that the Queen is embarking on "the most dangerous and controversial royal trip yet," adding that although most people in Quebec mean no harm to the Queen, "it is that one lone fanatic that has the officials worried."

The Daily Mail says if anything happens to the Queen, "French-British partnership in Canada would be shattered, and French separatism put back many generations. We all hope and pray that nothing untoward will happen to the Queen—or to Canada."

The Times says that although the danger from "a few extremists or an individual fanatic may be small it exists and inevitably casts a shadow."

Chevrier will formally bid the Queen farewell in Buckingham Palace today. The royal couple is scheduled to arrive at Summerside, P.E.I., at 5:30 p.m. ADT.

FIREARMS COURSE

WINNIPEG (CP) — Sixteen boys and girls ranging in age from 10 to 16 have graduated from a firearms and hunter-training course at Neepawa, Man. The course was sponsored by the provincial government.

Crucial Period Is Near

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal-provincial relations enter a new and, in the view of some observers, a crucial period during the next four weeks in a series of ministerial and prime ministerial talks.

The first of these conferences of the provinces and the federal government meet to iron out details of the formula under which the federal Parliament is to gain control of amending the Canadian constitution in areas of joint federal-provincial concern.

Next comes the conference of finance ministers just after the Queen leaves the capital Oct. 13. Their job is to set the terms of reference under which a tax structure committee is to examine the whole field of federal and provincial revenue sources in relation to the obligations of the two levels of government.

Close on their heels, the provincial premiers and Prime Minister Pearson will meet to review the efforts of the two earlier conferences and put their final touches to the picture of federal-provincial relations.

WILL FORM PART

A number of other federal-provincial contacts at a high level probably will form a part, though not a dominant element, of the picture.

One of these is the meeting in late October between provincial ministers and Citizenship Minister Tremblay to deal with the question of provincial services—education, social welfare and the like—to Indians and Eskimos.

In the political field, these meetings have a special significance for the federal government.

The government is under pressure from some of its supporters to take a less-yielding line in future dealings with the provinces. There have been expressions of concern that federal powers are being bargained away and future federal initiatives in national programs compromised by federal-provincial agreements of the last 12 or 18 months.

At the same time, the government's political opponents have seized on such things as the "opting out" formula on joint federal-provincial programs to picture the government as a push-over for any determined province, and especially for Quebec autonomists.

COULD MEAN TROUBLE

If these estimates by supporters and opponents are valid, they could add up to serious political trouble for a minority administration when the next election comes along.

Liberals are talking openly about the federal government toughening its attitude, not only in federal-provincial relations but in Parliament in dealing with political issues such as the Canadian flag, when it comes back to the Commons at the end of the month.

The first big opportunity for the federal government to display this line, if it has decided to adopt it, will be at the series of conferences with the provinces this month.

Government supporters are predicting that whatever is agreed upon at the talks it will be so framed as to give a picture of federal strength.

Informants indicate the federal government has been quietly trying to convince key provinces that it is in their interests to play along with this image, at least for the time being.

PRISONERS RIOT

HALIFAX (CP) — About a dozen prisoners at the Halifax County jail rioted in their cells Sunday, ripping apart bunks, sinks and toilet fixtures, smashing windows and setting fire to mattresses and bedding. The uproar broke out about noon and the prisoners, as one police officer described it, smashed "everything they could get their hands on." By Sunday night the disturbance had been reduced to steady shouting by many of the inmates.

$5,600,000 arts centre the Queen will open Tuesday was a rosy pink, colored by the brick red soil of the island.

Group Captain A. G. Dagg, commanding officer of RCAF station Summerside, said chances were remote that the Queen's flight would have to be diverted to Halifax, Sydney or Gander, Nfld., because of bad weather. However, alternative welcoming parties were standing by in each place.

Governor-General Vanier, the Queen's personal representative as head of the Canadian government, will welcome her to the island and then officially step aside. As Queen of Canada she exercises all head-of-state prerogatives while in this country.

Prime Minister Pearson, the Queen's first minister in Canada, was to arrive at Summerside RCAF base a few hours before the Queen's flight.

Bulletins From Birdland

By WINIFRED E. WILSON

DUCK CHARACTERISTICS

The majority of people know the characteristic flight of a duck — small wings moving rapidly up and down. But how many of us can tell the various kinds of ducks apart? Unless you have thought much about it, you might be surprised to learn that there are actually quite striking differences.

Continuing with the idea of flight — the ruddy duck is recognized by its especially short wing-beats which have been described as "buzzy" looking. A merganser appears very long with long, slim bill, head, neck, body all held in a horizontal line.

Sometimes pattern is discernible in flight, particularly a large patch of white on some part, as the back of a canvasback or the large shoulder-patch of a bufflehead. Like a band of blue ribbon bordered with white, the speculum of a mallard duck shows up.

VOICES DIFFER

Voices differ considerably; but it must be admitted that this may at times be confusing rather than helpful, because the two sexes of the same species often make different sounds. For instance, the male canvasback grunts; the female quacks. And, by the way, the old squaw is so called because of its incessant "talking." It also makes many really musical sounds.

The manner in which a duck rises from the surface of water puts it into a certain class, but from there on other points must be noted. Marsh and pond ducks which feed on the surface, are able to spring straight up, while diving ducks (also known as bay or sea ducks) are obliged to run over the top before they can rise.

FEEDING HABITS

Feeding habits differ considerably. The mallard is mainly a seed eater, living on seeds of grasses, leaves of water plants, and sometimes of certain trees. The black duck uses pondweeds, eelgrass, and wild celery as well as seeds. A shoveler likes animal matter found in shallow water. But there are a number of ducks that dive for food; scaups sometimes dive to a depth of 20 feet, eating either vegetable or animal matter. Canvasbacks may dive 30 feet for roots, underwater plants, or fish.

Goldeneyes prefer both vegetable and animal food found in water less than 20 feet in depth. eyes by feeding habits they are known by the holes made by the whir of their wings. They are often called "whistlers". Ruddy ducks love to escape pursuit, have the ability to sink slowly out of sight, and cannot walk upright on land. To learn your ducks notice such eccentricities.

Bumper Crop In Ontario This Year

TORONTO (CP)—Agriculture Minister W. A. Stewart said Friday indications are Ontario will have a bumper crop this year.

He said in a statement the gross agricultural revenue may go well over $1,500,000,000 this year, up from the $1,400,000,000 of last year.

"Never in my life have I seen such pastures in this province," he said.

Mr. Stewart said the abundance of hay and pasture means more milk flow and beef cattle and the bean crop is "enormous."

He said winter wheat this year is the second biggest crop on record, sugar beet is ahead of last year and apples are the largest crop on record. He said the barley harvest this year is also ahead of the 1963 record.

CONGRESS ADJOURNS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 88th U.S. Congress, which will be remembered for sweeping legislation on civil rights and tax reduction, was adjourned Saturday. For a Congress which had been in session almost continuously since January, 1963, the end came when the House of Representatives adopted the resolution adjourning "sine die." The Senate had adjourned earlier in the afternoon.

Hundreds Watch As Man Stabbed In Times Square

NEW YORK (AP) — While hundreds watched, but offered no help, a man in the Times Square area was stabbed repeatedly Sunday afternoon by an assailant who had tried to force his attentions on the victim's wife.

Joseph Zala, 28, and his wife Sandra, 26, were strolling along Broadway near 47th Street when a Negro, more than six feet tall and in his 30s, put his arm around Mrs. Zala and whispered in her ear, police said.

Zala tried to push the man away. The assailant drew a knife and stabbed Zala at least five times in the neck, chest and abdomen. Then he fled through the crowd.

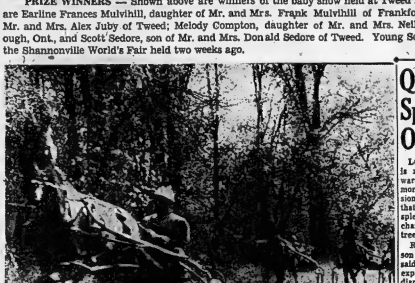
Toronto Boy Shot in Lung By Own Rifle

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — A 16-year-old Toronto boy was in fair condition in hospital here Sunday after accidentally shooting himself though the right lung.

Michael Pomroy was standing on a 30-foot rock when his 22-calibre rifle slipped from his hands and discharged. The youth was with his 13-year-old brother, Robert, and two Peterborough friends.



The accident occurred Saturday at Nebbon, about 35 miles north of here.

Pomroy had difficulty breathing and was given mouth-to-mouth resuscitation by William Campbell, 17, of Peterborough. Campbell carried the youth approximately one mile through bushland before help arrived.

Pomroy was put into a waiting station wagon, but the vehicle developed mechanical difficulties. Two radio men on the way to the scene met the stalled car and took Pomroy 36 miles to hospital.

Queen Anxious to View Splendor of Autumn Change Of Color on Canadian Trees

LONDON (CP) — The Queen is reported to be looking forward to her Canadian trip with more eagerness than apprehension, warming to the thought that once again she will see the splendor of the autumnal change of color on Canadian trees.

Revenue Minister R. J. Benson of Canada in reporting this, said also that Prince Philip has expressed the view that Canadian reports of assassination threats against the Queen are exaggerated; that there is a tendency on the part of some publications to make a mountain out of a molehill.

Meeting the royal couple for the first time, Benson and his wife were guests at the quiet, informal dinner party given the Queen by Canadian High Commissioner Lionel Chevrier and Mme. Chevrier Saturday night. The Queen leaves for Canada today.

Special prayers for the Queen's safety in Canada were said in some English churches Sunday night.

Benson said the Queen told him she was happy to be visiting Canada again and was not concerned with the threats against her.

"I told her she would get a great welcome as great a welcome as she ever got in Canada," Benson added in an interview Sunday. He is on a personal visit to London and likely will return to Ottawa Tuesday.

Benson said Prince Philip remarked to him that he felt the reported threats against the Queen were exaggerated.

Philip insisted that when he recently attended Malta's independence ceremonies, there were a lot of published reports about certain minor unfriendly incidents, but the prince is said to have maintained that little was reported of the warmth and friendship about the reception as a whole.

Benson said it was unfortunate that the British press appeared to be writing so much about the threats against the Queen. On Sunday, almost every British newspaper reported on various aspects of the trip, concentrating on questions about the security of the Queen.

Helen Mason, writing in The Sunday Telegraph, reported on the Queen's own preparations. She said the Queen has been studying plans for the Canadian trip for the last six months.

"With stop-watch certainty, she can tell not only every point she will visit but what routes she will take."

The Queen's wardrobe for her Canadian visit is reported to include eight silk dresses or suits, eight cocktail dresses and eight ball gowns. She is reported likely to have to change her clothes three times a day.

The Queen was at the Chevrier residence for about three hours. At the 18th-century Mayfair residence, where a small group of Queen watchers was outside, the Queen met her Canadian equerry for the tour Lt.-Cdr. Reid of the Royal 22nd Regiment.

While the reports of threats against the Queen appeared in the evening's conversation, A. C. E. Joly de Lotbiniere, first secretary at Canada House, said:

"There was no feeling of impending doom or anything like that. No stiffness, no worry hovering over the Queen and Prince Philip."

De Lotbiniere said the dinner was informal and lighthearted and the threats were not seriously discussed."

Hasty Pees Bid Farewell To Commanding Officer, Welcome New One at Parade

A popular commanding officer bade farewell to the regiment he served efficiently for the past two and one-half years yesterday.

Lieutenant - Colonel Joseph B. Black turned over the helm of the famous Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment at a colorful impressive change-of-command ceremonial parade at the East Belleville Plaza yesterday.

Lieut. - Col. Kenneth D. H. Willcocks formally took over command of the unit before a large crowd that spilled over the seating capacity.

In the morning, Lieut. - Colon. Black and Willcocks with officers of the regiment deposited one of the colors of the regiment in St. Mary Magdalene Anglican Church at Picton.

The other colors stolen or removed by a person or persons unknown was represented by the bare staff.

The red - bereted regiment with officers wearing "blues, sash and sword" paid its own tribute to its retiring commanding officers with, as several veterans declared, the best parade since the war.

The scarlet coats and black busbies of the Band of the Royal Canadian Corps of Signals of Kingston, which provided the music for the parade added another colorful touch.

Many military, municipal and political dignitaries were present. Officers of militia units from Kingston, Peterborough, Brockville and Cobourg were there. The city and county was represented by Mayor Jack Ellis and Robert Temple, M.P.

OLD MEMBERS PRESENT

A large number of members of the famous wartime "plowboys" first battalion of the regiment were there headed by its popular ex-sergeant-major, commanding officer, Lieut. - Col. Angus B. Duffy.

The ceremonial movements of the regiment were executed in precision-like manner. During the morning the troops were put through strenuous rehearsals by the non-commissioned officers of the regiment while the officers were attending the "laying up" of the colors at Picton.

Brigadier Mark Clarke ED, commanding 13 Militia Group, Peterborough, was the inspecting officer. Area command, Kingston, was represented by Lieut.-Col. Pat Black, AAQMG and second-in-command.

The regiment gave outstanding evidence of training in its general salute, march pasts and other phases of the ceremonies.

Following the plaza parade it marched through city streets with colors flying, drums beating and bayonets fixed exercising its "freedom of the city" presented to it by Mayor Jack Ellis last May during its presentation of colors ceremonial.

Lieut. - Col. Black's parade farewell to his regiment with Lieut. Colonel Willcocks taking over in two march-pasts.

Brigadier Clarke paid tribute to both officers and the regiment in a brief address. Col. Willcocks he said was an officer fully qualified to take over the command. He said he was appreciative of the fine co-operation of the regiment as was exhibited in the parade.

PAYS TRIBUTE

Col. Black paid sincere tribute to his regiment stressing his appreciation of the work done by officers and all ranks during his tenure of command.

He said the regiment had been and is second-to-none in the militia units of the country.

"You have never let me down by upholding all the traditions of the regiment. You have served faithfully and well, receiving very little monetary reward for your efforts. I want to thank you for what you did for me and I know you will do the same for Col. Willcocks."

He paid further tribute to his officers and non-commissioned officers.

He turned over his command with a sincere "God bless you and thank you." The band played "Auld Lang Syne."

Col. Willcocks said "This is the proudest day of my life as I take over command of a unit that is 162 years old. I have a large task in front of me and I will need your co-operation and help to maintain the fine tradition of the regiment."

"There has been talk of a change to be made in the militia," Col. Willcocks said, "but I am fairly certain this regiment will not be affected."

"I accept the command of this regiment with deep humility and much pride."

Following the parade receptions were held in the officers' and sergeants' messes.

Later in the sergeants' mess Col. Willcocks presented Sergt. Don Ash of Marmora with a clasp to his CD medal. This honor 22 years of service with the regiment, although Sergt. Ash has recently completed a quarter century of service with the unit.

Tweed Holds Fine Exhibition As Fair Season Nears End

TWEED (Staff) — One of the last fairs to be held, Tweed put on one of the finest exhibitions of the fall on Saturday.

Fair officials are more than pleased with the results of the two-day fair. Reports were that the number of exhibitors were up over last year, including a few new ones.

The fair was officially opened at 12:30 p.m. All of the usual dignitaries were present on the grandstand for the opening ceremonies with the exception of one. Missing was Miss Linda Gunning, 1964-65 Miss Dairy Princess. Linda was seen in the livestock ring, showing her entries. She told officials she felt her place was there as she felt this would be more to her credit than being amongst the officials on the grandstand.

Following greetings to fair visitors from fair president Wilbur Bateman, and others such as Robert Temple, M.P.; C. T. Rollins, M.L.A., the Trenton RCAF Pipe Band gave an excellent performance in front of the grandstand.

Several changes in exhibiting facilities had been made for this year's fair. More ground space for outdoor exhibits had been made available.

Traffic moved slowly through the exhibitors' building on the north end of the grounds where local produce, cheese and arts and crafts were displayed.

BARNS FILLED

The horse barns were filled at the south end of the grounds. Because of the limited facilities for housing horses, many were seen tied to the vans in which they were brought to the grounds. The same held true for cattle.

One of the many successful events of the day was the Junior Farmers' 4-H Achievement Day during which young farmers showed their livestock.

No time was wasted by the judges. While the Junior Farmers showed their cattle at one side of the ring, show horses were being judged at the other end.

Horse racing was held throughout the afternoon in front of a packed grandstand. The scores of people who were unable to obtain seats on the stand lined the fence along the grandstand side of the track.

There was something for everyone to see. The latest in model automobiles and farm machinery were on display. Booths selling local produce. The most popular item with the youngsters appeared to be apple cider.

The three - ride midway was also a popular spot. This was smaller than in previous years, but was enjoyed by the youngsters and some adults.

Another favorite spot was the newly constructed arena, which has been built in the north-east corner of the grounds. Here proud mamas and papas brought their bundles of joy to be entered in the ever popular baby show.

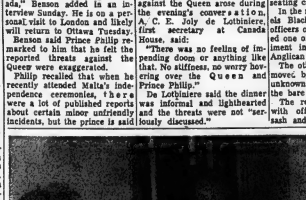
The arena also drew fair visitors who had not seen the new building before.

In the baby show, the 25 entrants judged by Mrs. Marion Woods and Mrs. Bernard Hunt. Winners were: baby girl, 1 to 6 months — Earline Frances Mulvihill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Mulvihill of Frankford; boy, 1 to 6 months, David Juby, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Juby of Tweed; youngest girl, 2½-month-old Julie Lynn Douglas of Camditon; youngest boy, one-month-old Mark Duquette of Flinton; 6-months to 1 year, Melody Compton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Neil Compton of Scarborough and Scott Sedore, son of Mr. and Mrs. Don Sedore of Tweed.

A fine grandstand show was also provided throughout the afternoon, featuring a fine display of local talent, with various contests.

All in all, a fine day, under sunny skies, was enjoyed by all who attended the Tweed fair.

Lower Sugar Prices Putting Squeeze on Cuba



WASHINGTON (AP)—Tumbling sugar prices have put a squeeze on Cuban finances which, in the opinion of U.S. experts, will keep the Cuban economy in the doldrums during the next two years.

This is the assessment of the impact on Cuba of the plunge from more than 12 cents a pound to below four cents. This drop in the world market price of sugar, the island's No. 1 income producer, has come in less than a year.

U.S. experts calculated that 1965 will virtually wipe out Cuba's 1963-64 foreign exchange surplus which came from soaring sugar prices which had resulted from a temporary world shortage.

Premier Fidel Castro, has been using his cash to buy from non-Communist countries which are more interested in sales than in U.S. political objections.

Instead of expanding his purchases abroad, it is believed here that Castro now will have to tighten his belt and U.S. allies will become a lot more reluctant to hand over goods on credit. And if sugar becomes clearly in surplus, the United States may have more success in persuading non-Communists to buy their sugar outside of Cuba.

Hooded Gang Suspects Back in Canada

MONTREAL (CP) — Two accused members of a notorious hooded gang, brought back from New York in shackles, appeared in court Saturday and were charged with escaping from the courthouse detention quarters last February.

The two, Jean-Claude Mercier, 26, and Antonio Facchino, 37, both of Montreal, will have their preliminary hearing Friday.

Other charges of rape, theft with violence and armed invasion of private homes are scheduled to be laid against the men some time this week.

The men were held in New York since last March on a variety of charges. Their arrest in New York last spring was in connection with the theft of $1,000,000 in cash and securities from a Long Island home.

Pinch Hitting

By GARRY ALEXANDER

It came a year too late for the great Stan Musial, but the St. Louis Cardinals wrapped up their first National Baseball League pennant in 18 years over the weekend.

Watching the Cards flounder around against the dauded New York Mets on Saturday, one would not have given them much chance to capture the flag.

They faced a win or else situation going into the final day of the schedule Sunday. A loss would mean at best for them a share of first place and possibly it would knock them out of contention.

The Phillies, who finally came back to life, too late and too little to cop the pennant which they had so ingraciously blown during the past two weeks, made a three-way tie for the top possible by whipping the Cincinnati Reds.

That meant the Phillies and Reds were tied, half a game behind the Cards, while the St. Louis-New York game was still in progress.

Cards responded to the challenge and whipped the Mets to end one of the tightest—and weirdest—pennant races in the history of baseball.

Meanwhile, over in the American, the money players came through once again when the New York Yankees captured their fifth consecutive pennant.

The Yanks sewed up their spot in the world series on Saturday, leaving the Chicago White Sox holding second place, one game behind, despite a nine-game Sox winning streak.

It is all past history now, however, and the big one starts Wednesday in St. Louis.

Fans in this neck of the woods are picking the Yankees and the men who make the odds will likely back them up.

But don't be too sure. The Cards can't be as bad as they looked on Saturday in that 15-5 whipping by the Mets. It has been a long time between world series' pay checks for the Redbirds and they will be gunning for the winner's shares from the opening pitch.

The series should create a lot of interest since just over a month ago, neither the Yanks or Cards were given much of a chance.

At this point we would like to point out the "real reason" the two clubs are in the world series.

Back in late August this writer put a bit of reverse psychology into action, calling the Orioles to defeat the Phillies in the big series. How could the move fail when everybody knows yours truly has never picked a winner yet?

So-o-o-o, with this in mind, we hereby declare that St. Louis will defeat the Yankees four games to three.

P.S.—But if you want to bet on the Yankees, please don't call me.

Meanwhile, here closer to home, the battling Bloomfield softball squad reached the all-Ontario OASA intermediate "B" finals by ousting Amherstburg with wins of 2-0 and 10-5.

This was the second consecutive series in which the county boys have lost the opener but came roaring back to cop the set.

Blind River will supply the action in the championship series, to be played in the far-northern centre next weekend.

Fans from this district will be rooting for Bloomfield to bring home this area's lone provincial ball title this season.

Cardinals Capture Flag On Final Day

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Johnny Keane, the tired but triumphant manager of St. Louis Cardinals, charged from the dugout, shook hands with ace reliever Barney Schultz before heading for a champagne shower.

Keane had just came out the winner in one of the tightest National League pennant battles in history as his Cardinals whipped New York Mets 11-8 Sunday, clinched their first pennant since 1946 on the final day of the season, and avoided the possibility of his first three-way playoff in major league history.

Later, the Cardinals were tossing champagne in their dressing room and Keane, trying to catch his breath, was being closely watched by the Cardinals' physician, Dr. I. C. Middleman.

"Oh man, I'm glad that's over," Keane said. "Maybe I can rest now."

Cardinal president August A. Busch Jr. came up and said to Keane:

"This is the greatest day of my life. I was so nervous that I almost died. My heart is still pattering."

"I think mine has stopped beating," said Keane.

"It was, certainly, a pulsating finish.

Philadelphia Phillies drubbed Cincinnati Reds 10-0, leaving both clubs tied for second place, one game behind.

GIANTS FIRE DARK

San Francisco Giants wound up in fourth place, losing to Chicago Cubs 9-2 before manager Al Dark was fired and coach Herman Franks named his successor.

Milwaukee Braves blanked Pittsburgh Pirates 6-0 and finished fifth while Los Angeles Dodgers whipped Houston Colts 11-1 and tied the Pirates for sixth place.

Saturday New York and was lopped St. Louis 15-8, Chicago defeated San Francisco 10-7, Milwaukee dumped Pittsburgh 11-5 and Los Angeles shutout Houston 7-0, in the only games scheduled.

The Cardinals, who will open the World Series at home against New York Yankees, had lost two straight in less than 24 hours to the Mets and were in danger Sunday until the fifth inning as New York held a 3-2 lead.

But after a kerdoff walk to Lou Brock by the Mets starter Galen Cisco, the Cardinals got started.

Bill White singled and Ken Boyer slapped a double down the left field line that tied the score 3-3. White came home on Dick Groat's grounder, and one out later, Dal Maxvill tipped a single that produced another run.

The Mets came back with a run in the sixth but Bob Gibson choked off that threat. The Cardinals continued to build their lead on homers by White and Curt Flood and then Schultz the veteran 38-year-old knuckleballer, ended it.

STYLES MET RALLY

He came in with two runners on in the ninth and one out. Charlie Smith struck out but Rod Kanehl singled in a run. Then Ed Kranepool hit a foul pop down the third base line. Catcher Tim McCarver got it as Keane raced out to congratulate Schultz.

At Cincinnati, acting coach Dick Sisler started John Tsitouris, who was gone by the third inning. Six others followed with much the same success as the tables were turned on the Reds, who had started the Phillies on a 10-game losing streak that cost them first place.

Richie Allen and Jim Bunning were the key men for the Phillies.

Allen triggered a three-run third inning with a double, homered in the fifth and capped a five-run sixth with a three-run homer. Bunning, meanwhile, stopped the Reds on six hits and did not allow a runner past second while bringing his record to 19-8.

Larry Jackson brought his record to 24-11 for the Cubs—top winner in the majors—while keeping alive San Francisco hopes fairly well scattered. Willie Mays hit homer No. 47 for the Giants.

Bob Sadowski and Warren Spahn, who pitched the ninth, combined on a three-hitter for the Braves while rookie Billy Southworth hit his fifth major league homer against the Pirates.

John Purdin pitched the first five innings for the Dodgers and started them on their way to their victory over the Colts, allowing only one hit—a homer by Jim Wynn.

NFL 'Upside Down'?

Bears, Giants Lose Again

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Turn the National Football League standings upside down and they'd make more sense to George Halas and Allie Sherman.

Last December Sherman's New York Giants and Halas' Chicago Bears emerged on top of the NFL's Eastern and Western Division races.

Today, the Bears languish unceremoniously in the Western Division cellar and New York isn't far out of the Eastern basement.

San Francisco 49ers, tallended-ers a year ago, surprised the Bears 31-21 Sunday and Detroit Lions battered the Giants 26-3.

Elsewhere in the NFL, Baltimore Colts ripped Los Angeles Rams 36-20, Cleveland Browns humbled Dallas Cowboys 27-6, St. Louis Cardinals whipped Washington Redskins 23-17, Philadelphia Eagles downed Pittsburgh Steelers 21-7 and Minnesota Vikings slipped Green Bay Packers 24-23.

In the American League Boston Patriots whacked Denver Broncos 39-10 and Kansas City Chiefs stopped Houston Oilers 28-7.

The victory was Boston's fourth straight and kept the Pats tied with Buffalo Bills for the lead in the AFL Eastern Division. The Bills won their fourth game Saturday night with a come-from-behind 23-20 victory over Oakland Raiders, while San Diego Chargers battled New York Jets to a 17-17 tie.

John Brodie flipped three touchdown passes as the 49ers, who equalled last year's winning total with their second victory, jumped into a 17-point lead. Billy Wade, with three touchdown flips of his own, led a late Bear surge but it was top little too late.

The Lions thrashed New York with a 19-point second quarter and throttled Y. A. Tittle's offence all day. The Giants reached Detroit territory only twice in the first half. Earl Morrall started the Lion romp with a 32-yard scoring pitch to Nick Ryder.

The Colts took over the Western Division lead after getting a scare from the surprising Rams. Los Angeles held a 13-7 halftime margin before Johnny Unitas connected on three scoring pitches with Jimm Orr icking for 43, 35, and 46 yards. Lenuis Moore scored twice for the Colts.

Paul Hornung had an extra point attempt blocked for the second time this season and the Packers lost another squeaker. Fred Cox' field goal in the final 18 seconds pulled it out for Minnesota.

The Cardinal line swarmed all over Sonny Jurgensen and George Izo as Washington lost its fourth straight. St. Louis bel' the Skins to a net gain of eight yards in the first half, throwing Jurgenson for losses eight times.

The victory kept St. Louis deadlocked for the Eastern lead with Cleveland which routed Dallas behind Frank 'Ryan's passing. Ryan had three touchdown passes and Lou Groza kicked two field goals keying the Browns' victory.

Norm Snead hurled three scoring passes as the Eagles whipped the Steelers. Snead connected on nine of 17 for 183 yards and Philadelphia kept the pressure on the Steelers offence all day to win it.

Boston's Gino Cappelletti set an AFL record Sunday by kicking six field goals as the unbeaten Pats drubbed Denver. The record erases the previous league mark of five field goals in one game by Gene Mingo of Denver against San Diego Oct. 8, 1963.

Daryle Lamonica came off the bench to mark Buffalo's second half rally after Oakland led 10-7.

Len Dawson and Bobby Hunt led Kansas City to victory. Dawson threw three touchdown passes and Hunt established a league record by making four interceptions.

Yankees Win Fifth Straight Pennant

Sox Game Short

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Tony Oliva has the American League batting championship. Brooks Robinson has the runs batted in title and Chicago White Sox have baseball's longest winning streak.

But New York Yankees have their usual year-end spoils—the American League pennant.

The White Sox, who whipped Kansas City Athletics 4-0 Sunday for their ninth consecutive triumph, barely missed tying the Yankees, who clinched their fifth straight pennant Saturday, then lost 2-1 in 13 innings to Cleveland Indians on the final day of the season Sunday.

Chicago finished one game back in second place.

New York plays St. Louis Cardinals in the World Series starting Wednesday.

The charging Yankees scored the tie-breaking run off Bobby Richardson's single in the eighth inning, triggering a five run rally in the Saturday game won 8-3.

Richardson lined the ball over the head of Dick Howser at short stop with two out Howser, timing his jump perfectly, leaped high in the air but the ball popped out of his glove and Clete Boyer raced home with the winning run.

The Indians had tied the score in the sixth with a two-run rally capped by Max Alvis' triple over the head of Tom Tresh in third deep left field.

The victory went to Pete Mikkelsen, who came on in the sixth and allowed only one hit before Pedro Ramos took over in the ninth.

Minnesota Twins, losing to Los Angeles Angels 3-0, finished in a sixth place tie, but their rookie of the year candidate, Oliva, wound up the season with a .323 average, becoming the first rookie to win a batting title in modern major league history.

Oliva hit six points better than Baltimore Orioles Robinson, who won the runs-batted-in title with 118. Runner-up to Robinson was Dick Stuart of Boston who won the crown last year. In the only other AL game Sunday, Boston Red Sox defeated Washington Senators 14-8.

CLINCHED THE PENNANT

The Yankees clinched the pennant Saturday with an 8-3 rout over Cleveland, while Baltimore and Detroit Tigers wound up their regular season activities with the Orioles winning 7-6, Chicago shutout Kansas City 7-0, Boston shutout Washington 7-0 and Minnesota edged Los Angeles 5-3.

The Indians, who has lost 15 of 17 games to New York was the final contest with a run in the 13th inning. Vic Davalillo led off with a bunt single, moved to third on Fred Whitfield's single and came home as Leon Wagner hit into a force play.

Rookie Bruce Howard pitched a two-hitter for the White Sox while Tom McCraw scored one of the daffier runs of long season.

McCraw walked in the sixth inning, but the fourth ball was a wild pitch and he raced to second. Athletics' catcher Dave Duncan retrieved the ball and threw it into centre field. Over to third base went McCraw, and he continued home as Nelson Mathews fired the ball past deep left field.

Dan Osinski held the Twins to four hits in game I etc ened to six innings by rain The Angels' Leo Clinton Alo n two runs with a six-inning double. Oliva belted a triple in three times at bat.

Carl Yastrzemski double for Boston came in a six run th inning that snapped a 7-7 tie. Dick Thomas doubled scoring two runs in the outburst while Frank Malzone knocked in the other two with a single. A three-run homer by pinch hitter Roy Sievers had tied the game in the Senators' sixth.

Bloomfield Enters Finals

Two clutch weekend victories gave Bloomfield the Southern Ontario OASA Intermediate "B" softball title and placed the county squad in the all-Ontario finals.

Bloomfield blanked Amherstburg 2-0 in Picton Saturday night, tying their series at one game apiece.

The biggest crowd of the softball season at Belleville's CNIA Park Sunday afternoon saw Bloomfield win the series with a free-scoring 10-5 victory.

The all-Ontario finals will be played in the north next week end. Bloomfield meets Blind River for the championship.

Bloomfield will make the 450 mile trip in time to open the series at 4:00 p.m. next Saturday afternoon. The second game will be played at 12:00 noon Sunday and if a third is necessary, it will be played at 4:00 p.m., also on Sunday.

Saturday's game in Picton was a tight thriller, played before a big crowd. Bloomfield scored both runs in the seventh inning to snap the scoreless deadlock.

Carl Stacey pitched the series-tying victory.

Stacey was the winning pitcher again Sunday, before giving way to Kenny DeMille in the ninth inning.

Bloomfield led all the way Sunday, 3-0 early in the game and 9-2 going into the ninth. Amherstburg scored three times in the bottom of the ninth, but was the flip for last bats, but that was it.

The Bloomfield club used Mets' three pitching and good clutch all-round hitting to capture the southern title.

Amherstburg won the series opener at home 4-1 a week earlier. This was the second time in succession in which Bloomfield has lost the opener, then came back to win the final two games.

Flags Fly At Olympic Village

From Reuters-AP

TOKYO (CP) — Jenny Wingerson, a pretty, pony tailed blonde from Toronto, carried the Canadian flag at an Olympic flag-raising ceremony here today.

The 21 - year - old hurdler, holder of the Canadian native record of 60 seconds for 80 metres, had difficulty keeping the flag aloft in a stiff breeze during the Olympic village ceremony.

Howard Radford, general manager of the Canadian team, said it was the first time a girl had carried the flag for Canada.

"We are making Olympic history," Radford said. This is the first time that Canada has allowed a girl to carry her flag at the Olympic games opening.

Canada is one of 12 countries which raised their banners over the Olympic village today. GAMES OPEN SUNDAY

The Games open Sunday, but prior to that the International Olympic Committee will hold its annual meeting here, starting Wednesday. The committee-room activities were taking some of the spotlight away from the athletes training here.

There was speculation that Avery Brundage, a wealthy Chicago hotel owner, may be near the end of the line as president of the IOC.

The member nations already have placed in sealed envelopes their votes for president, and the result will be announced at Wednesday's opening meeting.

Most observers believe Brundage, a proud champion of pure amateurism, will be renamed to the office he has held since 1952. But there is powerful support for Lord David Burghley, the Marquis of Exeter, a Briton who is thought to have more liberal ideas about the conduct of world sports.

Burghley's supporters say Brundage is old-fashioned and that his concepts are outmoded and unpractical in the modern age.

HANDS-OFF ATTITUDE

The IOC has adopted a hands-off attitude on one of the most important issues facing athletic leaders — the long and bitter squabble between United States colleges (NCAA), and the U.S. Amateur Athletic Union for control of U.S. amateur sports.

The colleges contend they deserve a bigger share in the operation, if not complete control. The AAU, which has had control through affiliation with the various world federations, is not ready to give ground.

Qualifying trials ended Sunday in the basketball tournament with four teams — Canada, Mexico, Australia and South Korea — gaining the tournament's final spot. Eliminated were Cuba, the Philippines, Nationalist China, Thilano, Malaysia and Indonesia.

Kingston Wins Title

KINGSTON (CP) — Kingston captured the all-Ontario intermediate industrial softball championship Sunday with a 5-0 victory over Elliott Lake, winning the best-of-three series 2-1.

Kingston won the first game on a doubleheader 4-0 Saturday and Elliott Lake took the second 1-0.

Ed Litschfield was the pitching standout for the winners. He hurled all three games, gave up only one run and 11 hits and struck out 50 batters. He allowed only three hits in the second game.

Centrefielder Ray Seabrooke was the batting star, driving in three runs with a homer in the first game and two hits in each of the last two games.

BELLES WIN

SARNIA (CP) — Sarnia Belles defeated Fort Erie Lassies 5-1 Sunday to sweep their provincial Women's Softball Union senior semi-final series in two straight games. Sarnia meets Toronto People's in the final, dates for which will be announced later. Next weekend Sarnia is in North Bay for the all-Ontario intermediate girls' final.

Last-Quarter Heroics

Gaels, Redmen Win Firsts

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Last-quarter heroics were the order of the day in the Senior Intercollegiate Football League schedule opened Saturday in Montreal and Kingston, Ont.

In Montreal, a University of Toronto team lost 20-13 in the last two minutes to McGill Redmen.

At London, defending champion Queen's Golden Gaels were nearly scared out of their cleats in the final minutes, but pulled out an 11-point victory over University of Western Ontario Mustangs.

Gaels led 4-2 at the half and stretched it to 11-2 in the third quarter. Then fullback Gary Cranmer burst off tackle for a touchdown at 11:48 of the final quarter, and for the Gaels it was touch and go to hand on to a two-point edge.

Eric Walter unleashed a 32-yard touchdown pass that McGill's Jim Dickie caught on the goal line with less than two minutes left. It broke up a 13-13 tie and spelled the end for Varsity, who hadn't managed to get out of their own zone in the final quarter.

RETURN IS SKRILLIANT

It was a spectacular return for Walter, McGill's 1962 scoring champion. He scored one touchdown, passed for one, and caught four passes for 43 yards.

McGill coach Al Jenner set up the opening score late in the first quarter, roofing in to block Dave Watters' punt. Jenner's linemate, Ray Lawson, scooped up the ball and ran 25 yards for the touchdown. Fullback Pete Howlett made it 7-0.

It was 13-0 for the Redmen by the half as McGill quarterback Glen St. John hit Walter on a rollout with a four-yard scoring pass in the march to open the second half. Howlett added 66 yards with a pass.

The Toronto defence set up the tying scores in the third quarter. Wayne Parsons dumped St. John near his own goal line, and lineman Jim McMahon dropped on the loose ball in the end zone.

Minutes later, Don Holmes knocked a ball away from McGill back George Poirier, and six plays later quarterback Bryce Taylor landed behind the McGill goalposts.

SCORE SHUTDOWN

Quarterback Cal Connor gave Queen's their only touchdown after a 47-yard run in the third quarter. Pete Thomson converted.

The margin of difference for the Gaels was a pair of first quarter singles by Larry Pearson and Eric Hafeman, who missed a field goal attempt.

It was even the rest of the way. Gaels picked up a first-quarter safety touch, but Western barred that with one of their own in the second. Art Froese converted Cranmer's touchdown.

On first downs, Western led Queen's 19-14. Gaels had 201 yards rushing to 77 for the Mustangs, but Queen's could manage only three yards passing while Western piled up 170 yards.

Next Saturday, Western is at Toronto and McGill visits Queen's.

It was a night for celebration at the Ottawa Civic Stadium as Royal Military College Redmen won their first Ontario Intercollegiate Football League game in two years, a 15-0 shutout over University of Waterloo Warriors. Quarterback Fred Sutherland started the victory march with a plunge from the one-yard line on a keeper play.

In the same league, Carleton Ravens thumbed University of Guelph Redmen 35-14 for a fifth win in two starts. Carleton's Doug Beveridge turned in the top play, an 85-yard kickoff return for a touchdown to launch the third quarter.

Lions Nip Argos

Tigers Tie Ottawa For Eastern Lead

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

First place was at stake in both Eastern and Western conferences dtring weekend Canadian Football League action and the odds-on favorites came through, but only the breaks in the game made the difference.

British Columbia Lions maintained their undefeated string Saturday night in Toronto when they edged the Argonauts 20-15 after a former Argo, Rex Mortis, intercepted a pass early in the last quarter.

Quarterback Joe Kapp then began to pick Toronto's defence apart before carrying across himself and salvaging the Lions' win after Argos had made a spirited comeback from a 14-0 deficit to take a one-point lead.

The Eastern Conference got the benefit of Sunday's game in Hamilton when the Tiger-Cats, despite being outpassed in all offensive departments, edged Saskatchewan Roughriders 17-15.

Again the breaks went in Hamilton's favor when the Riders threatened to take the lead no fewer than three times, only to lose the ball because of an alert Hamilton defence that was responsible for one of the Ti-cats' converted touchdowns earlier in the game.

STILL FIRST

The win left the Lions in first place in the Western Conference, one point up on Calgary Stampeders who squeaked by Winnipeg Blue Bombers Sunday in a WFC game 26-25, scoring eight points in the last three minutes. The Argos remained deadlocked in third place in the East with Montreal Alouettes. Each team has three wins.

The Hamilton victory vaulted the Ticats into a first-place tie in the EFC standings with idle Ottawa Rough Riders.

Saskatchewan's loss, the first after a five - game winning streak, dumped the Riders into third place in the WFC. They were tied with Calgary entering weekend action.

Kapp, who put on a marvelous passing display for the 27,240 fans at the Canadian National Exhibition Stadium, was the contributing factor in B.C.'s victory over stubborn Toronto defenders.

His pass to halfback Willie Fleming to open the scoring was the 104th touchdown pass of his WFC career, tying him in that department with Indian Jack Jacobs, onetime Winnipeg star.

SCORES WINNER

He later scored the winning touchdown. Also scoring a Lion touchdown was rookie Bob Swift while Peter Kempf added two converts. Jim Vollenweider and Dick Shatto scored the Argo touchdown. Kari Sweetan converted both and Dave Mann kicked a single.

In the Hamilton game, both teams scored with the wind that gusted at times up to 40 miles an hour. Art Baker scored for Hamilton the first time the Ticats handled the ball and Zeno Karcz fell on a blocked kick in the Riders' end zone for Hamilton's second TD. Don Sutherin added two converts and kicked a wind - assisted 54-yard field goal to account for the rest of the Hamilton scoring.

Rider quarterback Ron Lancaster, who accounted for 253 yards passing during the game, scored one touchdown with the other going to Billy Gray. Jim Whitehouse added two converts and Martin Fabi booted a 67-yard punt for the Saskatchewan scoring.

PLAYER INJURED

The Riders lost end Jim McNaughton early in the game with what was diagnosed as a fractured collarbone. Hamilton team manager Len Back was another injury victim. He suffered head, neck and back injuries when Hamilton's Tommy Grant, thrown off balance as he reached for a Bernie Faloney pass at the sidelines, went barrelling into the Hamilton bench, knocking the manager unconscious. He was taken to Hamilton General Hospital where authorities reported his condition as satisfactory.

The Lions will attempt to extend their unbeaten string to 11 tonight when they tackle Montreal Alouettes in Montreal.

The game will be televised in the East by the CTV network beginning at 8 p.m. EDT.

Saskatchewan visits Ottawa Tuesday in another game which will be available to CTV viewers in the East, beginning at 8 p.m. EDT.

The Als, who started the EFC season with three straight wins and gave every indication of running over the rest of the league, have since lost five in a row.

France Wins Team Title

NEW YORK (AP)—Gun Bow nodded his head in front just at the finish line Saturday and kept Kelso from becoming the world's leading money winner as he won the $108,200 Woodward at Aqueduct.

Gun Bow, a four-year-old from the Gedney Farm ridden by Walter Blum, and Kelso, the four-time horse of the year from Mrs. Richard S. Dupont's Bohemia Stable, hooked up 1-16th of a length from the end of the 1¼-mile race.

With their heads bobbing almost in unison, the pair battled right down to the finish line with Gun Bow sticking his nose in front in the final stride.

Paul Mellon's Quadrangle, only three-year-old in the field of five, trailed by four lengths for third place with Guadalcanal fourth and Colorado King last.

Gun Bow, chalking up his eighth victory, all in stakes, in 14 starts this year, earned $70,-620 to boost his 1964 bankroll to $532,740 and all but wrapped up Horse of the Year honors and the handicap division championship.

Kelso, who had beaten Gun Bow by less than a length in the aqueduct stakes labor day, earned $21,660 and sent his winnings for nearly six years of racing soaring to $1,732,772. Round Table tops the money winning list with $1,749,260.

Gun Bow paid $4.90, $2.40 and $2.10. Kelso returned $2.20 and $2.10 and quadrangle $2.10.

Toronto-born actor Raymond Massey has been an American citizen since 1944.

Clemente, Oliva Win Bat Titles

NEW YORK (AP) — Tony Oliva of Minnesota Twins and Roberto Clemente of Pittsburgh Pirates, clinched major league batting championships Sunday.

Oliva, finishing with a .323 average, became the first rookie in modern history to win a major-league batting title.

Oliva, 24-year-old Cuban, finished six points in front of Baltimore's Brooks Robinson in the American League.

Oliva is the first rookie to finish top in either big league since Abner Dalrymple of Milwaukee did it in 1878.

Clemente wound up at .339 to win his second National League crown. The 30-year-old Puerto Rican outfielder won with a .351 mark in 1961. Rookie Rico Carty of Milwaukee was the runner-up at .330.

MAYS HAS .296

Willie Mays of San Francisco, who set a sizzling NL pace in the opening months of the season, closed the campaign with a .296 average.

The slugging outfielder, however, captured the home run title with 47.

Harmon Killebrew of Minnesota won the American League home run title with 49 and the Orioles' Robinson was the runs-batted-in leader with 118.

Ken Boyer of the champion St. Louis Cardinals took National League RBI honors with 119.

Hill Wins U.S. Grand Prix

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (AP) Graham Hill of England raced to his second straight victory Sunday in the United States Grand Prix and inched closer to the Formula 1 world championship he held in 1962.

Hill, driving a BRM, finished about 30 seconds ahead of John Surtees of England, in a Ferrari V-8. Jo Siffert of Switzerland, in a Brabham-BRM, was third.

The winner's time was two hours, 15 minutes, 0.38 seconds.

Jim Clark of England, the 1963 world champion who lost the lead on the 44th lap because of spark plug trouble in his Lotus, switched to Mike Spence's Lotus and finished out of the money, in seventh place. The car completed only 102 laps of the 110-lap race. Spence also is from England.

Nineteen cars started the 253-mile grind, but mechanical trouble sent 11 to the pits.

FINISHED RACE

The other finishers, in order, were: Richie Ginther of Granada Hills, Calif. (BRM); Walt Hansgen of Bedminster, N.J., (Lotus); Trevor Taylor of England (BRP-BRM); Clark-Spence and Mike Hailwood of England (Lotus-BRM).

Surtees shot into the lead at the starting flag and set the pace until the 13th lap when Clark moved up from second on a back stretch of the hat-shaped, hilly and paved track.

The spark plug trouble dropped Clark to fourth place on the 44th lap. The pit stop cost him two laps.

It was at that point that Surtees once again became the leader, with Hill second and Dan Gurney of Costa Mesa, Calif., in a Brabham, third.

Hill swung into the lead at the 45th lap and, he said later, "Surtees put the pressure on me all the way."

"I didn't ease off until the final four laps," Hill said.

GETS NINE POINTS

Hill, who went into Sunday's race leading for the 1964 world title with 23 points, picked up nine with the victory and raised his total to 41. Surtees added 6 to his 28 for a total of 34 and second place in the overall standings.

Clark, who had been second with 30, failed to pick up any points and dropped to third in the standings.

Only Hill and Surtees drove the full 110 laps. Siffert was flagged off the track after 109, Ginther and Hansgen after 107, and Taylor at 106. Clark called it quits after 102 laps and Hailwood at 101.

Just Out of College, Becomes TV 'Cinderella'

By CY FOX

MONTREAL (CP) — Sandi Fruman, a long-limbed 22-year-old from Regina, rubbed her big brown eyes in disbelief that such things can still happen.

Barely a year out of college and with no show business experience, she had ventured into the office of a television producer looking for a research job and wound up being hired as hostess for a network TV program.

"It sounds like a crazy Cinderella story, with everything so organized nowadays," Miss Fruman said. "But it happened to me."

"She's a natural, a real find," enthused Harry J. Boyle, executive producer of the program, a twice-weekly edition of The Observer.

Since mid-June, Miss Fruman in Montreal has joined Toronto-based Lloyd Robertson in presiding over the CBC show, which uses reversible microwave to allow the two to converse as if in one studio.

The 5-foot-10-tall personality first came to Montreal after graduating from the University of Manitoba to study at the Montreal School of Social Work and specialized in English literature and psychology.

WORKED AT Y

Once here, she took a job as a group counsellor at the YWCA, administering a summer course and a nursery school aid helping girls with housebold training.

An official of the Y happened to be the mother of CBC producer Gerry Flaherty. It was to his office Miss Fruman went June 1 in pursuit of the research job.

But Mr. Flaxton, in charge of the Montreal side of The Observer, put her name down instead as one of 21 applicants for the one-career job.

Besides her YWCA record, Miss Fruman's only employment experience was part-time work during college vacations with a newspaper, a department store and a publishing firm.

"I hadn't been a regular TV-watcher," she said. "I didn't even own a set."

All statuesque exuberance, she recalled how she decided to send the TV offer "really for a lark."

"But the lark sort of backfired and here I am."

Montreal suits her, she said, for the many reasons big cities repeat other people. For her, the tortuous traffic and the crush of pedestrians make a weird, fascinating music.

The Observer features interviews with newsworthy personalities and this is where Miss Fruman can indulge her lifelong love for "talking to people."

CINDERELLA STORY—Sandi Fruman, 22, of Regina, got more than she asked for when she went to Montreal and applied for a behind-the-scenes research job at a Montreal television station. Instead, the University of Manitoba graduate who loves talking to people, got an on-camera job interviewing personalities with whom CBC producer Gary Flaxton added her name to a list of 21 applicants for hostess on the twice-weekly program, "The Observer." The Trots

CAMPBELLVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Dean Hanover was beaten by Beverly Dillard in the $4,000 Garden City Stakes before 5,450 fans at Mohawk Raceway Saturday.

The diminutive bay who has 10 wins for $26,677 for the Herberts of London, Ont., this season, broke stride twice during the 1-1/16-miles race. He had not raced for three weeks prior to Saturday's race.

Dillard, seventh victory of the season for Beverly Dillard, owned by Earl and Bruce Shea of Beverly.

The four-year-old daughter of John Dillard collected $2,030 for her 2:45 4-5 winning effort, bringing her season's earnings to $10,473.

Canada Qualifies For Olympics

YOKOHAMA (CP) — Canada and South Korea qualified for the Olympic basketball championship Sunday in the final games of the pre - Olympic round-robin tournament.

Mexico and Australia previously had clinched places in the 16 - team championship bracket.

Canada beat Cuba 72-63 to wind up with a 7-2 record for the 10-country round-robin.

The Philippines routed South Korea 90-54. That gave the Koreans and Cuba 7-3 records for the tournament, but South Korea had beaten Cuba and thus took the Olympic berth.

Canadian coach Doug Heasley of Toronto said he was happy with "I feel terrific, my boys did well."

The Canadians jumped into the lead after the first 18 seconds of play on a field goal by George Stulac. The Cubans tied it at six-all on a free throw by Jacisto Gonzalez after the first six minutes. Stulac Hardie of Vancouver bounded back with a field goal to put Canada in the lead and the Canadians held the lead the rest of the way.

The half-time score was 32-26 in favor of Canada.

The Canadians were more accurate with their long shots and most of their points were scored by that route. A difference in the outcome could have been in the free throw department. The Canadians had 14 free throws and missed only two. The Cubans had 28 free throw chances and missed nine.

High scorers for Canada, each with 14 points, were Warren Reynolds of Toronto and John McKibbon of Montreal. The only Canadian player removed on fouls was Hartley, who left the game after 11 minutes of the second half.

ARE NOMINATED

OTTAWA (CP) — Halfbacks Ronnie Stewart and Joe Poirier of Ottawa Rough Riders were nominated Sunday for the Jeff Russel Trophy, presented annually to the player in the Canadian Football League displaying the most sportsmanlike conduct.

Wind Cancels Dinghy Meet

KINGSTON (CP) — Winds gusting up to 50 miles an hour forced cancellation of this year's Canadian Dinghy Association team competition scheduled for Kingston Harbor during the weekend.

Two of the nine races slated were sailed before race officials called a halt to the competitions Saturday.—Queen City Yacht Club of Toronto, Kingston Yacht Club and defending champion Royal St. Lawrence Yacht Club of Montreal were tied for the lead at the time.

The race committee met with association president David Kirby of Ottawa and decided the competition would be cancelled. One official suggested the races be rescheduled for next spring but no immediate decision was made.

Also competing were teams from Ottawa, Hamilton, Sturgeon Falls and Deep River.

Longhorns Win Three Top College Teams Lose

NEW YORK (AP) — Texas, the No. 1 college football team in the United States, escaped an upset edgewise that failed four of college football's elite Saturday while Notre Dame continued on the upswing and Yale romped to its 600th victory.

The Longhorns, defending national champions, trailed rugged Army 6-3 until late in the third quarter of their night game at Austin, Tex., before pushing over two touchdowns for a 17-6 victory.

Fourth - ranked Alabama trimmed Vanderbilt 24-0 but giant-killer Kentucky knocked off seventh-ranked Auburn 20-0 and second - ranked Southern California was among three high-placed teams toppled by Big Ten opponents.

Rebounding Michigan State toppled USC, No. 2 in The Associated Press poll, before 48,000 fans at Michigan Stadium.

HOLD NAVY

Eighth-ranked Michigan contained a limping Roger Staubach and Navy 21-0 to move No. 6 in last week's AP poll, 21-0, into a tie with 10th ranked Washington 28-18.

The fighting Irish, on the move under new coach Ara Parseghian, made Purdue their second straight Big Ten victim throttling the Boilermakers 34-15.

Yale, a football pioneer in 1872, became the first school to win 600 games by rolling over Lehigh 54-0 via a 602-yard total offense.

Oregon capitalized on four third-quarter fumbles to trim Penn State 17-0.

Illinois whipped Northwestern 17-6 and Ohio State held off Indiana 17-0.

Mississippi, stunned by Kentucky last week and dumped from the No. 1 spot, came back strong with a 31-9 romp over Houston. Ole Miss was disregarded in the East despite an opening loss to Boston College, by humbling Holy Cross 24-8 for its second victory and Pittsburgh, another eastern hard-nose, riddled William and Mary 34-7.

At the Belle

Up to "The Beatles"

Although The Beatles now starring in "A Hard Day's Night," now showing at the Belle Theatre, are considered a "one-of-a-kind, they are actually individualistic, according to those who work close to them.

John Lennon is a sort of unofficial leader. He's the furthest out of the four, the most sensitive and the most inventual sense of humor. He and Ringo Starr are the oldest of the boys — each 25.

Ringo is less apparent however. He is the more flamboyant of the group, often compared to Harpo Marx. He's probably the most popular with the girls, for since they found out his fondness for rings, they've been gifting him with 200 or more a month.

Paul McCartney, who writes all the songs with John, has been kidded by some disc jockeys about having a babyface, but is probably the most mature. With his happy-go-lucky attitude, he is certainly the easiest to do an interview with and is most at home-off-the-cuff.

George Harrison, who looks rather like John, and is sometimes mistaken for him, has the strongest sense of responsibility. He'll never settle for anything less than an absolutely best effort. Music critic sometimes overlook the fact that it's his precision with the lead guitar which is the real key to the unified effect of all the Beatles' performances.

In "A Hard Day's Night," each of the Beatles has ample opportunity for displaying his individual histrionic talents. Although Alun Owen's script revolves around th exploits of the troupe on a whirlwind trip to London, and the comedy complications that beset them, every member of the group has one or more key scenes in which he's performing without his teammates.

An entertaining program of Festurettes precede the exhibition of the feature scenes offering of The Beatles' in "A Hard Day's Night," continuing at the Belle Theatre in Belleville.

Many of Old Shows Back And in Fairly Good Shape

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Jackie Gleason's move to Miami has not so far made any difference in the format and quality of his show. The only thing that seems faintly new is that Joe the bartender now parts his hair on the side instead of in the middle.

The Defenders last week wound up a delightful two-part story, full of warmth and gentle humor.

Perry Mason seems blessed this season with simpler stories. Gunsmoke continues about as usual, except that Matt Dillon's comical sidekick is an unshaven fellow who isn't as appealing as was Chester.

Anyway, many of the old shows are back and in fairly good shape.

But some evil spirits apparently are affecting too many of the new programs on U.S. television. With a few notable exceptions, the quality is away off. And it seems the problem is in the scripts. The stories often are silly and dull and the characters just not interesting.

Some of the problem is compounded by the viewers, who have so many programs on so many nights that they are becoming harder and harder to please.

Recommended tonight:

90 Bristol Court, premiere, NBC, 7:30-9 EDT — three separate but related situation comedies.

Rookie Replaces Plante

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Former Vezina Trophy winner Jacques Plante has lost the No. 1 goalie position with New York Rangers to rookie Gilles Villemure, general manager Muzz Patrick of the National Hockey League team reported.

Plante was sent to New York for treatment for "a ligament injury of some kind" when the team passed through Toronto Thursday on the way to London. where Rangers lost 2-1 to Boston Bruins in an exhibition game Friday night.

Asked how long Plante would be out, Patrick said:

"It doesn't really matter because Villemure is our No. 1 goalie. We're going to give Plante sweater No. 23 and Villemure No. 1."

Patrick said Plante's play in practice has been "great some days but he's been useless in the games we've played so far."

Villemure, 24-year-old native of Trois-Rivieres, Que., turned pro with Vancouver Canucks of the Western Hockey League two years ago. Last season he was with Baltimore Clippers of the American League and was up to the NHL for three games with Rangers.

Alvin Dark Gets Boot From Giants

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Alvin Dark was fired Sunday as manager of San Francisco Giants after four years at the helm of the National League club.

Coach Herman Franks was named the new manager by Giants president Horace Stoneham at a press conference one-half hour after the fourth-place Giants lost their last game of the season to Chicago Cubs 9-2.

Dark's firing was the fourth managerial shift announced recently. Lum Harris has replaced Harry Craft at Houston, Billy Herman has replaced John Perky at Boston and Danny Murtaugh has resigned at Pittsburgh.

Rumors that 1964 would be Dark's last at the Giants' helm started even before the season opened.

Dark was named Giants manager in 1961.

Dark, from Lake Charles, La., joined the Giants in 1950, played with the National League champions of 1951 and the world championship team of 1954.

During 14 active seasons in the majors, he also played for St. Louis Cardinals, Chicago Cubs, Philadelphia Phillies and Braves.

All-Canadian Showdown

G. Knudson Wins Fresno Open

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Canadian PGA champion George Knudson of Toronto shot a five-under par 67 in his final round to overtake Al Balding on the 72nd hole in the $35,000 Fresno Open golf tournament Sunday and dropped a birdie putt on the second sudden death playoff hole to beat his fellow Torontonian for the $5,000 first prize.

Coming up to the 72nd hole, a 389-yard par 5, the 28-year-old Knudson chipped his third shot six feet from the pin. Balding failed to get down his 15 footer and Knudson sank for a birdie four to even the match.

On the first extra hole of the playoff they tied in par fours. On the second, a par-four 415-yarder, Balding pulled his tee shot into the rough to the left.

Knudson, in good position down the middle, dropped his second eight feet from the pin and took a birdie three for victory as Balding had to settle for par.

Knudson, who won the Canadian PGA championship this year and already has banked $13,781 in official tour winnings, steadily crept up on the 40-year-old Balding, who was unable to do better than par 72 Sunday.

TOOK COURSE APART

Balding had taken the 7,181-yan San Joaquin Country Club layout apart Saturday with a third-round 66 which equalled the course record and enabled him to push ahead of big Bob McCallister, of Corona, Calif., leader through the first two rounds.

Balding and Knudson each finished the regular 72 holes with 280s.

McCallister and veteran Louisianian Jay Hebert finished with two-over 74s and totals of 283. They were tied with Frank Beard, who posted a 73 to catch up with them.

Defending champion Mason Rudolph, who set the course record of 65 in winning with a total of 275 in 1963, never was in contention this time.

Bob Panasiuk of Windsor, Ont., ended out of the money in a seven-way tie for 39th place. He fired 71-72-76-76—295.

Knudson and Balding, who room together on the PGA tour, make up the Canada Cup team which will play in the International matches in Hawaii in December.

Bruins Serve Warning

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Boston Bruins haven't set the National Hockey League on fire during the last few seasons but when they decide to dish out humble pie they serve it by the bushel.

Although finishing last in the six-team circuit last season, the Bruins were remembered best for their 11-0 rout of Toronto Maple Leafs.

This season the Bruins have started their whitewashing before the 70-game NHL schedule even gets under way.

Murray Oliver fired three goals Sunday night as Boston potted its latest lopsided victory, an 8-1 victory over New York Rangers.

In other pre-season action, Toronto edged San Francisco Seals of the Western Hockey league 5-3, Detroit Red Wings tied Tulsa of the Central Professional Hockey League 4-4, and Chicago Black Hawks defeated Quebec Aces of the American Hockey League 5-4.

LEAFS WHIP BLADES

In Saturday action, Toronto walloped Los Angeles Blades of the WHL 10-3, Chicago defeated the Aces 4-2, and Montreal Canadiens shut out Hershey Bears of the AHL, 4-0.

Sunday's game was the last of the pre-season exhibitions for the Bruins. The annual NHL All-Star game is scheduled for Toronto Saturday and the regular schedule opens Monday with the Bruins at home to the same Rangers.

Gary Dornhoefer collected a pair for Boston while teammates Johnny Bucyk, Forbes Kennedy and Dean Prentice got the others. Earl Ingarfield got the only New York goal.

Defenceman Allan Stanley paced the Leafs Sunday with a pai. of goals, while teammates George Armstrong, Dave Keon and Ron Stewart added the others.

Dallas Smith, Charlie Burns and Larry Lund were the San Francisco marksmen.

Stan Mikita scored twice for Chicago against the Aces Sunday. Other Chicago scorers were Bobby Hull, Doug Robinson and Eric Nesterenko.

PICTON (Staff) — In connection with a change of command parade held in Belleville on Sunday, officers and color party of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment laid up their colors in Picton. Sunday morning at the church service at the Anglican church of St. Mary Magdelene in Picton. The flag, the Queen's colors and a bare staff (on which should have been flying the Regimental colors) were presented at the door of the church when the unit lined up before the church.

In a short but impressive ceremony the Adjutant of the Regiment, Capt. Paul Davis, rapped on the door of the church three times with the hilt of his sword. When the call was answered from inside by the church's new Rector, Rev. Douglas P. Burns, they were given permission to enter and deposit their colors in the church for safekeeping. They will always hang proudly in this chancel on view to the public. Thirty years ago the colors were presented by Lt. Gen. Sir Archibald McDonnell and consecrated by the Right Reverend John Lyons, the Lord Bishop of Ontario. There was a large congregation in attendance to see the "laying away ceremonies at the church and members of the Regiment were resplendent in their colorful uniforms as they paraded in the church in the bright morning sunshine.

Former P.M. Makes Plea For Unity

KINGSTON (CP) — Louis St. Laurent, former Canadian prime minister, said Saturday English- and French-speaking Canadians must continue to live in harmony based on mutual respect and understanding.

Mr. St. Laurent was one of three prominent Canadians awarded honorary degrees during the Royal Military College fall convocation exercises.

The former prime minister received an honorary doctor of laws degree. Dr. Henry George Thode, president and vice-chancellor of McMaster University, was awarded a doctor of science degree and Lt.-Gen. E. L. M. Burns, Canadian government adviser on disarmament, was awarded a doctor of military science degree.

In delivering the convocation address, Mr. St. Laurent said: "Although we are of diverse backgrounds and traditions we have learned that we can live together in harmony based on mutual respect and mutual understanding. There were important reasons why Canada should become a nation of federated provinces almost 100 years ago and these reasons are still valid today."

BE UNDERSTANDS

He said he understood the reasons why French Canadians want to guard their rights and participate in the development of their resources, but "it does not seem to me that disunity and disruption can be the way to reach these goals."

Mr. St. Laurent said the nation is richer and more stimulating because of its diversity.

"If we are to fulfill our destiny as a nation and play our full part in the family of nations we must set a good example," he said. "We must continue to work a better understanding of one another and constantly seek unity of purpose in all matters that are of common concern to us all."

Northern Ireland's Election Campaign Revives Old Sores

An AP News Analysis
By COLIN FROST

BELFAST (AP) — The violence in Northern Ireland's election campaign has revived old feuds that responsible leaders of all Irish parties had hoped were dying.

For the first time in many years, the lines in Belfast's back streets were drawn sharply between Roman Catholics and Protestants. After three nights of rioting scores of persons lay injured or were under arrest.

So far the violence has been confined to a few blocks of a predominantly Catholic and working class district in west Belfast. The weapons have been rocks and Molotov cocktails from the rioters, batons and blackthorn canes from the police.

But the fight is in fact another chapter in an argument that has lasted centuries. On the one side is the demand among Roman Catholics for an end of the partition of Ireland. The Protestants insist on continued union with Britain.

IS EXTENSION

It is thus an extension of the Battle of the Boyne River in Ireland in 1690 when the Protestant King William III defeated the Catholic King James II and his Irish supporters. Protestants still chalk "Remember King Billy" on the walls of Catholic areas.

In the last few years these divisions diminished.

Informed opinion cites many reasons for the easement.

One is the economic improvement on both sides of the Irish border. Ireland has no more hungry fighters.

Another was the effect of the appeals of the late Pope John XXIII to end intolerance.

Still another was the condemnation of violence by the Irish Republic's Premier Sean Lemass, and other veterans of Ireland's fight for independence.

Independence left the six predominantly Protestant counties of Northern Ireland still part of the United Kingdom. They have their own Parliament but send 13 members to Britain's House of Commons.

They are contested by Labor candidates who accept partition and bid for both Catholic and Protestant working class votes, and by 10 Republicans.

The main effect of the disorders, it seems, will be a blow to the Labor party by rallying Protestants behind the unionists.

53 Fatalities Across Canada During Weekend

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Fifty - three persons died violently across Canada during the weekend—43 in highway accidents, six in drownings, one by fire and three in miscellaneous accidents.

A survey by The Canadian Press from 6 p.m. Friday to midnight Sunday local times showed Quebec in the lead with 17 traffic deaths.

Ontario had 13 killed on the highways and one boy was shot when a .22 calibre rifle accidentally discharged when he was putting it away in a closet at his home.

Tragedy struck the family of Mr. and Mrs. Harold McPhee of Oromocto, N.B., when their four children, Robert, 3, Charlene, 4, Harold, 6, and Marie, 8, skidded off the road and plunged into the Oromocto River. They were New Brunswick's only reported fatalities.

Higher Pay Sought for Prison Guards

OTTAWA (CP) — Higher pay is urgently needed for penitentiary employees, A. Cal Best, president of the Civil Service Association of Canada said today.

Text of his speech was released in advance of delivery.

He told the opening session of the CSAC's national convention here to "demand" in a resolution sent to all MPs and circulated publicly that guards be paid salaries equivalent to those of police in cities of 50,000 or more population.

"In the past three years three of our members have been killed in the line of duty in Canadian penitentiaries," the 83 delegates from across Canada were told.

(The latest death was the stabbing of a guard at Dorchester Penitentiary last week.)

The government's argument that guards don't face the same hazards as police officers and thus don't warrant equal pay was "sheer, utter nonsense. Many of you are from large cities. I would ask you when was the last time a police officer was killed in your city?"

German Control Of Atomic Arms Seen Possible

Wilson Fears Spread Of Nuclear Weapons

By JOSEPH MacSWAIN

LONDON (CP)—British fear of a "German finger on the nuclear trigger" was thrown into the election campaign by Harold Wilson, Labor party leader, Monday night.

Making his first foreign and defence policy speech of the campaign for the Oct. 15 general election, Wilson implied Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home is following policies that will encourage West Germany to become a nuclear power.

Douglas-Home, in turn, spearheaded a Tory attack on "economic scaremongering" by Wilson who, he alleged, is willing to jeopardize Britain's economic well - being to obtain votes.

Nomination day, Monday, ended with a total of 1,755 candidates in the field for the 630 Commons seats. This was 113 fewer than 1950's record number.

The Tories have 629 candidates compared with 628 for Labor and 363 for the Liberals —the largest number of Liberals since 1950.

At dissolution the standing in the House of Commons was: Conservatives and allies 353; Labor 260; Liberals 7; independents 2; vacant 8.

An apparent resurgence for Labor was reflected Monday by a fall in stock market prices of steel shares. Labor is pledged to renationalize steel. There was also a swing to Labor in election betting.

GOAL $106,000

Collected $17,000

About $17,000 has been given so far to the Belleville United Appeal, now in its fifth day of this year's campaign. Ten days of the campaign remain. About 58,500 of the total has been turned in at the United Appeal office in the Kiwanis Centre, including corporate gifts from Mead Johnson and Northern Electric, more than $400 from the Research Laboratory's Inplant campaign and more than $500 from the students of Quinte Secondary School.

In-plant campaigns are in progress in more than half the industries in town now, and almost all those without campaigns in operation have plans for campaigns to start this week or next. Canadian National Railways still leads the local industries, with about $3,500 raised and employees.

Farm Bill Hits Rock In House

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP)—Harry Hays' pet project, the farm machinery syndicate bill, ran into more opposition road blocks Monday and today the debate entered its seventh day.

The legislation, hailed by the agriculture minister as a bold new plan to cut farmers' capital costs, has been before the House on and off since Sept. 18.

The bill authorizes the Farm Credit Corporation to lend up to $100,000 to a syndicate or partnership of three or more farmers "who want to buy and use implements on a joint basis.

Conservative MPs from the Prairies took up most of Monday's debate as they criticized the bill for placing too great a burden of liability on syndicate members and for giving the Farm Credit Corporation too many discretionary powers.

They objected to clause three which provides that all members of a syndicate must sign a promissory note for which they are liable individually for the full outstanding amount of the loan.

For instance, if a syndicate of four farmers borrowed $60,000. each farmer would have a liability of $60,000.

UNFAIR RISK

The Conservatives argued that this places an unfair risk burden on small family farms and limits farmers' chances of getting the loans they need.

New Democratic Leader Douglas introduced this view and Jack Horner (PC—Acadia) moved an amendment providing that a farmer would be liable only for his "proportionate share" of the outstanding amount of the loan.

Mr. Hays opposed the amendment, saying that joint liability is a key incentive to close co-operation between the farmers and good care of jointly-owned machinery. He said the machinery purchased with a loan would itself be the main security of the syndicate, leaving the farmers free to contract loans separately if they wished.

The debate on the amendment continues today.

Another amendment, this one introduced by Mr. Douglas, was defeated 61 to 31. It would have provided that co-operative farm associations could qualify for loans as syndicates.

The amendment was supported by 24 Conservatives, five New Democrats and two Creditistes. It was opposed by 39 Liberals and Social Credit members, Mr. Thompson and Bert Leboe (SC—Cariboo).

HOUSTON, Tex. Four areas near Barstow, Calif. comparable to those expected on the moon, have been selected for analysis.

Nuns Teaching Kindergarten In Ohio Presbyterian Church

AKRON, Ohio (AP)—The unusual is happening every day on West Exchange Street. A half-dozen nuns, wearing the habit of the Dominican Sisters, are working in the Westminster United Presbyterian Church.

This advance in ecumenical spirit had its start a week before Labor Day. Our Lady of the Elms Roman Catholic School, across the street from the Presbyterian Church, found it was going to be short of space for nursery and kindergarten classes.

A new building would not be completed before Nov. 1.

Mother Mary Eileen Elms Duggan, president of this venerated Dr. Noel A. Calhoun, Westminster Church pastor. He offered them four large Sunday school classrooms and use of the kitchen and other equipment.

When Mother Eileen asked about rental, Dr. Calhoun replied: "Sister, we'll not even talk about that; we consider this our Christian duty."

The 31 - member session of the United Presbyterian Church gave unanimous approval, and the nuns, three to five years old, began.

"Five years ago, I don't believe those sisters would ever have walked into this building," Dr. Calhoun said. "There has been a softening on the part of Catholics through the great spirit of Pope John, and the Protestant world has reacted in turn.

"With this spirit alive, it would not behoove us to deny the space."

Liberals Win Four Byelections

QUEBEC (CP) — The Liberal party convincingly won all four seats in provincial byelections Monday and Premier Lesage said the results are evidence of support for his government's policies.

"Quebec is on the march and the people have decided to march with us," the premier declared when returns were in. Opposition Leader Daniel Johnson said the results were not an expression of support for the government.

"This is not a victory for Lesage, it is a victory for patronage, a victory for provincial fight against millions of dollars."

The Liberals gained one more supporter as they took Dorchester riding away from the Union Nationale for the first time since 1935.

The Liberals also won Ma-

Automation's 'Dark Cloud' Worries Labor Delegates

NORTH BAY (CP) — Automation's "dark cloud" was uppermost in the thoughts of delegates Monday as the Ontario Federation of Labor endorsed a call for a new field of strike action and adopted a policy statement seeking a drive against poverty.

About 1,000 delegates and guests roared approval when President David Archer of Toronto said labor's strike weapon must be unleashed against the irresponsible use of automation by employers.

The 2,000-word statement on poverty said nearly 2,000,000 non-farm persons in Ontario, or 32 per cent of the population in Canada's richest province, live in varying degrees of "deprivation, poverty or destitution."

Much of it was the result of the job-slashing march of automated production processes, leaving aside thousands of semi - skilled and non - skilled workers.

One of the convention's resolutions calls on trade unions to unite in a demand for contracts that will give them the right to strike during the life of the agreement.

Under present provincial law, unions cannot call a strike while a contract is in force and the employer lives up to it.

Mr. Archer, dus for re-election today at the second day of the three-day annual conference, said Labor Minister Leslie Rowntree has already been asked to change this legislation.

"It is all very well for the politicians to assure us that before automated machinery is moved into a plant there must be consultation with the union," he said.

"But what good is consultation if you have an agreement, and during the term of the agreement management calls you in to tell you hundreds of jobs have been eliminated because of new machinery or a new speed-up process?"

Mr. Archer warned that the automated age "shoots over us like a dark cloud."

Tshombe Gets To Cairo

By WEBB McKINLEY

CAIRO (AP) — Determined Moise Tshombe flew back to Cairo today in defiance of an earlier attempt to bar him, and gained entry into a sleeping Egypt and seemed certain to throw the conference of nonaligned nations into confusion.

Whether The Congo's premier would be admitted to the 47-country meeting was doubtful. Some sources said because he did not bring along an international health certificate he might be "quarantined" in the palatial guest house to which he was conducted on arrival.

A majority of the conference members, even some opposition, tried earlier to discourage Tshombe from coming by asking Congo President Joseph Kasavubu to come in his place.

When Tshombe persisted, Cairo airport early Monday refused his chartered jet permission to land and shunted it on to Athens.

Algerian President Ahmed Ben Bella announced "I will not sit with Tshombe under one roof in any circumstances." Other delegates said his presence would have "a disturbing effect."

20 IN ENTOURAGE

But at 3 a.m. today, followed by an entourage of 20 persons, Tshombe stepped jauntily off a scheduled Sabbiopian Air Line flight from Athens and into a scene of embarrassed confusion at the airport in suburban Heliopolis.

Security officers ushered him into a lounge and called Cairo for instructions. Word came back to invite the premier into the Ursula Palace, on Cairo's outskirts, as President Nasser's guest.

An empty chair at the opening of the conference Monday night symbolized the Congolese leader's controversial role in Africa.

Pope Pius Feared Strong Words Would Worsen Terror of War

VATICAN CITY (AP)—A Roman Catholic cardinal says Pope Pius XII often told him he would have condemned war horrors in stronger terms except for a fear of making matters worse.

Antonio Cardinal Bacci, expert on the Vatican's Latin, has defended Pius in a passage of his new book, With Light in the Service of Four Popes.

Earlier this year the Rome Hocchuth play, The Deputy, stirred considerable controversy with its suggestion that Pius could have done more to aid the Jews during the Second World War.

Cardinal Bacci, who prepared many papal pronouncements in Latin, wrote:

"Those who accuse Pius of weakness and acquiescence in his action during the war . . . have in error.

"It never was weakness, but prudence. . . .

"Many times he told me, when I presented him a document on the subject:

"'There is a need to avoid a greater evil. Certainly I would use even stronger ways to condemn errors and horrors but I did not fear to bring about a worsening of the situation. . . .

"'With prudence and patience, always linked to the just affirmation of principles, one can save people and above all the innocents from a worst catastrophe in this sorrowful and terrifying hour.'"

Shows Vivacity, Ease Of Manner On Her Arrival

Goes to Charlottetown For Theatre Opening

By JAMES NELSON

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — If threatening weather and tight security precautions persist, this may well turn out to be the most personal of the Queen's four visits to Canada.

Her program today calls for a noon-hour arrival in Charlottetown from Summerside, P.E.I., aboard the royal yacht Britannia, official dedication of the new $5,600,000 Fathers of Confederation Memorial Buildings here, and attendance at a royal command performance in the new Confederation Theatre tonight.

On her arrival by air in Summerside Monday she showed a vivacity and ease of manner not seen at the outset of her Canadian visits in 1951, 1957 and 1959. Canada and this island province — which was also the host loyal of all the Commonwealth — have obviously become familiar friends.

The weather could cramp the royal style for today's events. Early Monday night forecasters warned of a backlash from hurricane Hilda that might bring drenching rains and high winds for the outdoor ceremony opening the new cultural centre.

Later, however, they were more optimistic. Rain and wind warnings were cancelled and only a few showers were predicted.

CLOUDS LOWER

Heavy black clouds began to lower just before the Queen's arrival at Summerside late Monday. Her mystical good luck with the weather — "the sun broke...through as she arrived"—did not prevail.

Security precautions, although discreet behind the facade of officialdom, were nevertheless complete. No one was permitted inside RCAF station Summerside without security clearance. RCMP guards in khaki drill coveralls lurked in the background, complete with guard dog on a police chain, when the Queen and Prince Philip arrived at Summerside and climbed to go aboard the Britannia.

But despite the glowering weather and the sensitivity of the security personnel, the Queen appeared completely at ease greeting those who seemed to have become old friends in Canadian officialdom.

It was a personal greeting she brought to the reception when she met one of the silver-and-blue BOAO Boeing 707 jet. The crowd in Summerside's main street had noticed the new new closed black Cadillac limousine, returned a genuinely personal response.

If the airport hangar, where the official welcoming ceremonies took place, there was also genuinely personal greeting the Queen brought to Governor-General and Madame Vanier, Prime Minister Pearson and Mrs. Pearson, Premier and Mrs. Shaw, and a score of LONDON (Reuters) — British newspapers today report Queen Elizabeth's arrival on Prince Edward Island with crowds and gun - carrying guards.

Correspondents were united in calling that the Queen appeared unworried at the start of an eight-day visit, despite fears of others for her safety.

The Daily Sketch has just two words in its banner: "Happy landing."

GUNS GUARD HER

Some papers have more sombre headlines. The Daily Mirror says: "She's here . . . and the Mounties close in. Guns guard the Queen."

The Sun declares: "Everywhere I guns and the Mounties."

The Daily Express in an editorial calls Canada "perhaps the most exciting" of all the countries in the Commonwealth.

"The Queen is visiting in her kingdom of Canada — a nation whose future will be even more wonderful than its breathtaking past," it says.

The Daily Sketch expresses the view that the Queen's speeches in Quebec should be made in French.

"That is the kind of gesture," it says, "which can deflect some of the bitterness from this troublesome tour."

Girl, 4, Dies As Parents' HomeBurns

A four-year-old girl sleeping on a bed in her parents' bedroom was burned to death Monday afternoon when fire destroyed a small cedar shingle home on Elm east of West Huntingdon.

Dead is Gena Woodcocks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Woodcocks, R.R. 1, West Huntingdon.

Mrs. Woodcocks was operating a vacuum cleaner in her small converted garage home when she noticed fire in the room about 3.00 p.m.

She ran outside to get help from the grandfather, Floyd Woodcocks tried to enter the house he found his way barred by a wall of flames.

Another neighbor attempted to gain entry through a window but he was also driven back.

Nothing was saved from the burning home.

The father of the dead girl works for a construction firm in Belleville.

Suspect Asbestos May Be Cause Of Lung, Abdominal Cancers

NEW YORK (AP)—Medical specialists have pointed a strong finger of suspicion at asbestos as a cause not only of lung cancer, but also of another extremely rare form of fatal human cancer.

This cancer, known as mesotheliomn, involves the lining of the abdominal and chest cavities.

Much of their evidence comes from autopsy studies of men working with asbestos as an insulation material.

But they said, it also is possible that dust from products containing asbestos might be exposing people generally to some risk of cancers. How much risk there might be, they said they could not tell.

Asbestos, a mineral which can be woven into a fabric, is used not only for insulation but as a flooring material, in automobile brake shoes, and in many other applications. Ordinary wear-and-tear, they said, might release dust into the atmosphere.

A report was presented today to the American Public Health Association by Drs. Irving J. Selikoff and Jacob Churg of the Mount Sinai Hospital, New York, and E. Cuyler Hammond, director of statistical research for the American Cancer Society.

(Canada is a major producer of asbestos, with the Thetford Mines area of southern Quebec the chief producing area. There also is some production in northern British Columbia, Northern Ontario and Newfoundland. Canada's 1963 production totalled 1,276,749 tons, of which 1,062,064 tons were exported.)

Short Hail Storm Greets Early Risers in District

Early risers were greeted with the first hail of the season this morning as a variety of weather conditions were experienced throughout the district.

The mercury dropped to a low of 33 degrees but apparently was flown, then up, and then down again during the night.

Shortly before five this morning it started to rain with a flurry of hail shortly after seven bringing an end to the brief wind and rainstorm. Nearly a quarter of an inch of rain fell in the brief period.

It was the first hail of the fall season in the Belleville area with the soft pellets bouncing merrily off rooftops, sidewalks and roadways.

But rising temperatures quickly melted the hail and little or none was in evidence by 8:30.

But keep top coats handy. The weatherman says the temperature will not rise above 45 degrees. At nine this morning the mercury had risen to 42 degrees.

All Pollsters Pick Johnson To Win Easily

NEW YORK (AP) — The Times says it's exactly five weeks before election day, Nov. 3, President Johnson is the most overwhelming choice to win the U.S. presidency since Thomas E. Dewey at the same stage of the 1948 campaign.

"Therein may lie a warning to the Democrats," says The Times, adding:

"Yet, even Mr. Dewey never enjoyed the kind of lead that every reliable indicator now gives Mr. Johnson — and Mr. Dewey's upset by Harry S. Truman was a tame event compared with the shock that would hit political analysts, poll-takers and party officials if Senator Barry Goldwater were to manage a victory this year."

The Times says many analysts, despite the pools and the atmosphere of Democratic jollity, are reluctant to predict flatly a landslide for Johnson; many believe that in the remaining weeks of the campaign Goldwater may gain ground.

The Russian time was five minutes, 58 seconds, achieved in a training session in almost calm weather.

Canada is represented in the eight-oar event here by Vancouver Rowing Club, with the crew made up of graduates of University of British Columbia. —PRC—finished second to Germany in the 1960 Olympics.

Strawberries Still Ripen

Strawberries in October? That's right!

Mr. Steve Glashbrel of R.R. 2, Stirling, Ont., has strawberries growing in his garden. On Sunday Mr. Glashbrel picked some berries that had ripened.

There are plants still blooming and others with green berries on them, while a few other plants have ripe berries.

If-some-is, that-is, two strawberries for Thanksgiving maybe!

Jury Wants To Hear Track Owner

KINGSTON (CP)—A five-man coroner's jury decided Monday to hear testimony from Lawrence Craven, owner of the Kingston Speedway, before it brings in a decision on the Aug. 28 death of Kingston stock car driver Thomas Yarlough-nett.

Dr. H. B. Colnan, supervising coroner for Ontario, conducted the inquest into the death of the 37-year-old driver who died minutes after his stock car rolled over at the speed way.

Oliver Washer of Kingston, a cousin of the dead man, testified that safety inspections were inadequate at the track. He said there were 15 or 16 cars racing at the time his cousin was killed. He said this was too many for the size of the track.

Mr. Washer said he had warned his cousin about a faulty wheel before the race but Yarloughnett had insisted.

Police testified that Yarloughnett was struck in the chest by a battery located in the front seat of the stock car. Two tracks require drivers to have batteries under the hood.

Arnold Impola, an inspector on the track, said rules could have been enforced more thoroughly and that safety checks were done largely by the drivers.

Mr. Craven is confined to hospital for an undetermined period. No date has been set for the resumption of the hearing.

Dancer Claims Sex Assault At Knifepoint

HAMILTON (CP)—A 22-year-old night club dancer told an Ontario Supreme Court jury Monday she was sexually assaulted for 1½ hours at knifepoint in her north-end apartment June 23.

The woman, mother of two, was testifying at the trial of Michael Kocsar, 25, of Hamilton, who has pleaded not guilty to charges of rape and common assault arising from the incident.

The woman said she was taken home by a friend after a performance at a downtown tavern, and, after eating, fell asleep. She said she awoke to find Kocsak standing over her bed with a knife.

She said Kocsak, accompanied by a friend, told her to remove her clothing and he removed his. The friend got a tea towel which Kocsak stuffed into her mouth, she said.

The dancer said she did not put up a fight.

The trial continues.

Rotarians Hold Weekly Meet At New 'Y'

Members of the Rotary Club of Belleville held their regular weekly meeting in new surroundings when they met at the new YMCA building on Victoria Avenue East on Monday.

The special meeting was arranged by general secretary of the local YMCA, D. Dismantides, to give members of the Rotary Club an opportunity to see the facilities of the newly-constructed building.

A short outline of the building and the cost of its construction was given by chairman of the building committee, Gordon Wilson of Wilson Concrete Products.

Because of limited funds, shortcuts had to be taken during different phases of construction of the new "Y". For instance, Mr. Wilson said that in the shower rooms, ceramic tile soap dishes were going to be installed, but according to New York regulations, stainless steel dishes had to be substituted as it was possible for persons to be injured if these dishes should become chipped or broken. This constituted additional cost which was not originally in budget.

New York regulations also called for stainless steel doors in all of the shower room entrances, but these would have cost $1,600 each. Mr. Wilson said too, that 15 feet had to be cut off the size of the 60-foot pool. It was hoped it could have been constructed to regulation size for pro competitions.

HIGH WATER PRESSURE

Mr. Wilson said that considerable unforseeable cost was involved in constructing the building. When the hole was dug for the pool it was found that there was a terrific amount of water pressure beneath the ground; therefore the pool needed to be anchored, otherwise the pressure would force it right out of the ground. As a result the pool had to be anchored with additional concrete at considerable cost.

Following Mr. Wilson's brief outline of the building, members of the Rotary Club were taken on a guided tour of the building by Mr. Wilson, who explained each phase of the tour.

Prior to the tour, the club enjoyed a delicious meal prepared by the ladies of the YMCA, served in the auditorium.

REYNOLDS — In loving memory of our dear father and grandfather, Arthur Reynolds, who passed away October 6th, 1963.
Father, you left us a silent tear,
A farewell without one word we hear,

But no one to us can ever take the place,
Dear God take a message,
To our father in heaven above,
Tell him how much we miss him,
And give him all our love.
—Sadly missed by son Clarence and daughter-in-law Mildred and grandchildren Brian, Gail, Debbie and Kenny.

REYNOLDS — In loving memory of our dear grandfather, Arthur Reynolds, who passed away October 6th, 1963.
Though our smile has gone forever,
And your hand we cannot touch,
We have so many memories,
Of the one we loved so much.
—Sadly missed and always remembered by daughter Ida and Bill and family.

RITCH — In loving memory of a dear husband, Fred (Pop) Ritch, who died October 6, 1960.
What we would give if we could say
Hello Dad, in the same old way:
Just to hear your voice again dear,
To sit with you and chat awhile,
To see you have a father,
Cherish him with care,
For you'll never know the heartache,
We know.
Till you see his vacant chair.
Ever remembered by his wife Gladys.

Furnace, Stove, Short Circuit, Gas Cause Runs

City firemen had a busy day yesterday as they were called out to an overheated stove and overheated furnace, a short circuit in an electrical appliance and a severed natural gas line lateral.

The overheated furnace was at a Lamber Drive home, while the run for the overheated stove was to 327 Church St.

The electrical appliance short circuit was at the home of Oswald Edward, 62 Canniffon Road.

A local construction firm, doing excavation with a bulldozer nipped through a natural gas line lateral on North Front St. Firemen were called as a precaution.

Both Sides Claim Ike Backs Views

WASHINGTON (AP)—Former president Dwight D. Eisenhower is in the middle—between Democrats and Republicans each claiming he is on their side in a dispute over nuclear weapons control.

It all began Monday when the Republican party unveiled a task force report claiming President Johnson has overextended his control of field-type nuclear weapons. This, the Republican group contended, has damaged U.S. security.

Eisenhower appeared at the New York press conference, but wouldn't endorse or reject the report.

He deplored the injection of the nuclear weapons issue into the presidential campaign, and added:

"I don't think there are things that ought to be talked out in detail. . . . I don't think we should reach conclusions telling the president what he should do or what he should say."

The White House promptly released a statement declaring that President Johnson agreed with Eisenhower that "it is not in the best interest of the country to take our defence plans and make them public."

Dean Burch, Republican national chairman, said Johnson's comment was "a patent attempt to get off the hook of an issue which is embarrassing him and his administration because the American people realize the Democrats have used the question of nuclear weapons to strike fear and horror into their hearts."

Finances Fully Discussed By Council at Meeting

TRENTON — Trenton council met last night in a two-and-a-half-hour session, and the discussion, for the most part, touched on finances — veering from a clear cut decision to spend $83,000 on a 21-inch sewer trunk to whether or not there were enough funds on hand to spend $418 on tree cutting.

The new sewer, which will serve 300 square acres, will run from Quinte Street, up Stewart, Wharf, Wragge to Victoria and on for a block to McGill St. It was decided to post-pone a decision on whether or not to run a 15-inch sewer from McGill, on Victoria, to Dundas St. West at a cost of $23,000. Originally, it had been planned to extend the larger sewer up McGill St. to Film St., there to pick up industrial wastes from the dye plant. However, town engineer Eric Aldersey told council it was thought an extra lateral 18-inch sewer on Mc. Gill would continue to serve the purpose. The project must have official Ontario Water Resources Commission and Ontario Municipal Board approval but council has taken the first step.

As for financing, the new sewer money has been saved in the installation of sewer connections on Dundas Street East near the scene of road widening at the airport; a plan to install a sewer on Bay Street from Dundas Street East to Campbell has been scrapped momentarily; the mayor hopes to buy up land for the proposed new bridge approaches cheaper than the $150,000 allocated for this purpose in the budget and it is also hoped to save money on the acquisition of industrial land, for which $50,000 was allocated this year. Council hopes to give the Bay Street sewer priority next year.

GET ONE-THIRD BACK

Even if it costs the whole sum of $150,000 to buy up the bridge approaches, the Ontario government will give back $50,000 of this in subsidies.

Tree cutting at the suggested price of $418 is a different story. But by "juggling" the budget, council hopes to get the trees down. They were warned by the engineer that all the trees in question were "old trees, and liable to fall down and kill somebody," although the daughter when greeted this announcement gave the general impression that this statement was a little exaggerated.

Budget or no budget, council means to go ahead with a plan to resurface Sidney Street between Edward Street and Dixon Drive, and build a paved sidewalk alongside the road. The proposed new walk has been gravelled already. Cost of this project runs to $5,000. A suggestion that Sidney could stand some resurfacing from Dixon Drive to Francis Street, drew from public works' chairman, Joseph Gould the comment that a "skim over the surface to take out the bumps" might suffice.

Dufferin Ave., from Dundas Street West to Henry Street, will be curbed . . . the road re-constructed and paved and a storm sewer installed. The estimated cost is $5,000. . . .

As for Dufferin Avenue itself, Councillor Gould said the leak in the new water main in the two blocks of this street nearest Dundas St. W. should be located, and the street finished up, "within a week." Rayner Company workmen will endeavor to pin-point the elusive leak which has held up construction on the street for weeks, by digging up the street, making two divisions of the water pipe, capping each section and testing.

Workmen last night were busy finishing up the third coat of asphalt on Gilmour Hill and only "mopping up" operations remain here. The north section of Sidney Street has also been paved.

WILL GIVE REPORT

By October 10th, the town's consulting engineer, Jack Tomlinson, will report to council an estimate of "final costs," to the town for the work the Rayner Company has carried out on three main town streets this year, and will discuss completion dates for the project — time extensions requested by the company and his comments on the fact that Rayner has extended over the August 24th deadline for completing the job, without a formal application for a further extension. Such things as rainy days . . . considered in the light of "an Act of God," and other extenuating circumstances may save the Rayner Company folding money when it comes to paying a penalty of $200 a day for each day worked beyond the August deadline date.

A suggestion, made in a letter from the federal Department of Transport, that council send in a brief with suitable comments for a public meeting between the department and the Bell Telephone Company, drew from Councillor G. A. Weaver the comment that it was up to government experts to handle such things as a permissable level for company earnings. He felt, and council agreed, that it seemed "a little silly" to expect councils in smaller communities to have the complex knowledge to be able to comment intelligently on matters of this sort. A resolution, incorporating council's thought on this subject, will be forwarded to the minister of transport. However, Mayor James MacDonald suggested that council "go easy" in its comments, as he is even now trying to set up a deal with the department whereby $350,000 will be forthcoming from the same department towards the construction of a second bridge across the Trent.

First Services For New Rector Of Christ Church

Canon R. B. DeBlois Wright preached his first services at Christ Church in Belleville on Sunday. A record congregation of one thousand persons was in attendance at the services.

Music was under the direction of Mr. John Withers who directed the large men and boys choir in appropriate music at three services.

Canon Wright was assisted in the services by the Rev. James Smith, assistant priest at Christ Church and Mr. Herbert Cavalier, Diocesan Lay Reader attached to the parish as well as by members of the Parish Servers Guild.

Canon Wright chose as his morning text "And when He came into Jerusalem all the city was moved, saying who is this," taken from St. Mathew 21: 10.

Canon Wright said that the name of Jesus Christ is not so much written as it is plowed into the very pages of history. He continued by saying that Jesus is the mystery of a presence, a power and a personality, a mystery whose key is faith in the Divine nature of Christ and what He can do with a life committed to His care.

In the evening Canon chose as his text "Labor not for that which perisheth but for that which remains. "As Priest and people we do not communicate the gospel Jesus Christ communicates the gospel and we will neither stand in the way of this communication or else we serve as channels through which God communicates to His world," stated Canon Wright at the morning service and went on to develop this theme in his sermon by saying, "God meets me everywhere or I have never met Him, for He speaks to me in my newspaper as well as in My Bible and He seeks me out in the theatre, in the novel and in art as well as at the Holy Communion service"; "for everything is part of God's world."

A large number of new children joined the Sunday School at the morning services.

Frankford Man Says He Hit Pole, Mail Box

TRENTON — Early last Saturday morning Trenton Police reported that a vehicle had struck a hydro pole and newly constructed mail box at the corner of Wilkins Street and Lorne Avenue, knocking a transformer from the pole. They said the vehicle did not stop.

Damage to the pole, transformer and mail box was estimated at $700.

On Monday afternoon, Claude Westlake, aged 49, of Frankford came into the Trenton Police station and told inspector R. J. Rutherford that he had been driving the car involved in the accident, which occurred about 3.45 a.m.

Westlake received a cut and bruises to his nose and bruised ribs.

He is reported to have told the inspector that he had pulled his vehicle out to pass a parked truck and that he had lost control of his vehicle, as a result striking the pole and bouncing back into the mail box.

Damage to his car was estimated at $500. No charges have been laid.

The youth was taken to hospital by Rushnell Ambulance of Trenton suffering a fractured leg, a deep gash in the back of his head and a severely lacerated ear.

He underwent surgery and was reported by hospital authorities this morning as being in satisfactory condition. However they said he would have to remain in hospital for some time.

Police said the youth's bike was in collision with a car driven by Herman Luymes, R.R. 4, Trenton. The bike was found beneath the front end of the car while the injured youth was pinned beneath the rear of the vehicle. The car had, to be jacked up in order to free him.

The accident was investigated by Brighton OPP Corporal J. C. McKendry.

Complete First Rotation Stage For Canadians

NICOSIA (AP)—Thirty more Canadian soldiers arrived in Cyprus today to complete the first stage of rotation of Canada's UN peace-force contingent. Ninety - two troops flew home after six months' service on the island.

Rotation of 918 men of the 1,130-man Canadian force began eight days ago after the peace-force mandate was extended till the end of the year by the Security Council.

Eight RCAF Yukon transport planes brought in the new men on schedule and took the Cyprus veterans back to Canada.

The remaining 282 men stationed in the Nicosia zone headquarters will be replaced in the second stage of rotation over the next four weeks, starting Friday, the United Nations reported.

The latest arrivals were 15 members of the 1st Battalion, Canadian Guards, and 15 administrative support personnel.

Sixty-two men of the Royal Canadian Dragoons and 39 administrative personnel took the flight back to Fredericton and Trenton, Ont.

With the outgoing group was Major John A. Beament, 37, of Ottawa, commander of Delta Force, an armored unit of Canadians, Finns and Danes who have played a key part in the peace-keeping operations.

MINOR BULBS
(Crocus etc.)
They are smaller than the bulbs of tulips, hyacinths or daffodils and are usually planted earlier in the Fall. The most popular probably is the crocus. Other equally appealing little bulbs you should get to know better are: Galanthus (Snowdrop), Chionodoxa (Glory-of-the-Snow), Scilla (Squill), Muscari (Grape Hyacinth), Eranthis (Winter Aconite). They have as many uses as their varied forms suggest. They grow to different heights, and bloom at different times, from the end of winter until the early warmth of summer. They will amply reward anybody who takes them and tries them, especially as so many will multiply and spread without thought or care from the gardener, like lilies of the field.

The Soft Touch

In Toronto, ballet teachers and mothers are up in arms. The Kirov Ballet Company will present Cinderella in Toronto. It requires 66 children to augment the cast. A Russian dancer and teacher, Simon Semenoff, was sent to select the children. After doing so at an audition, he dropped some of them after practices. He shouted at the children. He made them nervous.

One ballet teacher did not think it was entirely Mr. Semenoff's fault. He asked for children with two years' instructions. In Russia that would mean classes six days a week, all year long. In Canada it means one class a week for seven months each year. Naturally there is a difference in results.

H. G. Archibald, the director of the Ontario Alcoholism and Drug Addiction Foundation, says that Ontario's liquor laws should be changed to allow parents to serve liquor to children under 21 in their homes. A Toronto paper sought the reaction of citizens. Of four questioned, two were opposed to the change. The other two favored it, "but only under supervision," "only when the parents are at home."

The two reports, appearing the same day, present an accurate picture of our attitude towards children. They must not be disappointed. Too much must not be demanded of them. They must be shielded from temptation. Then, when they reach their majority, parents can send them out into the world secure in the knowledge that they have been "given every advantage," that they "have had a happy childhood," that "we did everything we could for them."

Except, of course, to let them know that success is for the tough-minded, that life holds disappointments, that they will eventually have to accept responsibility for their own behavior.

All that can be learned easily and quickly once they have become adults.

Or can it?

Mark It With a Crescent?

The Canadian mint is working overtime now, to keep pace with the increased demand for Canadian coins. Partly caused by collectors and partly by the increase in vending machines, parking meters and other mechanized shakedown men, the coin shortage has forced the price of 1964 "mint sets," (special sets of uncirculated coins packaged for collectors), to a price of ten dollars in stores. From the mint, the sets sell for three dollars, if you can get them.

To rush at the mint is no great deal one new coin press has been installed in a washroom, possibly so the employees need lose no time from their work.

Considering the price collectors will pay for coins, one suggests the government is most lax in not providing mint-marks to show which press struck each individual coin. Surely an uncirculated 50¢ piece, with a mark showing it was struck in a washroom, would be worth fifty dollars to a collector. As a matter of fact, we have a spare washroom here, if anyone can lend us a press and the appropriate dies.

He Pays for Banks' Sins

Hal Banks, former president of the Seafarers' International Union of Canada, was convicted of conspiracy to assault Capt. H. F. Walsh. He was sentenced to five years in penitentiary, but appealed and was released on $35,000 bail. He has disappeared.

One of the men Banks was accused of conspiring with was Eldon Jack Richardson of Montreal. Richardson's trial was set for Nov. 3 and he was freed on $2,000 bail.

Now his bail has been cancelled and the RCMP have taken him into custody. The reasoning is that it was unwise to let Richardson remain free on such low bail when Banks had defaulted on much higher bail.

This sounds reasonable.

Still, there is no question but that this results in Richardson suffering for Banks' disappearance.

What About Garbage?

Thousands of holiday travellers walking on the sand dunes of Dorset are eroding the coast, according to a news dispatch from England. The erosion is occurring at the rate of about three yards a year.

They've got problems? Maybe we should send them some Canadian holiday travellers. If their performance around Ontario is any indication, the Canadians will leave enough garbage on the Dorset Beaches to get those three yards back, and then some.

No Person Greeted Stranger at Church

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

As a stranger in your city I attended one of your United Churches Sunday morning and enjoyed the service. I was met at the door by a friendly handshake and given a seat. The minister welcomed all newcomers to the service, whether students or otherwise, but after the service not one person took the trouble to extend a hand in greeting.

The church was well filled, even the gallery, but all, I presume, were in familiar surroundings. I am not writing this on my own behalf as I will go again to meet in fellowship with God, but some, more timid souls might not feel inclined to do so. This would never have happened in my own home church as everyone is greeted personally by the minister and many others greet all strangers, ask where they are from and if they are remaining Belleville, etc., and in general try to make them feel at home.

Just a suggestion for the people of Belleville, who I am sure, do not mean to be unfriendly, but if you attend church it might mean a great deal to that person if you extend a hand in greeting after church. If you were in a strange city would you not be glad to find a friendly place? After all "do as you would be done by" is always a good rule to follow. Hoping this will help some person to feel more comfortable in the future.

Not Everyone Needs the Same Diet

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

A booklet on "balanced diet" arrived in the mail today, and while I agree with its general intention (to promote better nutrition), I cannot agree with its assumption that everyone needs the same diet or that one body is pretty much like another.

I believe that the body has its own kind of intelligence: that is, it knows what it wants and needs better than any chart or scale drawn up abstractly. It is when we try to feed children (and ourselves) by some mechanical system of "nutrition" that the body rebels.

Some years ago, it was found that underprivileged children who were sibbling at classroom chalk were not being merely wilful and silly — they were suffering from a calcium deficiency, which the chalk helped satisfy, even though they didn't know it.

I have always required a great deal of sugar, but relatively little meat. The woman I live with is exactly the opposite; should we, then, have the same "balanced diet"? And what about the children, who have wildly different tastes — and, presumably, different metabolic systems?

One of the worst, and most common, of parental sins, it seems to me, is pushing certain kinds of food into children. A child instinctively knows how much if wants to eat, and how much of each kind of food. A child's bodily intelligence registures long before its mental powers.

Forcing the child to eat what the charts call a "balanced" diet is an outrage to the body — and the body often strikes back by setting up a permanent lifelong block against certain kinds of food. As I say, the mere sight of a turnip curdles my taste-buds with repugnance.

Nobody has to tell an animal what is best for it to eat; and nobody has to tell a child, either except possibly a rare child. It is true that some persons grow up with dietary deficiencies — but only where poor eating habits persist. And these habits are formed when food becomes too important to the parent, when it is not only a symbol but sometimes a substitute for love.

One of my children drinks copious quantities of water all day long, while another scarcely sips a mouthful. Of course, water is necessary and "good for you," but to prescribe six or eight glasses a day for a body that wants only one is an insult to the organism.

There are many things a child should not be allowed to choose, for many choices involve judgment, which comes only with maturity. Food requires wisdom of a different and more basic kind — and no parent can know what a child's body demands for growth, security and satisfaction. The loving tyranny of th. dining table can be a hundred times more injurious than the trip to the woodshed.

Nature's 'Trademark Canada' Might Make Acceptable Flag

By RICHARD JACKSON

From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Could this possibly be an idea for Parliament's Flag Committee, now into its third week of work?

Is there any design, anywhere in this broad and beautiful land, more Canadian than the "V" of Canada Geese in the steel-blue of the autumn sky . . . more inspiring, heartwarming than a "V" of northward winging Hookers high in the clear azure blue of early spring?

It has occurred to Arthur Phelps, the distinguished English professor now in busy retirement from the University of Manitoba and old Queen's, that the sight of the grey-white-light-tan in the wide blue yonder is just about as "all-Canadian" experience as anyone might wish, tremendously evocative for us all.

The thought came to him last weekend as he stood amid the autumn glory of his retreat at the Old Mill at Chaffey's Locks on the Rideau Lakes between the Capital and Kingston, and celebrating instead of that holiday high above, looked up to see that wonderful "V" sweeping southward in majestic formation that none but the Canada Goose can fly!

Professor Phelps is no wild-eyed crank, nor is he lobbying for a new flag design. But he points out that if the Flag Committee can find no distinctive design satisfactory to all Canadians, it might do worse than consider Nature's own "Trademark Canada" . . . that grey-white "V" on a field of sky blue.

HOT LINES AND COLD

Prime Minister Pearson is telling a delightful story about the fantastic instant communications network that an American President has always at hand-

Everywhere he goes, no matter how far or fast, this network is continuously plugged into phone, cable, and radio services around the civilized world.

At the presidential allow, of course, day and night, there is the "Hot Line" to the Kremlin.

The prime minister got his first eye-witness peek at this incredible communications net at work when he flew to Hyannis Port in the Spring of last year, just after the election, to confer with President Kennedy.

He took a plane-load of parliamentary newsmen with him, but the story of his experience with President Kennedy's "instant communications" didn't get out until he himself told it just the other day.

There they were sitting in Bobby Kennedy's big white bungalow in the family "compound" as they called it on the Cape Cod shore, talking of this and that, and finally, of plans to turn Campobello Island, just off the New Brunswick coast, into the international park it has since become.

Maybe they'd better check with James Roosevelt, suggested the President.

Good idea, agreed the prime minister, but where was he?

Somewhere out in California, replied the President.

Guess we don't get to talk to him then, suggested the prime minister.

WAS HE BILINGUAL?

Get him right away, said the President, confidently, adding that if Jimmy Roosevelt was anywhere in the country at all, or even on this earth, he'd be on the line in not more than five minutes.

And he was.

Of course, as the prime minister admits, he was suitably impressed.

And the president, he recalls, grinning, was understandably proud of his amazing communications net.

Anybody you'd like to call, the president asked the prime minister.

So the prime minister told him, yes, as a matter of fact, there was. And Mrs. Pearson hadn't come to Hyannis Port with him and he'd rather like to have a word with her.

Easy, beamed the president, just gives us a rough idea of where she is.

Some place in Montreal, reported the prime minister.

Nothing to it, laughed the President, have her on the line in a minute.

But he didn't.

Not in a minute, nor an hour, nor even the next day.

For the first time in White House and Summer White House history, the outstanding instant presidential communications network failed to function.

Nor, as far as the prime minister knows to this day ever find out why it blew a fuse on the Montreal call.

Maybe the president's signals officer wasn't properly bilingual when Montreal answered? It is an idea.

Ganglion Is a Small Cyst Usually on Back of Hand

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What are ganglions? I understand they occur after a wrist injury. Do they also occur in the fingers? How can they be prevented and what is the treatment? How do they differ from lipomas? — P. R.

A ganglion in this sense (the same word is also used for a certain part of a nerve tract) is a small cyst, a defect in the sheath of a tendon. The most usual location is on the back of the hand, but they can occur elsewhere.

An injury is thought to be the main factor in causing a ganglion but there are families in which ganglions may be involved. There is no known means of prevention.

Treatment of a ganglion is usually for cosmetic purposes — the lump spoils the appearance of the hand. Or the possessor thinks it does. Less often a ganglion may be painful and is treated or removed for that reason.

Since the ganglion is a cyst (a sac or cavity filled with fluid) aspiration (removal of the fluid through a hypodermic) is surgery the treatment. Sometimes an injury breaks the cyst open and lets it drain. But these cysts can recur, and the most certain method probably is surgical removal.

A ganglion is a fluid-filled surfair. A lipoma is a fatty tumor or growth beneath the skin.

Dear Dr. Molner: Does ..ic doulovenaur have anything to do with shingles? Please send me your booklet, "The Facts About Shingles." I enclose the required 15 cents in coin and an unstamped, self-addressed envelope. — A. P. S.

There's no connection. "Tic" is a painful inflammation of sensitive nerves of the face; shingles is a virus infection of a nerve trunk. Both are painful. Treatments are entirely different.

Dear Dr. Molner: After my uterus and tubes were removed, I had the belief that there would be no more interest in sex relations. But I find this is not so.

How can this be? — J. K.

You were misinformed. There is nothing unusual about you. In fact, you are entirely normal. Hysterectomy does not diminish interest in sexual relations. Of course, pregnancy is no longer possible.

* * *

Dear Dr. Molner: Please discuss a carcuncle of the urethra. My doctor was treating it with five percent silver nitrate and when it didn't respond he sent me to an urologist.

The specialist said my blood-sec was in good condition and not the cause of the trouble and that a carcuncle doesn't become malignant. I write this so that it wouldn't matter if I forgot about it, but he sent me back to my doctor with instructions that a stronger solution of silver nitrate.

After a few treatments it cleared up and I was dismissed. It later returned but we have moved to another state. Should I be concerned about it? Isn't it possible for any tissue to become malignant? Is surgery the only sure treatment? — Mrs. S. G.

A carcuncle is a polyp - like growth at the opening of the urethra. Yes, any tissue can become malignant. There's no reason to get rid of a carcuncle for that reason, any more than you would consider getting rid of your fingers to prevent cancer.

Carcuncles do not, just by existing there, become cancerous. They do, however, usually cause considerable distress at time of irritation, and permanent correction is removal by cautery or by surgery.

Need for treatment depends on pain or disturbance in urination. A fold of the membrane of the urethra may protrude and resemble a carcuncle, but this is a less painful condition.

Chaplin Paid With Caviar

Brantford Expositor

Although the Russians prob-ably use more proletarian word than "royalty," the payments they are making to Charlie Chaplin in return for part of his autobiography in a Soviet government newspaper will really be to the comedian's palate. Mr. Chaplin has just taken delivery of a shipment of caviar at his London hotel in return for copyright privileges on the story of his life in Russian.

The Soviet Communist - sponsored World Council for Peace sought to honor the famous screen star with a $14,000 peace prize, but he gave the money instead to the poor of Paris. Mr. Chaplin and his family will presumably eat the caviar contentedly themselves since, as Shakespeare implied in Hamlet, the pickled sturgeon-roe is not a dish for general consumption.

If Investia wishes to publish the chapters of his life, Mr. Chaplin might be agreeable to settling the cultural exchange if a case or two of vodka, since he must be well stocked with caviar. The little tramp in the baggy trousers and scrub-brush moustache never in his films touched any ideology but that of the little man striving for recognition. In his case it has come in unusual form from the press of a great dictator.

45 Women Strikers Sleep In Union Hall

OAKVILLE (CP) — Forty-five women strikers, marching to Toronto from Dunnville, Ont., to ask Premier Robarts to intervene in a labor dispute, spent the night at the union hall here Monday, halfway between Hamilton and Toronto.

The women, members of Local 343 of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers (Ind.), are on strike against Lanark Manufacturing Company at Dunnville. More than 400 women are involved in the strike for higher wages, better conditions and seniority rights at the plant.

Candidates on Eve of Final Drive in U.S. Election

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — Most of the major candidates marked time on the eve of the final drive toward the Nov. 3 United States election.

Monday was a political lull with the exception of Senator Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, Democratic vice - presidential candidate, actively forging for votes in California.

Both President Johnson and Senator Barry Goldwater of Arizona, Republican presidential candidate, indicated they will be hitting harder with four weeks to go in a campaign that so far, has featured far more vituperation than burning public interest.

Goldwater announced Monday night that if elected president he will ask former president Dwight D. Eisenhower to head a group of experts to visit South Viet Nam and report on the situation in Southeast Asia.

Goldwater said he is convinced that only "through a careful study by the best qualified experts this country has to offer can we meet the situation in South Viet Nam."

NUCLEAR HASSLE

Although it was a quiet day generally, some political sharp shooting ensued over the issue of who should control nuclear weapons.

A Republican task force named by Goldwater issued a report criticizing President Johnson for "over - extending" his control of nuclear weapons and assertedly impairing the confidence of NATO allies in U.S. willingness to defend Europe.

Johnson was busy much of the day with the president of the Philippines, Diosdado Macapagal.

In a speech to an Omaha, Neb., audience Monday night, Humphrey jibed at Goldwater's offer to the voters of "a choice, not an echo."

"In policies, that choice is a set of contradictory statements," Humphrey said. "Individualism is confused with self lshness, action with reaction, and bravery with bravado."

CITES CHOICE

The choice, he added, is "between the unquestionable dismay of the candidate's initial statements or the probably catastrophe of one of his later clarifications."

The Republican task force on nuclear matters, headed by former defence secretary Neil H. McElroy, recommended that the president assure NATO members that the NATO commander, an American, has the delegated authority to use tactical nuclear weapons in certain predetermined circumstances such as the death of the president.

The report cited Johnson's Sept. 16 speech in Seattle in which he said electronechanical devices had been placed on several weapons to guard against their unauthorized use.

This, the report said, is raising misgivings among NATO allies about U.S. willingness to defend Europe.

Vatican Council Asks Catholics To Meet With Other Christians

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican ecumenical council voted approval today of an unprecedented new program of common prayer and public meetings between Roman Catholics and other Christians.

The council, a gathering of Catholic prelates from around the world, agreed that Catholics everywhere must undergo a "conversion of heart" toward others to further the goal of Christian unity.

Council fathers, meeting in St. Peter's Basilica, approved a declaration that the church must be ready to reaffirm itself where errors may have occurred, and another declaration that Catholic teachings —both for priests and laymen —must conform to the principles of the Christian unity movement "to keep minds open to others."

Approval of these measures came in voting on the second chapter of the schema De Ecumenismo (On Unity), a fundamental goal of the council.

IS MAJOR TRIUMPH

Passage of the provisions in the chapter, the second of three in the schema, was another major triumph for forces within the church working to overcome the barriers that have divided Christians for centuries.

The first chapter, which outlines principles of unity, was approved Monday 1,559 to 300 with 209 others in favor with reservations. That chapter states that the church does share in responsibility for the discords that have split the Christian world.

The provisions and votes today were:

—Unity is a matter of concern for the whole church, and the church must be ready to reaffirm itself where necessary (2,120 to 46).

—Catholics must undergo a conversion of heart. Unless a new mental attitude to remove suspicions and misconceptions occurs the ecumenism movement will not make great progress. All Catholics "in some way have responsibility for the sins of disunity." (2,076 to 180).

—There is absolute need for public and private prayer for Christian unity and the possibility of common prayer with the separated brethren (1,872 to 228).

—Catholic training must conform to unity principles and Catholics are to cooperate with Orthodox, Protestants and Anglicans in all fields of public life to give "a common Christian witness to the world," (2,099 to 62).

After Plea Parking Ticket Fine Reduced

A Belleville man took a parking ticket to court today in an effort to have the city install a parking meter in a no parking zone on Front Street. The meter he wants will be installed, but not where he parked.

Les Kristov, a Belleville city hall employee, got the ticket August 31 in an unmetered area in front of the Boyce building near the north end of Front Street. He came to magistrate's court this morning with a chart to show the area, where he had been parked, just south of a "no parking between signs" zone and just north of a laneway. He told the court that he had parked by the stub of a pipe, where a meter had at one time been installed; and he showed evidence that the city parking authority decided Sept. 22 to install a meter in the immediate area (described in the parking authority minutes as "in front of the Hanson and Watson office)."

Magistrate T. Y. Wills pointed out that the Parking Authority meeting at which the decision to install the meter was made had been held after the parking offence. He found Mr. Kristov guilty, but reduced the fine to a dollar, from the two dollars indicated on the ticket. Mr. Kristov then told the court his motive for appearing in court was to force action on the meter.

There's a twist though, to the story. Joseph Miles, city meterman this morning told a reporter that the meter to be installed under the parking authority's order is not in the space where Mr. Kristov parked. The meter will go near the middle of the present "no parking between sign" zone, which Mr. Kristov conscientiously avoided.

You Don't Cuddle This Cat Says Owner of Ocelot

CALGARY (CP)—"You don't cuddle this cat."

Shirley Ireland was talking about the 27-pound ocelot she has for a pet in her apartment.

But she was quick to add that this ocelot, called Sheba, is really a "playful kitten."

It sharp - toothed animals, natives of Central and South America and resembling leopards, are sometimes called panther-cats or tiger-cats. In their wild state they catch birds for supper.

But Sheba is quite friendly. Miss Ireland says, and "also smart enough to open a closet door by standing on her hind legs and turning the knob with her forepaws."

"I've been told Sheba might revert to wildness but I don't believe it. She's just too affectionate. The largest thing she has killed since being in captivity is a fly."

The neighborhood dogs don't know this, however, and when Sheba is chained outside they come close enough for a good look and then take off.

The ocelot's regular diet is cat food which costs Miss Ireland $15 a month, but Sheba is "absolutely crazy about cheese" and loves raw eggs "the same way we would she eats only the yoke."

Miss Ireland says her friends have adjusted quite well to the ocelot which, when full grown, reaches a length of 3½ feet. But Sheba is afraid of people, especially men. "They make her nervous."

DEANERY MEETING

The Prince Edward Deanery meeting will be held in Christ Church and four volunteers were needed to assist at the morning service. Members were reminded of the tea and bazaar and a rummage sale was arranged.

The new rector, Canon R. B. Wright, spoke a few encouraging words relating to the importance of missionary work in the church.

The monies for fees, all purpose and travelling funds were authorized to be sent.

Next Monday being Thanksgiving Day there will be no meeting.

Mrs. J. Spencer and Mrs. H. Eaton served refreshments during the social half hour. The meeting was closed with prayer by Miss F. Reid.

U.C.W Meeting

SHANNONVILLE U.C.W.

The meeting of Shannonville, U.C.W. was held in the church hall on September 30th, with an attendance of 22. Mrs. Malcolm Little, president, welcomed all.

Mrs. William Rose, group leader, took the devotional. Since this was a thanksgiving service each member was asked to write down and tell during the prayer period the most important blessing during the year which with many was good health and family connections.

Mrs. Kenneth Juby and Mrs. Douglas Lazier assisted in the service.

A turkey supper was planned for October 7th in the church hall.

Mrs. Rose and her group served refreshments and a social hour followed. Next meeting is on November 4th, in the church hall.

Opening of Music School Dream Come True for Sister

By THERESE BERNIER

MONTREAL (CP) — For Sister Marie-Stephane the November opening of a 1,000-seat auditorium at her school of music is a dream come true.

"I never would have believed it would be given to me to see the realization of such a beautiful dream," says the 76-year-old bundle of energy who operates the Vincent d'Indy school of music in suburban Outremont.

The auditorium will be called Le Salle Claude Champagne after one of French Canada's greatest living composers, a teacher at the school for 25 years.

Music has always been near the centre of Sister Marie-Stephane's life.

She was born Helene Cote at St. Barthelemy in the Berthier region northeast of Montreal.

"My grandfather, a doctor, who set up practice in the region, was interested in music and interpreted works for the violin."

Her father, an award-winning farmer, was also musical.

She studied music under Octave Pelletier and Arthur Letondal, two of the brighter lights in French Canada's musical past. In 1908, at the age of 20, she entered the Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary Order and became the community's first musical director.

BEGAN IN BASEMENT

Her first studio was in the basement of a convent. Now the Vincent d'Indy school — named after a 20th - century French composer—is housed in a modern building in the lee of Mount Royal.

Students now come from North and South America, Europe, Hong Kong and Tokyo.

Most students become teachers themselves, but some take up concert careers. One example is Diane Mauger of St. Anicet-de-Richelieu, Que., winner of first prize at the Paris Conservatory.

The school now has 27 religious and 26 lay teachers.

In 1960 when she celebrated the 50th anniversary of her entry into religious life, the French government presented Sister Marie-Stephane with a medal in recognition of her work in music.

Through a year's stay in Paris, where she studied music, and for choosing the name of the French composer for the school, she had contributed to strengthening bonds between France and Canada, the French government said.

During the Montreal Festival of Music this year she was awarded a medal by the St. Jean Baptiste Society for helping spread French - Canadian culture.

The school was once named, prosaically, The Outremont School of Higher Musical Studies. But in 1951 it was changed to honor Vincent d'Indy on the 100th anniversary of his birth.

She wrote d'Indy's son asking for permission to use his father's name. He replied his father would have liked nothing better than to have a school of music named for him.

Need to Assist Women Confined to 'Diaper Prison'

TORONTO (CP) — Too little attention is being paid to the plight of intelligent women confined to the "diaper prison" and bored with their lives as wives and mothers, says a doctor in Vernon, B.C.

Dr. M. Lattey, in a letter in the current issue of the Canadian Medical Association Journal, says "too little attention has been paid to the effects of frustration on women with a high y developed intellectual capacities."

"I believe that such frustrations can be potent sources of emotional illness. Unless we can recognize this development in our patients, some of the best women in our society will fail to develop to the full and will become casualties to outmoded ideas."

Dr. Lattey says these women share a similar background. They have good brains and education and before marriage worked in interesting jobs. It was work they enjoyed, wanted to do and it gave them satisfaction.

After marriage the demands of caring for a home and children "may satisfy her reproductive instincts but fail to satisfy the requirements of her intellectual abilities."

They become frustrated and bored, develop headaches, nervousness, anxiety, digestive upsets and gynecologica. disturbances; they have the feeling that life is passing them by and they are doing nothing worthwhile, the doctor says.

"It is no use trying to make these women accept the role of being 'only a housewife.' They have already attempted this and found it wanting. They find housework and the sole company of small children lonely and boring. These women need work to challenge their abilities."

Successful Living

Where There Is Love There Is Hope for Marriage

DEAR DORIS — After five months of marriage my husband told me he didn't want me anymore. I came home to stay with my parents. I have no financial security and as I am pregnant I am not able to work.

Is my husband obliged to support me and my expected baby, since I left him, could I sue him? The reason I left him was because I hated living with his mother. He promised to fix up our own house but nothing came of it.

I still love him but would not go back with him until we have our own home. Am I wrong to think this way? — CONFUSED.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR CONFUSED — Life with ma-in-law is hardly an ideal way to start married life. But having started, have you given your man long enough to provide a separate home for you?

Trying for support away from him — when you haven't accepted what he offered — is useless. Since you love him there should be some hope for arbitration. And that's reason enough for talking things over with a counsellor, social worker, minister or friend.

• • •

DEAR DORIS — I heard a conversation that if a person has money in the bank and anything happens to them, the next of kin cannot claim it but the government does.

Is this true? If so, it's quite unfair because expenses are very high whether a person is alive or dead. — BLIGHTY.

• • •

DEAR BLIGHTY — That's for sure. And your informant is wrong. The bank account is held untouchable until settlement is made of any succession duty. Then it's released. But did you know that according to federal law there's an exemption of $1,500 made available upon death to take care of last illness and funeral expenses?

• • •

(Don't suffer in silence. Do something about your particular human problem. A letter to Doris can get you some help.)

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

SIDEWALK MANEUVERING

How are your walking manners?

Do you waver, drag or dart? Do you walk a straight line, stop dead or double-park on the sidewalk?

In other words, are you a menace to your fellow pedestrians?

The other day I gingerly paced behind a stout woman carrying two equally stout packages which she used with stoic determination to carve a path for herself on the crowded street.

A male friend of mine has made a vow he'll never walk directly behind a woman.

"Maybe it's the high heels which prevent straight navigation, or their haircos, which call off side vision, but the gals seem to walk at angles," he said.

He described a personal but typical experience.

"I'm walking behind this woman, who seems to be heading due north, my direction, when for no reason at all she veers off at a 45-degree angle. It will lead her nowhere, except to the curb, where I'm sure she sees I not want to go. But in veering, she cuts me off and I too find myself on the curb where I don't want to be either.

COUNTERACTION

"I decide on counteraction. This requires nifty footwork and quick stopping quickly on my toes, holding the position for a few seconds until she is safely on her newest detour and then continuing on my straight course. But I sprained my ankle performing that maneuver, and I now find it safer to keep at least six feet behind a woman walker."

On the other hand, a woman friend claims that men are always bumping into her and walking on without an apology.

"That's bad enough," she says, "but as they pass they look at me as if I purposely got in their way."

Furthermore, she claims, they have a habit of walking three and four abreast and not letting other pedestrians pass.

According to my research, both sexes agree that of all walking types, the one to fear most is the person who stops dead and piles up traffic behind him. Or her.

REASONS FOR STOPPING

In order of frequency, the reasons for women or men stopping are 1) she sees something in a store window she must look at; 2) she's walking in the wrong direction; 3) he forgot something at the office; and 4) the walker meets an old friend.

It's easy to exercise good walking manners, if you keep in mind that there are others sharing the sidewalk.

If you're going to shift direction, walk abreast or sprint, remember to pause and size up the pedestrian flow around you. Your good sense will tell you if you are going to cause inconvenience to others.

As for the girl who suddenly heads for the curb, there is probably no cure except a pair of square heels. And some solid home work on walking the straight and narrow.

Soviet Women Will Visit In Canada

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three women from Moscow and a translator from Ottawa are repaying a visit six Canadian women made to the U.S.S.R. last year.

The visitors are members of the Soviet Women's Committee. Their delegation, headed by a former deputy mayor of Moscow, will visit seven Canadian cities in two weeks, exchanging ideas on preservation of world peace.

"We expect a sincere exchange of opinions with Canadians — particularly with leaders of women's organizations," said spokesman Mrs. Zoya Mikoyeva. In an interview Monday.

The reason for the substitution was the death in Moscow of the husband of a woman originally scheduled to accompany them.

With Mrs. Mironova on the trip are Mrs. Marina Bantsekins and Mrs. Natalia Sladkevich. Meeting them here was Mrs. Ludmilla Dolinitsya, a foreign language teacher whose husband is with the Soviet embassy in Ottawa. She has been in Canada for a year.

Salmon Loaf Hot or Cold

by Mary Moore

The Salmon Loaf I told you I was working on is ready.

I don't know why I made such a fuss over something which turned out to be so simple. It even has an added dividend; it's wonderful cold with mayonnaise. I can see it in my mind's eye on many a beautiful buffet table served hot with a creamy egg sauce (see below) or ice cold, cleverly decorated with piped-on mayonnaise.

I hope my Calgary friend, Marguerite H. who asked me for it originally approves.

DELUXE SALMON LOAF
(serves 5):

The cottage cheese gives this loaf a smooth texture and piquant flavor.

1 tablespoon butter, 4 teaspoons flour, 1-3 cup milk, one 1-lb. can red salmon, skin and bones removed but liquid reserved, 1-3 cup fine breadcrumbs, 1 egg, 1 cup cottage cheese (½-lb.), 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 1 teaspoon green onion flakes, ½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, ¼ to ½ teaspoon salt (use ½ teaspoon if you intend to serve salmon loaf cold).

In a large saucepan make a small amount of thick white sauce by melting the butter, stirring in the flour until blended, then the milk until thickened. Add salmon, from which you have removed skin and bones, and salmon liquid. Stir in then add all remaining ingredients, stirring to mix. Line bottoms of buttered loaf pan with buttered wax paper (I used one 8½ x 4½ x 2¾") or small round pyrex casserole, and turn mixture in. Stand it in shallow pan containing 1" hot water and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 1 hour. Remove from waterpan and bake 25 minutes longer to make loaf a little firmer. Remove from oven and let stand 10 minutes before turning out. Loosen sides with knife, invert serving dish over loaf, then carefully turn out. Peel off wax paper. Garnish with a tomato and lemon wedges and pass Creamy Egg Sauce: (1½ cups): Two tablespoons butter, 4 teaspoons flour, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1¼ cups milk, 3 large or 2 small egg yolks. Melt butter, stir in flour and salt, then milk until thick. Remove from heat and stir in beaten yolk. Return to heat and cook, stirring for 30 seconds. A perfect sauce for this Salmon Loaf.

NOTE:

1) If this loaf is to be served cold, cool it to room temperature and store in refrigerator, covered, until serving time. 2) If you need this for a buffet party of 10 or 12 double the amounts and bake in a larger buttered loaf pan or round baking dish (6-cup size or larger) and increase baking time and be sure loaf pan is firm at centre. If to be served cold, provide genuine mayonnaise for an accompaniment. Mayonnaise could be piped around base and top could be garnished with sliced stuffed olives.

Susanna's Family Fare

Dear Susanna:

"How tangled up can things get!" This used to be my husband's favorite remark whenever he looked for something in our sewing basket drawer or tool box. That was before I hit on the idea of storing long wriggly items in hollow rollers.

Now electrical appliance cords, extra lengths of clothes line or even a child's plastic skipping rope are folded several times lengthwise and stuffed into the centre of cardboard tubes — the type of which wax paper is wound.

The drawer or storage chest is always neat, and if you take an extra minute and label the roller it saves time and nerves when you need something in a hurry.

I even use little rollers that have held other kinds of paper, for such items as a measuring tape or the odd piece of copper wire — although what I'll ever know. — Mrs. Norman Brewer.

Why Mrs. Brewer! No self-respecting odds and ends drawer would ever be without a length or two of old wire! — SUSANNA.

Dear Susanna:

When boiling apples I drop a few cinnamon candies in the water. The apples turn a beautiful red and are seasoned as well.

While experimenting with nail polish I've found that it will adhere much longer if I apply pure vinegar to my nails, (just wipe it over) let it dry, and then add a coat or two of polish.

I would be interested too, Susanna, if you had an idea or two for strengthening brittle nails that tend to break and peel. — Tillie Hasbon.

Although there are numerous preparations on the market now, with names like grow fast and long nail, I've really found that the age-old remedies are the best: Try to keep nails and cuticle soft by frequent applications of hand lotion or cream; keep a nail file handy to smooth out any little nicks as they occur; finally, supplement your diet with the addition of a daily gelatine tonic or two.

These powders go down much more easily if dissolved in a glass of apple juice — and the extra quantity of vitamin you'll get from fortified apple juice will be a nice bonus to your system too! Nothing like getting all charged up for those long winter months ahead! — SUSANNA.

(If you have any hints for running a successful household — or any problems — write to Susanna, c/o this newspaper).

A Century of Cheese

This is Cheese Centennial Year, celebrating the 100th anniversary of the first commercial manufacture of Canadian cheddar cheese. Many festivities across the country are marking this historic milestone. In honor of this year, an authentic cheese factory of a century ago was reconstructed and put into operation at Upper Canada Village, Morrisburg, Ontario. Don't miss touring it when next you visit there.

Just Imagine!

One of the world's first huge shredders was a Canadian one, made in an Ontario factory in 1893. The famous "Little Wonder" of cheese tipped the scales at 4000 pounds and was the main attraction at the New York State Fair that year. But the largest cheddar of modern all, dubbed "The Canadian Mite" was made in 1892 in a factory at Perth, Ontario. Its exhibition at the Chicago World's Fair of that day, came to grace the weight of 22,000 pounds! It was 8 feet high, 22 feet in diameter—and it required over 6 million pounds of milk from 10,000 cows to make it!

Cheese Consumption Today

Canada is still a great cheese producing country and our per capita consumption is climbing every year, standing at over 8 pounds per person today. However, we've still a long way to go to catch up to France's approximate 23 lbs. per person per year, the Netherland's 21 lbs. and Norway and Denmark's 20 lbs.

Then As Now . . .

Cheese was a staple at every meal in the days of Canada's pioneers, and in today's modern scheme all good things to eat, cheese is still playing a stellar role in meals and snacks from morning to night. Besides, today's homemakers know that cheese is a real bargain both for its flavor and nutrition. It's versatile too, since it goes to all the best parts of, yet when teamed up with other staple foods, it provides meal-planning at penny-saving prices. To paraphrase the poet . . . cheese, like love, complies it.

Free Cheese Recipes

If you'd like some cheese casserole recipes to use now in Cheese Festival Month and on through winter, just drop us a note at the address given below. We also have a free leaflet called "Guide to the World of Canadian Cheese" which you might wish to ask for at the same time.

Income Tax Explained

By C. A. MILLER

For income tax purposes there is marked distinction between a truck driver and . transport driver. The transport driver is allowed to claim his expenses for meals and lodging while away from his employer's place of business or the metropolitan area in which it is located, providing he is away for periods in excess of 12 hours. To qualify for such a claim the driver must work for an employer whose principal business is the transportation of goods or passengers. Of course, if the employer pays all the expenses, then the driver has no further claim.

If the driver is given an expense allowance and such an allowance does not cover his actual expense outlay, then the allowance received should be included as income and the actual expenses deducted. In all cases the claim for expenses should be verified by receipts. If the driver has a regular run such as from Hamilton, Ontario to Winnipeg, it would only be necessary to submit receipts for one trip. It will assist both the driver and Income Tax Department if the driver completes a TL2 form and attaches it to his return.

The ordinary truck driver who does not leave the city or metropolitan area where his employer's business is located is not allowed to claim any expenses.

If a transport driver has no regular run, but goes to different cities and is known in the trade as a tramp driver, he should state this on his return as in these cases the expenses are always somewhat higher than those of the driver with a regular run.

For personal replies pertaining to income tax problems, please enclose a self-addressed five cent stamped envelope and 25 cents coin for each question you wish answered.

* * *

QUESTION: My brother and I both work for a large trucking company. He is on long cross-country runs and I pick up freight around the city and take it to the central terminal. Why is he allowed meal expenses, and my claim is always thrown out?

ANSWER: To be allowed meal expenses, you must be away from the city for over 12 hours.

* * *

QUESTION: I drive a transport and am sent to various places in Canada and the U.S.A. It is almost impossible to get receipts for all my road expenses for meals and lodgings. Is there any way I can claim them without receipts?

ANSWER: Keep a small note book in your possession and enter any expense with the date and place. Total each page and carry it forward to the top of the next one. Total your book at the end of the year, and attach it to your return. If the amount spent appears reasonable it will be allowed.

Lord Thomson's Boyhood Ambition to Be Millionaire

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP)—If Canadian-born publisher Lord Thomson were stranded on a desert island, he would be a good deal less successful than he is in the newspaper jungle. In fact, he probably wouldn't survive at all.

Appearing recently as guest on the BBC radio program Desert Island Discs, in which a different celebrity each week answers questions and chooses eight gramophone records to be shipwrecked with, Lord Thomson confessed he had no practical skills and that the loneliest of castaway life would kill him if it went on too long.

Interviewer Roy Plomley asked the 70-year-old millionaire if he would be able to scratch a living from the land. "I think it would be a very, very sparse living," said Thomson.

"A Canadian who can't fish!" exclaimed Plomley.

"Well frankly, it takes too long . . . unless you could pull the fish out every minute, I can't waste the time."

COLLECTS LOMBARDO

Thomson called his choice of records "a case of nostalgia." Apart from the Blue Danube Waltz, they were all popular songs of the wartime era and the 1930s, including numbers by Vera Lynn, the Cockney comedians Flanagan and Allen and two dance records by Canadian bandleader Guy Lombardo.

"I'm not educted in music," said the press lord, explaining that songs like Underneath the Arches and A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody recalled pleasant periods in his life.

"Cruising Down the River" for instance, reminded him of early days in Northern Ontario, "a wonderful country of lakes and rivers."

Between records, Thomson reminisced about his parents—his Somerset-born mother emigrated young to Canada and his father was third-generation Canadian of Scots ancestry—and about his beginnings in the newspaper industry.

His boyhood ambition was to be a millionaire—"there was never any doubt in my mind about that." His first newspaper purchase was The Timmins Press in 1934.

Asked his recipe for making money, Thomson replied: "You must be completely dedicated and completely ambitious. Maybe you become a one-track mind, and maybe you miss a lot out of life . . . but this is satisfaction to me."

WORK CONTINUING

At 70, he has no intention of relaxing or retiring. Now that he is entitled to sit in the House of Lords, he plans to take an active part in the government of Britain—"I think it's my responsibility."

Plomley asked Thomson about his religious faith—"I try to model my life on the Golden Rule; do unto others as you would have them do onto you" —and about his favorite read ing.

"Thrillers, by the dozen," replied Thomson. "Of course, I might say too I very much enjoy reading balance sheets—they're a favorite reading of mine."

If he could take one book or set of volumes to his island, he would choose the Encyclopedia Britannica. "One could read it for years and still be learning new things, interesting things."

ine riding, Saguenay and Montreal Verdun, a traditionally Liberal seat where Claude Wagner, 39-year-old solicitor-general, was elected.

A former sessions court judge, Mr. Wagner was named to the cabinet last month with the task of ridding the province of organized crime.

Standings in the 95-seat legislative assembly now are Liberal 84, Union Nationale 10, Independent one.

The Liberals now have won all nine byelections called since they took office in 1960.

One of the casualties in the byelection was Bernard Dumont, former Social Credit member of Parliament who ran as an Independent Creditiste in Dorchester and finished a poor third.

Mr. Dumont ran despite a decision by le Ralliement des Creditistes to refrain from entering byelections until general elections are called.

"Dumont learned his lesson," said Ralliement Leader Real Caouette. The outcome was not an indication of waning support for the Creditistes, Mr. Caouette said. Parties in office generally win byelections, he remarked.

Mr. Dumont trailed behind Francis O'Farrell, a 44-year-old school teacher, and Marcel Blais, the Union Nationale candidate.

Mr. O'Farrell picked up 7,038 votes, Mr. Blais 5,608 and Mr. Dumont 1,913 with only one poll left to be heard from.

In Matane, down the St. Lawrence River from Quebec City, insurance agent Jacques Bernier won for the Liberals, receiving 9,027 votes to 7,432 for Jean Blanchet of the Union Nationale. Onesime Caouet, an independent, had 428 votes.

Pierre Maltais, a criminal lawyer from Baie Comeau, won in a two-way fight in Saguenay riding over Ernest Bruyere, a school commission official. He received 9,769 votes to 6,845 for Mr. Bruyere with 145 of 176 polls heard from.

In Verdun, Mr. Wagner breezed in with 18,240 votes against 8,191 for Arthur Therien, Union Nationale, and 135 for Henri Paquette, an Independent.

The byelections were the first fought under the new election act which gave the vote to 18-year-olds. It also put strict limits on parties' and candidates' expenses and provided part payment of some candidates' expenses by the government.

Folk Singers Mistaken for Separatists

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — A group of French - speaking folk singers and dancers here to perform for the Queen were mistaken for separatist demonstrators when they went out for an evening "stroll" Monday night.

About 20 members of the Les Feux - Follets, most of them from Montreal, found themselves being trailed by police when they went out sight-seeing in downtown Charlottetown.

The press centre for the royal visit here received reports from pedestrians that the youngsters were "chanting slogans in French."

City police received telephone reports of "a mild demonstration." Armed services security forces, alert for any emergency, were also notified.

Gilles Rainville of Montreal, leader of the group's orchestra, laughed when questioned by a reporter.

"We are here to perform for the Queen and we are happy to do so."

He said the youngsters were singing French - Canadian folk songs.

The Feux-Follets are featured in the royal variety performance tonight at the Fathers of Confederation Memorial Theatre.

Police said the high-spirited youngsters were doing no harm, and were simply kept under watch "as any group would be" as part of their normal duty.

GROSS NATIONAL PRODUCT INCREASE CONTINUES — Canada's Gross National Product advanced one per cent during the second quarter of 1964 and was estimated to be running at an annual rate of $46,000,000,000. This compared to a first-quarter rate of $45,512,000,000. The 1963 average was $43,007,000,000. The Gross National Product is the value of all goods and services produced in Canada. other couples. They had all met before.

The Queen's face was not that immobile mask of duty, showing no emotion, that she wears on solemn occasions. Nor was it the fixed smile of the honored guest stepping into unfamiliar surroundings.

What it was was the meaningful smile of genuine pleasure at seeing old familiar faces — a spark of recognition, an appreciative word of thanks and good wishes, mutually exchanged between hosts and guests.

The Queen first visited Canada as Princess Elizabeth in 1951. She came to Ottawa to open Parliament on Thanksgiving Day in 1957, en route to Jamestown, Va., and Washington. She did a cross - country tour in 1959.

There were critical comments in those old days about her strict observance of social protocols, her unbending adherence to formality, and her obvious nervousness on state occasions. Jaunty Prince Philip was held up as the example of informality.

During Monday's arrival ceremony, and later while embarking on the royal yacht, there was virtually none of this. Some, who have followed her royal visits to Canada closely, detected more of Prince Philip's manner in the Queen's bearing—though, with the late Queen Mary's training, it is still altogether queenly.

The arrival ceremony for formal and militarily precise.

A fanfare from the RCAF's Coronation Trumpets reverberated through the hangar. The Queen inspected a perfectly-drawn - up guard of honor. She signed the guest book and received from a child a formal bouquet of pink and red flowers to set off the royal blue of her ensemble.

Children from the RCAF station school — six, seven and eight-year-olds—had a bank of seats on the Queen's right when she stepped off the plane.

They screamed and yelled at the earlier arrival of Governor-General Vanier. He's the man who uses his vice-regal prerogative to declare a school holiday whenever he comes to town.

But they reserved their really ear-piercing screams for the Queen, waving their little Red Ensigns vigorously.

Canada's united campaigns, on the average receive 40-45% of all contributions from corporate gifts, 50-55% from executive and employee gifts, with remainder from miscellaneous sources.

Minister Gives Character Evidence in Chatham Case

CHATHAM (CP) — A United Church minister from eastern Ontario testified Monday he did not believe Rev. Russell D. Horsburgh encouraged teen-agers to have sexual relations in his church.

"If I did I would not be here," he said.

He was testifying during the 10th day of the trial of Rev. Horsburgh, minister of Park Street United Church who has pleaded not guilty to eight charges of contributing to juvenile delinquency.

The witness was one of 12 character witnesses, including an educationist, two ministers and two lawyers, called by defence counsel Cyril Perkins.

The young minister said he supported Mr. Horsburgh because he was convinced that what the Chatham minister was attempting to achieve was done "in Christ's name."

DESCRIBES MINISTRY

He described Mr. Horsburgh's ministry as "a ministry of reconciliation of young people."

Twelve other men and women who had known Mr. Horsburgh when he was minister at Waterloo, Hamilton and Sudbury, all testified that Mr. Horsburgh's sexual morality was never questioned in those places.

They praised Mr. Horsburgh's ministry and complimented him on youth programs he instituted or improved at their churches.

Mr. Horsburgh was minister of First United Church in Waterloo from 1958 to 1960.

The witness said a majority of the 1,150 members of the congregation supported Mr. Horsburgh, although a vociferous minority did not.

SPLIT IN CHURCH

Two witnesses from Waterloo agreed with Crown Attorney Blake Ward that there had been a split in the church when Mr. Horsburgh left, but an elder from First United Church said Mr. Horsburgh left under his own volition and not because he was requested to do so.

One of the Waterloo witnesses said some members of the congregation objected to Mr. Horsburgh advertising extensively in newspapers.

She said one of the series he was advertising was on love and marriage and added: "There are a lot of conservative people in Waterloo."

Mr. Horsburgh "did a lot of sensational things," she said.

Fifty - five witnesses have testified both for the prosecution and defence during the last two weeks.

Urges Change In R.C. Views On Marriage

LONDON (Reuters) — Dr. Michael Ramsey, Archbishop of Canterbury, said Monday an alteration of the Roman Catholic attitude toward marriage with Protestants is urgently necessary for better relations between the two churches.

The spiritual head of the Church of England told the Foreign Press Association here intense pressure on the conscience of the non-Roman Catholic, required to sign a declaration that the children of the marriage would be brought up as Roman Catholics, causes "very great distress."

"We do not expect from the Vatican (ecumenical) council a radical alteration of Roman Catholic doctrines," said Dr. Ramsey, "but we hope for a shift in the proportions of doctrines, so that the Roman Church places relatively more stress on the great doctrines it shares with all other Christians and relatively less stress on the modern doctrines peculiar to itself."

Ann Landers

Tasteless Remarks Often Thoughtless, Not Malicious

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My husband and I have been married for eight years. Our little boy is almost five. We would love to have another child but I've been having a lot of trouble getting pregnant. Women who have not experienced the frustration can't imagine how depressing it is.

This afternoon I attended a church auxiliary meeting. The following remarks were made to me:

"Why are you so lazy? Why don't you have another baby?"

"My daughter is three years younger than you are and she is way ahead of you. Her fourth is due next month."

"I certainly hope you are trying, my dear. It's unfair to the child when you raise just one."

I went home from the meeting in tears and had to take a tranquilizer. Will you please tell me how to deal with people who make such comments? — CAN'T COPE.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR CAN'T COPE — People who make such tastaless remarks are tactless, four-door clods. You should understand, however, that they mean no harm. This is their way of showing friendly interest. Meantime, why don't you invite all well-meaning flea brains to submit their sure-fire recipes?

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Disguise this letter as best you can but please print it. I can't have your answer coming to my home.

My wife, Emily, was raised by a relative who has a great deal of money. Emily stands to inherit everything because this relative is on the outs with everybody in the family. She never leaves her home and doesn't like "strangers" so Emily must go there everyday to cook, clean the house and do the laundry. When the relative is sick (which is a good part of the time) Emily carries meals to her on a tray.

We haven't had a vacation in five years because Emily can't leave. Our two children don't get enough of their mother's time and attention and they show it. Emily looks thin and nervous and we are beginning to quarrel over trifles.

Last night I asked her to give it up and tell her relative she must hire help. She replied, "Not after all I've put up with. It can't be much longer."

I need your opinion. — PRESCRIPTION PLEASE.

DEAR PRESCRIPTION — The whole deal smells like last week's fish.

If your wife does inherit the bundle would it be worth a damaged marriage, neglected children, poor health and the knowledge that she catered to a demanding and irrational woman for years in order to cash in? And how would you feel, knowing that you let her do it?

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — It's much too early to be thinking about Christmas but a certain somebody in this office can think of nothing else.

Our office has an annual Christmas party at which everyone gets gassed. This has been going on for as long as I have been here, which is 15 years, and the last few Christmases I've been in charge of arrangements.

The man who played Santa Claus at last year's party made a good thing of it for himself. He kissed each of the girls (and no peck either) as he handed them their gifts.

He asked me this morning if he can be Santa again this year — even offered to rent his own suit. What shall I say? — BEEDIE.

DEAR BEEDIE — A holiday kiss through three feet of beard can't do much harm — or much good either, for that matter.

Let the old boy have his annual thrill. (It sounds as if he's due for retirement soon.)

• • •

When necking becomes petting, watch out! To learn how the smart girl keeps her dignity and her boy friend, send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "Necking and Petting — And How Far To Go," enclosing with your request 25c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Five Striking Printers Held, Window Broken

TORONTO (CP) — Five men were arrested Monday after a window of a suburban Willowdale publishing firm was broken during a demonstration by about 250 striking printers and mailers from Toronto's three daily newspapers.

Charged with obstructing police and causing a disturbance were Kenneth David Osborne, 30, Bruce Fraser MacMurchy, 47, Robert John Goodfellow, 34, John Louis Martin, 28, and David John Robins, 30, all striking employees of the Toronto dailies. Robins was also charged with assaulting police.

The five later appeared in court and were remanded to Friday on $300 cash bail each.

The demonstrators were members of Local 91, International Typographical Union (CLC), and were dispersed by a special police squad set up last week to deal exclusively with problems in connection with the strike, which began July 9.

The police were called in after a rear window of The Enterprise, a weekly newspaper, was broken by a rock. Union officials said The Enterprise is setting advertisements which have been appearing in Toronto's three dailies.

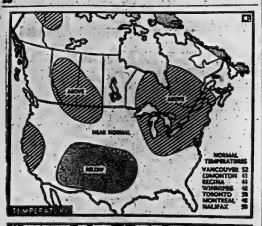
Woman Admits Knowing Man Who Bit Hubby

NEW YORK (AP) — Police said a 26-year-old housewife admitted Monday that it was a former boyfriend and not an unknown assailant who stabbed her husband repeatedly Sunday as hundreds stood by in Times Square.

Mrs. Sandra Zais at first told police that her husband, Joseph, 28, was stabbed by an unknown Negro who had tried to force his attentions upon her in the busy midtown area.



Assistant Chief Inspector Sanford D. Garleck, acting chief of detectives, said Mrs. Zais has admitted that the assailant was a former boyfriend whose identity also was known to her husband.

Hammond said the water was rough "so we rowed to an island about two miles from shore."

Sir Sam Fought Two-Front War, Vs. Huns and Interfering British

By BEN WARD

OTTAWA (CP)—It was the morning of Aug. 3, 1914, and Col. Sam Hughes, minister of militia in the Borden government, sat in his office blazing with anger. On the desk lay the latest dispatches about the European war threat.

"They're going to skunk it," he cried, banging the papers with his fist. "England is going to skunk it! Morley and Burns have resigned from the cabinet as a protest against participating in the war and they seem to be looking for an excuse to get out of helping France."

Col. Hughes began pacing up and down the office in mounting frustration.

"By God, I don't want to be a Britisher under such conditions. To think they would want to go back on France!"

He abruptly ordered a startled aide to go and remove the Union Jack from the top of military headquarters. A while later, cooler heads persuaded him to raise it again and await more news.

Next night the word arrived that England had declared war on Germany. As part of the Empire, Canada was automatically in the fight and Sam Hughes settled down to it with zest.

FELT CHEATED OF VC

Fifty years later this strange man who led Canada's military effort in the opening two years of the First World War is still a subject of controversy. A few maintain he was brilliant; some say he was mad. But none deny that Sam Hughes was honest, energetic—perhaps too much so—and dedicated.

Before his forced resignation in 1916 he became perhaps the most prominent national figure of the war, certainly the most-talked-about. He was knighted by the king, pushed himself to the rank of honorary lieutenant-general and won a large measure of public acclaim. After the war he reaped almost universal criticism.

Sir Sam, as he is best remembered, was born in 1853 of Scottish - Irish - Huguenot ancestry on a farm in Durham County which borders Lake Ontario east of Toronto. His maternal great - grandfather was one of Napoleon's generals at Waterloo; his father's family shed blood for Wellington.

As a boy of 17 he served during the Fenian Raids of 1870 as a private in the 45th (Victoria) Infantry Battalion and rose in that militia unit to become commanding officer in 1897. He waggled his way into the Speer War over the objections of military chiefs and later claimed he was cheated out of not one but two Victoria Crosses.

BOUGHT WEEKLY

For a time he taught school and by the age of 32 had saved enough to buy The Warder, a weekly newspaper in Lindsay, Ont. Six years later he ran a Conservative candidate for the federal seat at North Victoria, he lost, then won a byelection the following year, 1892.

When Robert Borden's Conservatives won the 1911 election, unseating the Liberal government of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Sam Hughes was named minister of militia, a post corresponding to today's defence portfolio.

In his memoirs written in 1929, Sir Robert confessed that he had misgivings about the appointment but gave in to pressure.

". . . I was extremely doubtful as to including Hughes," he wrote. "While he was a man of marked ability and sound judgment in some respects, his temperament was so peculiar and his actions and language so unusual on many important occasions that one was inclined to doubt his usefulness as a minister.

". . . During about half the time he was an able, reasonable and cordial colleague, working with excellent judgment and indefatigable energy; for a certain other portion of the time he was extremely excitable, impatient of control and almost impossible to work with; and during the remainder of the time his speech were so eccentric as to justify the conclusion that his mind was unbalanced."

'HE IS CRAZY'

Sir George Foster, deputy finance minister, put it more bluntly in his diary: "There is only one feeling as to Sam, that he is crazy."

Whatever the post-mortems, in 1914 Sam Hughes was an impressive figure. He was 61, tall and husky with a shock of white hair. In appearance he looked much like C. D. Howe, the strong man of a war yet to come. He neither drank nor smoked and had a national reputation as a temperance fanatic and a militant Orangeman.

Sir Sam's initial compulsion was to ensure that Canadians were the first Empire units to reach England but while in a masterpiece of organization he created the giant Valcartier army camp near Quebec City almost overnight and in October, two months after war began, 31,000 Canadian troops landed at Plymouth. They were under-trained and poorly equipped but they were first there.

At Valcartier the war minister ran everything, tongue-lashing anyone who offered the slightest opposition to his plans. He even swore at the Anglican bishop of Montreal. On the other hand, he lavished praise and promotion on the spot for work he considered well done.

ABUSED OFFICERS

Before the convoy sailed Sir Sam handed out a 900-word Napoleonic farewell speech, dashed to New York and caught a fast liner to greet the troops on the other side. For a time he talked about taking command in the field but the British war office wasn't having any of that.

Soon complaints were flooding into Ottawa about his abusive treatment of officers and officials.

One officer beseeched Borden to "get rid of this objectionable cad," reporting that Sir Sam cursed senior commanders in front of their men and even with ladies present.

Embarrassing flaws in equipment began to pop up.

One of the minister's woman secretaries had developed a trench shovel that would double as a shield for snipers. On Sir Sam's initiative 25,000 "MacAdam shovels" were bought in Philadelphia for $1.35 each. Sent to England with the 1st Division, they proved to be ineffective as shields, unfit for digging and too heavy to carry.

When orders came to flood British trenching tools to the Canadians, Sir Sam cancelled them. "Absolutely useless for any purpose," was his description of the British tool. But the Canadians eventually went to France with the British model and after further trials the MacAdam shovels were sold for $1,400 as scrap.

BOOTS ROTTED

Army boots made in Canada rotted at the seams in England's dampness and were replaced by British boots, transport vehicles were discarded for lack of parts; webbing was found unfit. Each substitution was fought by Sir Sam who condemned Imperial interference.

The most serious affair of all was the ill-fated Ross rifle. Sir Sam sat on the committee that approved purchase of the Ross rifle under the Laurier government. He defended it with a violence and passion that surpassed all belief, continually using excuses for its failings and ranting at its critics.

The delicate Ross was an excellent target rifle but it couldn't meet the rugged demands of battle for long and overheating. Yet time after time the war minister blocked attempts to replace it. Even when Canadian soldiers at the front began throwing away their Rosses to pick up sturdy Lee - Enfields from fallen British comrades, and with court-martial if their men abandoned the Ross.

Although military necessity finally won out, he never changed his attitude. Once Sam Hughes got a thing into mind it was useless to argue.

He even rode out a sizzling political scandal with his bluster and aplomb.

KICKBACKS TO AGENT

Purchase of war supplies had been assigned to a team of buying agents, most of them personally picked by Sir Sam and made honorary colonels so that "if I find fraud any there practices going on I could put them through court-martial."

One was J. Wesley Allison, a contractor from Ohio and a close friend of the minister. He placed orders worth $500,000,000 worth of munitions in the United States and picked up commissions on many of them. Word of it got to Liberal MPs, particularly the case of a firm with only $1,000 capitalization that was paid $1,500,000 in advance on an order for $10,000,000 worth of artillery fuses. It kicked back $22,000 to Allison.

While a royal commission investigated, Sir Sam defended Allison in the Commons as "a gentleman who today stands high in the estimation of the people of this country." When the auditor - general testified against Allison, Sam accused him of casting reflections on "a gentleman who has more honor in his little finger than the auditor-general has in his whole carcass."

The royal commission criticized Allison, who lost his honorary rank. The matter ended there.

By now Sir Sam was clashing almost openly with Borden on policy matters. A columnist wrote that Hughes was the "bronco of broncos" and "the prime minister has never been able to lasso him and keep him lassooed."

DEMANDED RESIGNATION

Things came to a head when Borden moved to appoint an overseas minister of militia and curb Sir Sam's activities. The choice was Sir George Perley whom Sam considered a bitter enemy. The feud had its climax in a violent, abusive letter to Borden from Hughes.

"You must surely realize," Borden wrote back, "that I cannot retain in the cabinet a colleague who has addressed to me such a communication." Borden accused him of running the war department as though it were a separate government. He demanded his resignation.

Thus Sam Hughes bowed out on Nov. 11, 1916, after 27 months of wartime office.

After the war, still in Parliament, his health began to fail. At the close of the 1921 session the end was near and the government provided a special train to take the dying ex-minister home to Lindsay. He died Nov. 24, 1921, at 68.

Sir Sam's military secretary and biographer tells one of the last stories about his humble ups career. Nearing, death, he was visited by a clergyman friend who was shocked by his appearance.

"Well, you think I am going to cross the river," Sir Sam said as he greeted him. "Oh well, if I cross the river I'll bet you a dollar I will be David's right-hand man in less than a month."

MAN O' WAR — One of the most controversial figures in Canadian politics during the First World War was Col. (later Sir) Sam Hughes, minister of militia in the Robert Borden government. Touched off by a kickback scandal and attacked for his defence of the Ross rifle, Col. Hughes clashed with Borden on policy and was forced to resign in 1916. (CP Photo)

Opposition Leader's Bid To Debate Banks' Case Cut off by House Speaker

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition bid to put off until Thursday His planned effort Monday to roast the Liberal government anew over the theft of funds seamed a union czar Hal Banks to the United States.

Speaker Alan Macnaughton cut off the bid of Opposition Leader Diefenbaker for an emergency debate on the ground that the Banks case can be fully debated Thursday during study of finance expenditing study of justice department spending estimates.

He gave his ruling after Mr. Diefenbaker cited several points in support of setting aside regular Commons business to consider the case of Banks, former head of the Seafarers' International Union of Canada who jumped $25,000 bail after conviction and sentencing to five years in prison for conspiracy.

Mr. Diefenbaker argued there is a threat to law and order in the statement of a union leader that Banks was helped by people in the government to get out of Canada, that Banks was charged only with offences for which he could not be brought back from the United States and his helpers "did not want Banks back to tell everything he knows."

Furthermore, Mr. Diefenbaker said, the FBI was not asked by the Canadian government for help in locating Banks and "incomplete and evasive" answers by the government to Parliament reveal failure to deal forthrightly with the Banks case.

This resulted "in Banks being free to flout the law and disrespect justice thereby helping to disrepute the administration of law and justice."

In reference to statements by a union leader, Mr. Diefenbaker quoted from press reports of a speech given by Banks secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Maritime Union, a rival of the SIU.

He called for an immediate emergency debate.

To succeed with such a motion, Mr. Diefenbaker was required to prove both public importance and urgency of debate.

Speaker Macnaughton conceded that the matter was important.

However, he rejected the motion on the grounds that debate today was not urgent. The justice department spending estimates would be before the Commons Thursday. The matter could be raised then.

Following the Speaker's ruling, Mr. Diefenbaker opened the daily question period by asking Prime Minister Martin whether the government now is prepared to call the three government - appointed trustee before a parliamentary committee so the issue can be most carefully scrutinized and examined."

New Democratic Party Leader T. C. Douglas asked whether any steps are being taken to cancel Mr. Banks status as a landed immigrant now that he has been found guilty and he is wanted.

Mr. Martin said he would inquire.

Gilles Gregoire (Creditiste—Lapointe) asked whether the government was considering legislation to prevent union which the former union boss could be extradited from the United States. Mr. Martin said the government had asked the Crown Attorney to study the matter and that he was close to the inquiry was proceeding.

Eldon Woolliams (PC — Bow River) asked whether Mr. Martin was aware of a tape recording given by Banks to one of his friends in which, alleging Liberals and perhaps cabinet ministers received special favors from Banks. He suggested an inquiry to protect Liberal reputations and satisfy the public.

Mr. Martin said he is sure there is nothing in the tape to reflect in any way on the character of members of the government.

Intellectual Revolution In Que. Will Eventually Help Canada Says Doctor

EDMONTON (CP) — The intellectual revolution under way in Quebec eventually will contribute much to Canada's strength and achievement, Dr. Wilder Penfield of Montreal said Monday night.

The eminent neurosurgeon and scholar said the revolution, which affects church and government, as well as education, is "profoundly overdue." And, he added that "in spite of ill-advised political speeches and even youthful bombings, the temper of Quebec is overwhelmingly moderate."

"If there is a folly on the fringe of it all the crackpot sects and even anarchy, it will be regretted. We who live in Quebec, French and English, will keep our eye upon it and restrain it."

Dr. Penfield's topic was Unity and Disunity in the first of two 1964 Henry Marshall Tory lectures. Prof. Tory, who helped found at least three Canadian universities, was the first president of the University of Alberta.

The revolution in Quebec, he said, was started by a group of French - Canadian intellectuals who opposed the "Duplessis government dictatorship" and urged a "new deal" for education.

They published a manifesto for the nation this year which "is nationalist, not French-Canadian alone.

"It deals with the nation's tasks, frankly and brutally, from unemployment to political leadership and adds a keen analysis of many things including nationalism, the constitution and reform in politics.

"To this group Canada might well look with confident hope for future progress."

The manifesto says:

—Quebec looks ridiculous trying for a new constitution when it has not brought its own laws up to date;

—Separatism is not only a waste of time but a backward step;

—Makers of ultimatums risk creating the dangers they profess to fear and to profess inability to make Confederation work is to admit worthiness to contribute to the universal order.

Separatists, Dr. Penfield said, were deluded men and women who walk and talk as though in a dream.

Separatism, he said "will call for patience and understanding throughout the nation."

Dr. Penfield said the revolution in Quebec, however, "will bring positive added strength and in good time contribute more and more to Canadian achievement."

He said Canada must move quickly to make inevitable adjustments called for by the Quebec revolution.

"Let no language be forced on anyone but let bilingualism be recognized as a national opportunity."

He predict that when we have safely entered into the second century of Confederation, it will be clear, even to the most orthodox Anglo-patriots, that the quiet revolution in Quebec has produced no more than a great educational advance.

"We will realize then that it has called forth stimulating (perhaps also irritating) intellectual and political leadership in the French-Canadians within our bilingual nation."

Seek to Settle Local Disputes At 117 Plants

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corporation and the United Auto Workers sought today to settle 117 remaining local-level working agreements and end a strike against the automaker.

The local agreements supplement the national contract on which the UAW and GM agreed Monday.

Hope was expressed on both sides everything could be wrapped up in a week, but neither predicted it would be.

Final settlement would send back to their jobs 280,000 or General Motors' 350,000 UAW-represented workers who were called out on strike 12 days ago to support the union's national-level demands. They remain out to back at-the-plant union goals.

President Johnson said in Washington Monday night he was pleased that GM and the UAW have reached agreement nationally and also was pleased with previous announcements by the big three auto makers—Ford, Chrysler and Studebaker—they planned generally to maintain 1964 prices for 1965 models.

CAUTIONS OTHERS

At the same time the president cautioned others against following what he called a generous settlement by an industry which has been racking up record profits for the last year and a half.

The GM national agreement lifted a damper from the U.S. economy and motors led a strong stock market rally. GM stock hit a new high of $102.12 Monday before closing at $100.-50, up $1.25 for the day. Ford advanced $1 to $58.62.

GM made $1,100,000,000 in this year's first half, compared with $1,580,000,000 in all of 1963 —the largest profit ever made by a manufacturing corporation.

DEFECTOR REWARDED

Assault Charges Against Police Are Dismissed

BLIND RIVER, Ont. (CP)—Assault charges against a former assistant Crown attorney and three police officers arising from a party here in June were dismissed in court Monday.

Attorney William Regan, provincial police Cpl. George Allen, then of Blind River detachment and now of Timmins, and two Metropolitan Toronto police detectives, Norman Lefurgey and David Simser, were charged with assault causing bodily harm to Harold Eastman and with common assault on Mrs. Norma Phillips, who has since married Eastman.

The charges followed a party at Regan's apartment here. They were dismissed by Magistrate W. F. Woodliffe of Sudbury after a day-long hearing.

Magistrate Woodliffe said that in order to convict he would have had to rely on the evidence of Mr. and Mrs. Eastman, who were admittedly drunk at the time and whose memories were hazy. He said he was not satisfied their evidence was reliable.

Mrs. Eastman admitted she had changed her story from time to time in giving statements to investigating police. She said Constable Allen as the only person she had seen strike Eastman.

Previously she and her husband had been unable to name his assailant, but both said they had been upset and their memories had just returned the night before the trial.

Mrs. Eastman said she had a bruise on her side. Dr. T. I. Whang testified that when he examined her she had no marks. Eastman had a broken cheekbone, swollen and sweating around the nose and a small cut. They were consistent either with a blow or from a fall, he said.

Bettors Win Hunch Bet At Woodbine

TORONTO (CP) — Bettors at Woodbine Race Track, perhaps playing a hunch based on the Queen's arrival in Canada Monday, made a horse called Royal Start the favorite in the featured seventh race and saw it pay off with perfect timing.

Royal Start, a four-year-old owned by F. M. Clark, Jr., of Meadow Lake, Sask., and ridden by Frank Enda of Vancouver, charged from last place in the six-horse field to win going away over 8½ furlongs, paying $4.90 on a $2 win ticket, $2.80 for place and $2.20 for show

The starting gate for the seventh opened at 4:35 p.m. EDT. Queen Elizabeth landed at Summerside, P.E.I., by jetliner to start her eight-day royal tour at 4:34 p.m. EDT.

Attorneys-General End First Day's Talks on New Formula With Satisfaction

OTTAWA (CP) — The attorneys - general Monday ended their first day's talks on a constitutional amending formula with smiles of satisfaction, but official silence.

"It's going as well as any body could hope," Justice Minister Guy Favreau. He declined to give details.

He and his 10 provincial counterparts will meet Tuesday to hammer out details of the amending formula agreed in principle by their premiers at the Charlottetown conference last Sept. 9.

The meeting is expected to end today with preparation of a report for the next premiers' conference here Oct. 15, after the Queen's visit.

Quebec whether he expected the attorneys - general would make unanimous recommendations to the premiers next conference, Mr. Favreau told reporters he would not go beyond saying that he is very pleased at the way it is going.

The premiers and Prime Minister Pearson in Charlottetown last month agreed to adopt the so-called "Fulton formula" for constitutional amendments.

This is the device worked out by a series of 1961 and 1962 conferences of attorneys - general, chaired by former Conservative justice minister E. Davis Fulton.

Mr. Pearson said last month that in brief it is a "very simple" agreement on amending procedure before the end of this year.

With that accomplished — a goal that has eluded various federal governments in recent years for the last 37 years—the constitution, embodied mainly in the British North America Act of 1867, would be shifted from British to Canadian statute books.

The prime minister has decried the "self - imposed humiliation" of having to ask Westminster's approval each time Canada wants a constitutional change.

The Fulton formula has three basic ingredients:

1. Unanimous consent of the provinces would be necessary before Parliament could alter any part of the constitution affecting provincial rights.

2. Sections concerning only a few provinces could be altered with the consent of those provinces.

3. Other sections could be changed with the consent of two-thirds of the provinces having half the Canadian population.

300 Mounties To Guard Queen in Que.

QUEBEC (CP) — About 300 members of the RCMP are expected in Quebec city on the occasion of the Queen's visit.

Inspector M. J. Nadon, officer commanding the Quebec detachment, said Monday that the men will come from all parts of Canada. They will be here to assure protection for the Queen and official persons accompanying her.

The Queen and Prince Philip are expected to arrive Saturday for a 33-hour stay.

There will also be about 500 provincial police officers and about 350 municipal police.

Harbor police and CPR and CNR police will look after their respective areas.

In addition, army officials said Monday a guard of honor will be on hand, taken from the Royal 22nd Regiment, the Chaudiere Regiment, the 6th Artillery Regiment, le Regiment des Voltigeurs and the Royal Rifles.

The soldiers generally, including members of the guard of honor, will carry no loaded weapons. Only selected bodyguards of route will be unarmed.

The RCMP and the provincial police will have six cars at their disposition.

Two Missing Anglers Sought In Northland

KILLARNEY, Ont. (CP)—An RCAF amphibious aircraft and a provincial police cruiser Sunday joined provincial police and the department of lands and forests in a search Monday for two anglers missing in this area since last Tuesday.

Stan Korolswych, 39, of Strathroy, Ont., and John Lisko, 39, of Toronto were to have returned to North Bay last Tuesday after a weekend fishing trip. When they had not returned by Thursday, the firm which employed them advised police.

A station wagon owned by a North Bay relative of one of the men was found Friday in a thicket near here, but their 16-foot aluminum boat was not with the vehicle.

Killarney is on the north shore of Georgian Bay, about 100 miles west of North Bay.

Many Canadian-Connected Candidates, Some Born in Country, Contesting Election

LONDON (CP) — Sufficient Canadian - connected candidates are running in Britain's general election to form a pint-sized legislature of their own.

About 20 such candidates, including at least three born in Canada, were among the record 1,735 hopefuls in the field when nominations closed Monday for the Oct. 15 contest.

Mrs. Shirley Vivien Williams, A 34-year-old daughter of Prof. George Catlin of McGill University, Montreal, is a Labor candidate in Hitchin, Hertfordshire, where her Liberal opponent is Mrs. Elma Dangerfield, 57, who went to school in Oak Bay, Victoria, briefly as a girl.

"We're great friends and people think it strange we're fighting," said Mrs. Dangerfield, a lecturer in international affairs. "But it's great fun."

The Tories, who held the seat in the last Parliament, are running a man, Martin Maddan, against the two women.

Mrs. Dangerfield in the 1959 general election contested Aberdeen South against Lady Tweedsmuir, Conservative daughter-in-law of a former Canadian Governor-General, and retained the seat and now is defending it again.

Among other candidates of special Canadian interest are:

Conservative: E. S. T. Johnson, rancher in British Columbia in 1923-30; Cmdr. C. E. M. Donaldson, raised in British Columbia, served in the Canadian navy in the Second World War; Neil Jamieson, former editor of the Rouyn-Noranda Press in Quebec; Tom Stacey, former reporter with the Montreal Star; Ian Percival, son of a Canadian who was formerly assistant to the agent-general for Ontario in London; and Peter A. Premier Tshombe's Spell Cast Across Cairo Parley

By BORIS MISKEW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The spell of Premier Moise Tshombe of The Congo has fallen across the Cairo conference of non-aligned nations.

Tshombe became the centre of controversy at the conference—which opened Monday—when the attending heads of government left Haile Selassie's reception would have an "undesirable effect."

President Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic, host to the 47 heads of government and 10 observers, notified President Joseph Kasavubu of The Congo of the decision.

Nasser urged Kasavubu to come instead, but the determined Congolese premier has boarded a Boeing 707 jetliner in Leopoldville and headed for the conference. The aircraft, however, was not permitted to land in Cairo and wound up in Athens, Greece.

This was not the first time that Tshombe, who received world-wide attention when he made an unsuccessful attempt to take Katanga province out of the newly-independent Congo, has been rebuffed in Cairo.

The conference of African heads of state rejected him last July as the Congolese representative.

The participation of Tshombe at the conference was opposed particularly by President Ahmed Ben Bella of Algeria and by President Tito of Yugoslavia.

The Nasser government said last week Kasavubu would be welcome but reversed the decision Sunday night.

A telegram to Kasavubu signed by Nasser, Tito and Mrs. Sirimavo Bandaranaike, prime minister of Ceylon, said Tshombe was not welcome because of a "sincere desire to avoid unnecessary disorders which may obstruct normal progress of the conference."

Since the agenda of the conference contains more than 30 proposals dealing with such subjects as peaceful co-existence, disarmament, peaceful coexistence and national liberation movements, Tshombe returned to The Congo as premier this summer after a self-imposed exile in Spain, and with the blessing of the United States which hoped he could deal with the spreading power of leftist rebels.

He had lost favor among many non-aligned nations for his Belgian-backed efforts to form a separate government in rich Katanga province after The Congo, a former Belgian colony, had been granted independence four years ago. He was also connected with the killing of Patrice Lumumba, The Congo's first premier.

The barring of Tshombe from the Cairo conference no doubt will be a blow to the prestige of the Congolese premier at a time when reports say that he has been achieving some success in containing the rebels.

His determination to attend the conference likely arose out of a desire to point out to the non-aligned nations that they are supporting the rebellion in The Congo, thus hindering the unification of the country.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Hockey is just around the corner and already the trouble pots are beginning to simmer.

Last winter Kingston and Peterborough junior "B" squads played a home-and-home series with some ten clubs of the Toronto Metro Junior "B" circuit.

This season the Metro clubs want no part of such an arrangement, claiming the out-of-town schedule operations cost them $4,000.

They have openly defied the OHA which ordered a similar schedule this season, declaring they will not take part in the undertaking.

A story from Peterborough quotes junior "B" coach Gary Darling: "I am not too worried about it. The OHA ordered the Metro clubs to make the trips. The schedule is supposed to have been drawn up. I don't know how the OHA can reverse the decision.

"I know some teams are against this interlocking schedule," Darling said. "However, Whitby and Markham were agreeable to it. Waston didn't want to vote on the issue.

"The real problem came from Etobicoke and Brampton. These are the clubs which are kicking. I don't know why Etobicoke complained because it was the highest drawing card in the league last season."

Nine clubs was entered the Metro group this year, including Weston, Dixie, Whitby, Brampton, St. Michael's, Neil McNeil, Etobicoke, Markham and North York.

Georgetown, which played in the group last year, will revert to the junior "C" ranks this season, while Schomberg has given notice its gear is hung up.

Under the arrangement last year both Kingston and Peterborough played home and home games with the Metro teams, while Belleville; Kingston and Peterborough had a double home and home series with this city's team also operating in the junior "C" group in Eastern Ontario.

Along another hockey front, it is understood efforts are being made to organize a Lakeshore intermediate loop with clubs from Cobourg, Port Hope, Bowmanville, Port Perry and Lindsay taking part.

An area minor hockey leadership clinic will be held at Belleville Memorial Arena on Saturday, Oct. 24. It was announced today.

The clinic is being sponsored by the Belleville Recreation Committee and the Community Programs Branch of the Ontario Department of Education.

Purpose of the clinic is to inculcate in leaders a wholesome philosophy and attitude toward minor hockey, to demonstrate practical coaching sessions and to aid leaders in learning techniques of hockey instruction.

An excellent instructional staff has been lined up, including Major "Danny" McLeod of Royal Military College, Kingston; Dr. Lionel G. C. Rochfort, M.D., of Picton; Herb Carnegie, noted hockey player and coach, and Norm Carter, assistant director of Recreation for the city of Belleville.

According to a letter which accompanies application forms, the clinic outline is: 1. philosophy toward minor hockey; 2. skating, passing, checking and goaltending skills; 3. shooting drills; 4. teaching aids, and 5. conditioning and athletic injuries.

Application forms must be returned to the city of Belleville, Recreation Department, 270 Pinnacle St., Belleville, Ont., on or before Friday, October 16. A cheque or money order covering the $4.00 registration fee must be included with the application.

There is room for a limited number only, so the first sixty (60) applicants will be accepted.

All applicants accepted for the clinic will receive further instructions, including a timetable, by mail. The clinic will commence at 9.00 a.m.

Ford, Sadecki Selections For Opener

By JACK HAND

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Ray Sadecki, 23, a lefty with his first big winning year, will tote a tremendous burden Wednesday as the opening pitcher for the underdog St. Louis Cardinals against Whitey Ford, New York Yankees' cagey veteran.

Ford's experience under fire is one reason why the Yanks are favored 17-10 to take the series and 6-5 to win the opener. It will be Whitey's 22nd series start.

The series schedule, which calls for a day off for travel after the second and fifth games, permits the first game pitchers to make three starts if it goes the seven-game limit.

Because Johnny Keane, Cardinal manager, had to use Bob Gibson in relief in Sunday's final game to clinch the National League pennant, he is forced to start Sadecki, a 20-game winner who was knocked out of the box Saturday by New York Mets.

If figures to be the Yanks' big time with Mickey Mantle, Elston Howard, Tom Tresh and Joe Pepitone of the Yanks, and Bill White and Brock of the Cards.

It will be the fifth series meeting of the Yanks and Cards, who split the first four. Berra is the first rookie manager to win a pennant since Eddie Dyer of the Cards in 1946, the year they beat Boston Red Sox.

CROZIER SIGNS

DETROIT (CP) — Rookie goaltender Roger Crozier signed his first contract with Detroit Red Wings Monday, completing the roster of the National Hockey League club for the coming season. A native of Bracebridge, Ont., Crozier, 22, will take over the duties of Detroit net vacated when veteran Terry Sawchuk was picked up in the player draft by Toronto Maple Leafs last June.

Parsons Lose to Kingston

Kingston Crusaders twice overcame Belleville leads before downing Parsons' Cleaners 5-3 in McGaffin Stadium last night, giving the winners the Kingston and District Soccer League trophy.

The game was one of the hardest fought of the season with both clubs going all out on the attack.

Bob Rutherford broke away from a Crusader ganging play and gave Parsons a 1-0 lead after ten minutes. I. Nellson stole the ball and tied it for the Crusaders.

Kingston's speed paid off for a 2-1 lead on Art Roberston's goal from in close before the game's half-way mark.

Parsons' roared back early in the second half and the sustained attack paid off. Bob Rutherford took a pass from Valyear and zipped home a narrow-angle shot to make it 2-2.

Belleville threw everything into the attack at this point and Joe Iasenza was awarded a free kick. The ball came to Angus McLeod who booted it home from 20 yards out, putting Parsons' one up.

The lead was shortlived. Less than a minute later Art Robinson got the Kingston equalizer and two minutes later he scored his third goal to shove Crusaders ahead to stay.

Parsons' forgot about defence and sent all players to the attack but they could not beat the Crusader goalie, who robbed Hutchinson and Iasenza.

A solo breakaway by Jesperson netted the clinching goal for Kingston.

The Parsons' club will now enter competition with Trenton and Batawa in Belleville Charity Cup and Trenton Challenge Cup play.

Four Soccer Players Face Trial

MANSFIELD, England (Reuters) — Magistrates here Monday held pre-trial four of 18 professional or semi-professional soccer players alleged to have "fixed" soccer results.

They were James Gauld, former inside forward of Mansfield Town, a third division team in the English League; John Fountain, Richard Beattie and Samuel Chapman.

Gauld and Fountain were committed for trial on four similar charges Friday.

The prosecution has alleged that Gauld was a "common denominator" in each of the charges which relate to 14 separate alleged conspiracies to defraud between April, 1960, and April, 1963.

'Dancers' Sister Sold For $100.000

Taylor Horses Bring $422,000

TORONTO (CP)—E. P. Taylor sold 27 yearlings Monday from his Windfields Farms for a record $422,000 including a full sister to Northern Dancer, which went for $100,000 to Jean-Louis Levesque of Montreal.

A spokesman for Taylor said the total was the largest amount ever to change hands at a horse sale in Canada, and the $100,000 paid by Mr. Levesque was the most that one Canadian has ever paid another Canadian for a horse.

Like Northern Dancer, the latest in a long series of big money-winners from the Taylor stables, Mr. Levesque's filly is by Nearctic out of Natalma. Natalma was sired by Native Dancer.

The yearling sale is an annual affair in which Taylor sets prices for the colts and fillies produced on his farm during the year, and allows half of each category to be sold.

This year there were 51 yearlings and, under the usual conditions, 13 colts and 15 fillies could be bought. The maximum number of colts was disposed of, but only 11 fillies were taken.

The second highest price paid at the sale was $35,000. Carl Chapman, as owner and trainer from Islington, Ont., paid that much for a colt by Grey Monarch out of Victoriana.

Several others went for $30,000, including a filly by Nearctic out of Spinnikle, bought by Conn Smythe of Caledon, Ont.

Bork Passes Alouettes To Win Eastern Football Scoring

TORONTO (CP) — Halfback Ron Stewart and quarterback Ron Jackson of Ottawa Rough Riders continue to dominate the rushing and passing columns respectively in Eastern Football Conference statistics released today.

In games played up to the weekend, and excluding Monday night's game in Montreal, Stewart had picked up 620 yards rushing in 101 carries.

Jackson, meanwhile, retained his leadership in the passing department, completing 90 of 165 attempts for 1,706 yards, 15 touchdown passes and an average gain of 10.3 yards per completion.

Hamilton Tiger-Cat quarterback Bernie Faloney is second in the passing department with 77 completed in 171 attempts for 1,424 yards and an average gain of 8.3 yards. He has tossed 10 touchdown passes.

Ottawa end Ted Watkins is next with seven touchdowns for 42 points and Stewart is tied for fourth with Toronto Argonaut halfback Dick Shatto. Each has six touchdowns for 36 points.

Sutherin is also the league's leading pass intercepter having picked off five passes from the opposition.

Toronto halfback George Hughley heads the kickoff return list, gaining 577 yards in 18 carries. His longest return was 80 yards and he has an average of 21.1 yards.

Les Chandler, another Argonaut, is the leading punt returner. He has run back 38 punts for a total of 234 yards.

In the punting statistics, Montreal Alouette Gino Berretta is in first place with a total of 2,213 yards gained on 75 punts. His average punt is 42.8 yards and he has scored two single points.

MONTREAL (CP) — George Bork was told what play to use, added a little improvisation in the huddle and spotted the whole idea and just threw the ball.

It was this type of scrambling that worked continuously Monday night as Montreal Alouettes upset British Columbia 14-7, handing the Lions their first defeat of the Canadian Football League season.

Bork, operating out of a shotgun formation with plays sent in by coach Jim Trimble, found little opposition from the Vancouver line as he completed 18 of 28 pass attempts for 227 yards and two touchdowns, both in a wacky fourth quarter.

The Lions were standing along with a 7-1 lead in the final 15 minutes when the zany antics began when Bork, on second down deep in the Als' end. But the ex-soccer player gave it another boot as it lay on the ground and the Lions finally secured possession at their own 47.

Bork promptly dropped the ball again and Montreal's Bob Minihane recovered, starting the Als on a 47-yard march that ended with a touchdown by Jack Gotta at 6:14 and Bernetta's convert for an 8-7 lead.

The Lions couldn't make yards after the kickoff and Montreal marched in again to wrap up the victory with Nat Craddock's touchdown at 12:31. Vancouver tried a comeback, but only got to the Montreal 21 as the gun sounded.

"It was our worst game in three years," commented Lions coach Dave Skrien. "Kapp fumbled, only three times all last season and he has to fumble twice in this game."

The victory moved Montreal into third place in the East, two points ahead of Toronto, while B.C. remained on top in the West with seven wins, three ties and a single loss, one point ahead of Calgary and three in front of Saskatchewan.

The Roughriders can advance nearer the top tonight when they visit Ottawa while Winnipeg invades Edmonton in a battle for fourth place.

Gotta's touchdown resulted from a sideline pass conceived in the huddle while Craddock scored on a desperation throw.

"It was the same story all night," explained Skrien. "Most of the intended receivers were covered and 50 per cent of the time I threw to secondary receivers."

THROWS TD PASS

The Lions built their lead on a touchdown pass to Sonny Homer from Kapp in the second period and Peter Kempf's convert. The score was set up when Bork punted only 30 yards on a quick kick attempt in his own end.

Montreal's first - half point came on a single by Berretta.

Kapp also had an outstanding night in the passing department, making good on 15 of 23 attempts, including six passes to Homer. But the Als' ground defence, well-aware that Vancouver was playing its second game in three days, repelled the Lions when they threatened.

Trimble had praise for both Craddock and Gotta, the ex-Regina end who caught six passes and became the first player to score a touchdown in both conferences during the same season.

Craddock's 228-pounds of muscle did much to soften the Vancouver defenders. Munsey, in fact, was knocked unconscious when Craddock grabbed Bork's passes and crashed across the goaline.

Although Skrien was a trifle annoyed, Montreal's George Cross thought the B.C. coach should be pleased.

"After all, we did them a favor by taking all that pressure off them as an unbeaten team," he explained.

Abel Names National All-Star Team

Play Leafs Saturday

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

With rehearsal time fast drawing to a close for the six teams of the National Hockey League, coach Sid Abel of Detroit, Red Wings Monday named the final members of the cast for the curtain raiser Saturday in Toronto.

Saturday, of course, is the day the defending Stanley Cup champion Toronto Maple Leafs take on the all-stars of the rest of the league and Monday Abel named 10 players to fill out his roster. The others were named last spring as the first and second all-star teams on their season's performances.

Chosen Monday were defenceman Harry Howell, left winger Camille Henry and right winger Rod Gilbert of New York Rangers; defenceman Leo Boivin, centre Murray Oliver and right winger Johnny Bucyk of Boston Bruins; Defenceman Bill Reddy and centres Norm Ullman and Alex Delvecchio of Detroit and centre Henri Richard of Montreal Canadiens.

Named to the first team last spring were goalie Glenn Hall, defencemen Pierre Pilote, centre Stan Mikita, left winger Bobby Hull and right winger Ken Wharram, all of Chicago Black Hawks, and defenceman Tim Horton of Toronto.

On the second team were goalie Charlie Hodge, defencemen Claude Laforcier and centre Jean Beliveau of Montreal, defenceman Elmer Vasko of Chicago, right winger Gordie Howe of Detroit and left winger Mahovlich of Toronto.

Horton and Mahovlich will play with the Leafs Saturday.

Monday, also, Montreal trimmed Rhode Island Reds of the American League 7-2 with Beliveau scoring twice to lead the way.

They round out their exhibition schedule with a game tonight in Providence against Providence Reds and Wednesday night in Hull, Que., against Cleveland Barons, both of the AHL.

New York goes tonight, against Chicago in Kitchener and Wednesday against Detroit in Windsor, Ont., while Detroit plays tonight in Tulsa against the American League Oilers. Toronto ends its pre-season schedule tonight against Portland Buckaroos of the Western League in Portland.

The 1964-65 program opens Monday night in Boston with the Bruins and the Rangers setting the stage for the season run.

Controversy Rages Behind Scenes

Emperor Opens Meeting

From Reuters-AP

TOKYO (CP) — Emperor Hirohito of host Japan today declared open the full meeting of the International Olympic Committee, with customary pomp, behind the scenes, controversy raged.

The IOC delegates gathered in the Nissei Theatre to hear the emperor declare the congress open after the IOC's executive meeting of around up 15 hours of meetings, spread over three days.

Wednesday's working session promised to be stormy. The Soviet Union probably will raise the Indonesian games issue. East Germany wants full membership in the IOC instead of sharing a team with West Germany, and the result of the election for international president will be announced.

Track and swimming athletes who took part in the unauthorized Games of the Emerging Forces at Jakarta, Indonesia, have been suspended by their international federations thereby keeping them out of the Olympics.

MAY RAISE ISSUE

As a result, North Korea and Indonesia may not compete here at all, but observers believe the Russians may raise the issue in the full committee meeting and possibly seek to override the ban.

Russia, too, favors East Germany's full membership in the IOC but Avery Brundage of Chicago, IOC president who mediated the German dispute in 1952 and created a single, all-German team, has always considered this sports unification one of the outstanding successes of the Olympic movement.

All the ballots in the contest between Brundage, seeking re-election as IOC president, and his only rival, Lord David Burghley, Marquis of Exeter, are under seal and all that remains is the announcement.

The main topic of today's IOC executive meeting was the question of admission of African countries and it was understood the executive decided to admit a maximum of five.

Other points discussed, according to reliable sources, were: The question of retention of team sports in the games; retention of judo as an Olympic sport after 1968; the two Germanys question, and whether the official language be English and French should be increased to include Spanish and Russian.

Virtually all the 8,400 athletes from 120 98 countries expected to compete here are on hand. The opening ceremonies take place Saturday, Oct. 10 and the games end Oct. 24.

Marksmen Regain Trophy

The annual handgun shoot for the John Labatt trophy and the Don Bell Sport Shop trophy was held by the Quinte Handgun League at the Trenton range Sunday afternoon. The trophy which was won last fall by the Trenton club, was brought back to Belleville by the Quinte marksmen, who defeated the Trenton and Northern Electric teams.

The Don Bell high individual trophy was won by Henry Tom of the Quinte marksmen. Tom outscored teammate Harold Howling by a very small margin. Both marksmen shot a 285 on the international range. The winner was declared by use of O.R.A. tie-breaking competitive rules.

The Quinte marksmen team was lead by Henry Tom with 285, George Valquette 282, L. Kulcsar 241, Frank Allin 235 and Harold Howting 285 for a 1228 total.

Northern Electric team was headed by Reg Spracklett with 253, J. Reid 233, B. Gee 199, R. Charlton 208 and R. Beaudin 219 for a total of 1100. The Trenton team came second with 1230.

Tonight the marksmen will begin their winter shoot in the Belleville Armouries, and all members are requested to turn out.

Northern Dancer May Race Next Winter

By JERRY GLADWAN

TORONTO (CP) — The future of Northern Dancer, Canada's greatest three - year - old thoroughbred, is still a big question mark although the word around the tracks is that the Dancer will never race again.

The diminutive colt, winner of this year's Kentucky Derby, the Preakness and the Queen's Plate, has been sidelined with a tendon injury since the latter part of July. Canadian racing fans have been waiting eagerly for word of the future of the Dancer, but so far no definite decision has been made.

Horatio Luro of Argentina trainer of the one-time reject that went on to become the Cinderella horse of 1964, said recently that the Dancer has a "50-50" chance of returning to competitive racing.

The final decision, of course, will have to come from owner E. P. Taylor of Toronto.

"The horse is training now," said Luro, "and if he is well this winter, we plan to race him."

TO AVOID GAMBLE?

But there are some racing buffs who figure million-aire industrialist Taylor won't take the gamble of running his colt again.

After an injury of this type it is difficult to tell whether a horse can come back and perform as in the past. The Dancer, right now is too valuable for stud to take a chance on having him lose to lesser horses.

On the other hand, some horses, although few in number, have come back from a tendon injury and performed as well, or better, than prior to the injury.

The first diagnosis of the injury was a bowed tendon, but Luro has since described it as "a rap on the tendon that swelled up." He would not, however, say whether his is as bad as a bow.

"It is hard to tell because the tendon is always a danger spot," he said.

IS GALLOPING

Luro has had the horse galloping, but the Dancer has yet to pass the big test of being "put down" on run hard. Luro will probably hold off running the colt until later in the month.

A new type of treatment, dig-pulse, is being used to speed up the recovery. Digpulse is a shock treatment which stimulates the tissues through short wave pulses and gets in deep where lineaments, blisters and oils can't reach. It also speeds up the circulation of the blood —cutting treatment from six months to two.

Should the injury fail to respond to treatment, the Dancer will be put out to stud. This in itself should mean another small fortune for Taylor. Most owners would grab the opportunity to book mares to this son of Nearctic out of Nalaima.

It was a different story in 1962, however, when Taylor had the Dancer on the block at his annual yearling sale with a $25,000 price tag around his neck. Everyone bypassed the horse because of his small size and Taylor was "forced" to keep him and run him under his own colors.

Northern Dancer had already won for Taylor $280,572 by the time the Kentucky Derby rolled around, but the oddsmakers forced the Canadian-bred colt to take a back seat to such "proven" stars as Hill Rise and Quadrangle.

But when jockey Bill Hartack booted the Dancer home in front of the pack, the least surprised person was Taylor.

Canadians weren't the only ones rooting for the little colt that resembled a midget fox in a crowd of basketball players when the horses lined up for the Preakness Stakes. Fans who favor the "little guy," were also in the Dancer's corner.

But, despite the impressive Derby triumph, the Canadian colt was still an underdog to Hill Rise for the Preakness. This time the win came easier and the experts were forced to concede the Belmont stakes—the third jewel of U.S. racing's triple crown—to the Dancer.

The 1¼-mile distance proved to be too much for the colt and despite a gallant rush in the stretch, Northern Dancer finished third to Quadrangle.

WON EASILY

Canada's "favorite son" returned home in June for the country's biggest racing spectacle, the Queen's Plate, and didn't disappoint the fans as she cakewalked to an easy 7¼ length victory.

Just after the Dancer went into training for the Travers Stakes and a rematch with Quadrangle, he picked up the injury which could possibly spell the end of a great racing career.

His record speaks for itself. In two seasons of racing he won $580,647. He has never finished out of the money in 15 starts. He won seven of nine starts as a juvenile last year and ran second twice. This year he again won seven of nine races, winding up third in the other two.

Not bad for a horse that was passed up for being too small

Travels At 434.02 MPH

Sets World Land Speed Record

BONNEVILLE SALT FLATS, Utah (AP) — Art Arfons, one of the "Flying Arfons Brothers," set a world land speed record of 434.02 miles an hour Monday and immediately made plans to break it.

"I want to be the first man to touch 500 miles an hour," said the 38 - year - old Akron, Ohio, garage owner after the run in his jet-powered car.

He originally said he would try to hit 500 m.p.h. today at the salt flats, but later decided to recheck the vehicle and make the run Wednesday if all systems are working.

Arfons wasn't far from his goal Monday. He hit 479 miles an hour during the second half of his two-way run over a one-mile salt track. He was clocked at 396 over the first half.

Arfons' speed for a kilometre was 434.19.

The official time is the average of the two both runs.

SET LAST WEEK

The old land record of 413.20 was not really old at all. It was set here last Friday by Tom Green of Wheaton, Ill., in a car designed by Art's 41-year-old brother, Walt.

In some circles, jet car records are not regarded as true auto speed records because the wheels are not driven directly by the engine.

They accept as the record the 403.139 mile-an-hour mark set by Donald Campbell of Britain in a turbine - powered car in Australia last July.

Competition between the two Arfon brothers is friendly.

"We decided that's the way it would be," Art said.

Art's car, The Green Monster, is powered by a J79 jet engine and has 17,000 horsepower, including its afterburner. The engine is the same as used in the U.S. Air Force's F-104 jet fighter plane.

Eskimos, Bombers Tonight

EDMONTON (CP) — Joe Ambo and Bill Redell could well be battling for the first-string quarterback spot with Edmonton Eskimos tonight when they meet Winnipeg Blue Bombers here in a match between Western Football Conference tail-enders.

Both rookies, they have each shown flashes of brilliance since being introduced to the ranks this year although the Eskimos still are in fourth spot in the five team division.

Ambo, unsuccessful in a Cleveland Browns trial, has started every game since he replaced Jim Ameche in Edmonton's sixth game this year. But Redell, a Los Angeles Rams reject, was inserted in Edmonton's last game—a 43-14 defeat by Hamilton Tiger - Cats here.

Redell took over late in the game and led Edmonton to two meaningless touchdowns but caught the fancy of the crowd. Redell is a maturity of the Edmonton defensive backfield.

Bombers, Grey Cup champions two years ago, have only one win and a tie to show for 12 games. Edmonton has won two games—both against Eastern opposition—in 10 attempts.

Girls Stage Fight in Soccer Game

IPSWICH, England (Reuters) — Mid-field fist fights and insults in a referee fine led to a boycott of two Ipswich women's soccer clubs and the referee.

One player was seized in a judo grip and hurled over an opponent's shoulder in a Sunday game which was finally abandoned when the girls staged a all-down strike and refused to play any more.

The referee, who, strove to remain a gentleman throughout it all, commented afterward:

"I would rather deal with one of those (rough) Latin American country's teams than face this lot again."

STIFF NECK

BERWICK-ON-TWEED, England (CP)—James Aikman went to the Berwick-on-Tweed Infirmary and complained of a stiff neck after swimming and diving in the sea. An X-ray showed he had broken it.

Battle Of Riders Tonight

OTTAWA (CP) — Ron Lancaster and Russ Jackson have been rival quarterbacks for several seasons, but tonight marks their first meeting as opponents as Ottawa and Saskatchewan clash in a Canadian Football League interlocking contest.

Lancaster and Jackson alternated at the reins of Ottawa Rough Riders for a couple of seasons until Ottawa coach Frank Clair decided to stick with Jackson and sent Lancaster west two years ago.

Lancaster returns to Ottawa as a Roughrider, but he's one of the Saskatchewan breed now, and at the head of the most potent offence in the CFL.

Saskatchewan, long noted as a tough defensive club, has averaged more than 24 points a game this season.

A win for Saskatchewan tonight would move the Roughriders into a second-place tie with Calgary Stampeders and only a single point behind the Western football Conference-leading B.C. Lions.

Predict Aussie Athletics Will Win 10 to 15 Gold Medals at Tokyo Games

By ROBERT COLEMAN
Canadian Press Correspondent

MELBOURNE (CP) — Australia has chosen what experts say is the strongest team selected for an overseas Olympic Games.

Observers predict that athletes from this country with a population of 11,000,000 will return from the Oct. 10-24 Tokyo Games with 10 to 15 gold medals. Estimates of the likely gold, second-place silver and third-place bronze medal totals reach as high as 45.

W. T. (Bill) Uren, member of the Australian Olympic Federation, says "the standard of our team is higher than any we have sent away before, particularly in track and field and swimming." These two sports are loaded with talent, and the estimate of medal winners couldn't be far off.

At the 1956 Olympics at Melbourne, Australia finished third on the unofficial points standing based on 10-5-4-3-2-1 for the first six places in eac event. They won 13 gold medals.

PLACED FIFTH

Four years later in Rome the Australian team of 303 athletes won eight gold, eight silver and six bronze medals and finished fifth in the points standing.

Here are a few athletes who have great chances of standing up and being counted when medals are on the line:

Swimmer Dawn Fraser, a spectacular personality in big-time competition who is given a better-than-ever chance of becoming the first woman in the history of the Games to win the same event three times in succession.

She won the 100-metre free-style at Melbourne and again in Rome and is the first woman to get under a minute for the distance. Last Feb. 29 at Sydney she set a world record of 58.9 seconds.

To get to Tokyo she has had to overcome serious personal setbacks. Early this year this 26-year-old wonder suffered a severe spinal injury in an automobile accident in which her mother was killed. She wore a brace on her neck for months.

In track, there is 26-year-old Ron Clarke, Trevor Vincent, Pam Kilborn, blonde Betty Cuthbert, Dixie Willis, Tony Senarwell and Margaret Burvill. Any one—or all—are gold medal prospects.

Clarke, who carried the Olympic torch around the stadium to open the Melbourne Olympics, holds world records for six miles and 10,000 metres and likely will go for the triple at Tokyo—the 5,000 metres, 10,000 metres and marathon.

WON STEEPLECHASE

Vincent won the 3,000-metre steeplechase at the 1962 British Empire Games in Perth and last February ran the distance in 8:39.0, nine seconds outside the world record. He has been improving steadily since then.

Sneerwell ranks third on the list of all-time high jumpers. His best leap was 7 feet 2¼ inches in Tokyo last February.

Betty Cuthbert, Australia's "golden girl" of the 1956 games when she won three gold medals in the sprints and relay has staged a comeback and has switched from sprinting to the middle distances.

She held the world records for 400 metres and 440 yards at one time and is close to the recognized mark of 53.0 set by Maritza Ilkina of Russia.

Schoolteacher Pam Kilborn is just one-tenth of a second off the world record of 10.5 for the 80-metre hurdles. Four other women in the world have equalled her 10.6 time, but she has done this more than a dozen times this year.

Dixie Willis set the world record of 2:02.0 for 800 metres in 1962 and it is still on the books although Sin Kin Dan, a North Korean hurdler got under the mark this year with a clocking of 1:59.1, this mark is up for recognition.

Another schoolteacher, Miss Burvill, is rated by many experts as the world's fastest sprinter. But "big occasion" nerves have cost her every important event in which she has run, including this Australian championships. She holds the world record for 220 yards—23.3 seconds.

There are other good medal prospects in cycling, equestrian, yachting, boxing and rowing.

For the first time provisional coaches will go with an Australian Olympic team. Two of these are swimming coaches Forbes Carlile (women) and Don Talbot (men).

But the Aussies, along with athletes from other southern hemisphere countries, have been at a disadvantage at Games held north of the line. The track and swimming seasons end about March and this deprives athletes from building up fitness with local and international competitions.

Many have been abroad this year but the majority can't afford to leave the country due to their work. Lack of top-class competition in the winter months is the biggest bugbear for the track team.

Many keep fit with cross country running and other non-competitive training. But, although they will be as fit as possible before they depart for Tokyo, most will be short of the essential ingredients of tactical knowhow that comes from international competition.

To bring track and swimming athletes to the peak of their fitness before leaving for Tokyo the teams went to training camps situated in the tropical far north of the continent.

Tomorrow: Australia's game horseman goes to Tokyo.

The Trots

CAMPBELLVILLE, Ont. (CP)—Fanny Symbol regained her winning ways in the eighth race at Mohawk Raceway Monday night when she upset the odds-on Cadenza to register a handy 2¼ - length margin in 2:07 3-5 in the featured eighth race.

Fanny Symbol, owned by Phillip Witte of Toronto, was reined by husband Orlie in the evening's headliner.

ASK WAIVERS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Dodgers asked for waivers Monday on infielder Jim Gilliam, 36, and outfielder Lee Walls, 31.—A spokesman said Gilliam's waiver was a technicality to enable him to coach next year. Walls' waiver gives him an unconditional release.

Canadian Boy Hurler

Tosses 'Slow One' To Castro

By WALTER KREVENCHUK

OAK BANK, Man. (CP)—The Cuban coach gazed apprehensively at the batter.

"Give him your slow, straight one," he said to his southpaw pitcher.

The bearded batter dug in and rapped a looping liner toward second base.

"Hit!" flashed the scoreboard as Premier Fidel Castro of Cuba clashed first.

So ended the first, and probably last, meeting between the most feared baseball player in Cuba and Bob Davisson, 16-year-old pitcher from this community 17 miles east of Winnipeg.

Davisson and Dave Grove, 18 - year - old righthander from nearby Selkirk, were in Havana early in September with a 14-member Canadian all-star team competing in the sixth junior world series.

Cuba defeated the Canadians three games to one in the tournament, reduced to two teams when the United States and Mexico decided not to send entries.

Castro wasn't a member of the Cuban team. He made his appearance in a post-series exhibition game.

"He got three hits and struck out once—by a Cuban pitcher," Davisson says.

The lefty's hitting prowess received little applause — "there were no fans at the game, just the players" — but his southern hemisphere countries, have been at a disadvantage at Games held north of the line. The track and swimming seasons end about March and this deprives athletes from building up fitness with local and international competitions.

Bob, who pitched just one inning, says the Cuban fans applauded every time the Canadians made a good play. And it was evident the game was popular on the island — "everywhere you went people were playing baseball . . . alongside roads, on the beaches."

Davisson's expenses on the 17-day trip were picked up by the Cuban government and, he says, this was fortunate, because he didn't have to be turned in for 23 Cuban pesos wouldn't have gone far at current prices.

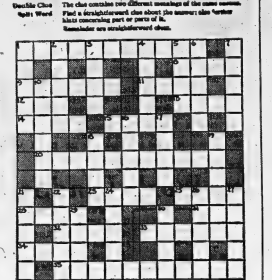
"A small fillet with rice cost 90, a bowl of noodles or spaghetti $3.50."

In addition to giving up a hit to Castro, Bob also gave the premier his jacket. It happened to be the biggest and was therefore picked for the team's presentation. Davisson got a replacement, however, and "this one fits."

TRAINED IN MONTREAL

Davisson and Grove got their chance to try out for the Canadian team as a result of being picked for the Manitoba-Ontario director for the National Federation of Amateur Baseball.

They went to training camp in Montreal where "we learned a lot from former New York Mets pitcher Ray Daviault." They proved good enough to be chosen along with two players from Calgary, one from Nova Scotia and nine from the Montreal district.



Club manager was Marcel Racine of Montreal, founder of the NPAB, who received a $10,000 grant from the National Fitness Council this year to help him in his efforts to promote amateur baseball in Canada, including the immediate aim of a national junior championship.

Davisson, a native of Edmonton who has also lived in Unity, Sask., and various Manitoba communities in which his RCMP constable father has been stationed, has been invited to try out for the team that will represent Canada in the 1967 junior world series in Mexico.

He likes the idea because it fits in with his own hopes for the future—"I want to be a professional baseball player."

May Get Card Call

ST. LOUIS (AP) — His name is Charles Dallan Maxvill .He has been to bat 26 times this year ,and has only six hits to his credit.

His statistics he might never have been signed to a major league baseball contract if Winnipeg Goldeyes of the Class D Northern League hadn't had a sore-armed shortstop.

But Dal Maxvill may finally be in the spotlight Wednesday when he is expected to play second base for St. Louis Cardinals in the opening game of the World Series against New York Yankees.

Maxvill will likely get the call because regular second baseman Julian Javier is bobbled with a bruised hip

"Maxvill doesn't have quite the range Javier does,' said manager Johnny Keane, "but I think he can do the job."

He did it for the Cardinals Sunday as they clinched the pennant by beating the New York Mets. The 35-year-old, 150-pound infielder singled home the Cards' first brake a 1-1 tie in the fourth inning, then drove in another run in a three-run fifth that put the game out of reach.

His two hits gave him a season total of six and his two runs batted in matched his entire output for the rest of the season.

Tiger-Cats Official Improving

HAMILTON (CP)—Len Back, road manager for Hamilton Tiger-Cats who was injured in an Eastern Football Conference game with Saskatchewan here Sunday, has shown a marked improvement, hospital officials said Monday night.

Back was knocked unconscious when Saskatchewan Bruce Grant crashed into him on the sidelines during a pass play from quarterback Bernie Faloney. Back regained consciousness in hospital.

He suffered a concussion and severe bruises to the body in the collision.

Will Reshape Old Laurel, Hardy Films

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Jay Ward Productions has acquired all the Laurel and Hardy movies, silent and sound, and some 60 in which the two appeared separately.

"We're taking the funniest scenes out of the batch and putting them together as a 90-minute feature film in tribute to the greatest comedy team of all time," says Ward.

"We had hoped to get the project finished this year but our cutters can't work for laughing.

"Every time we run a Laurel and Hardy film, the cutters laugh all over the place and pretty soon all the secretaries, executives and even me, the boss, are in the projection room laughing.

"It's remarkable what comedy gains these years," Ward says they are after Stan Laurel, the surviving member of the team, to narrate the film.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP) — Recourse, a three-year-old gelding, must feel like an unwanted thoroughbred. In less than 12 hours he's bounced from one stable to another, with hardly time to steal an oat.

Purchased from Ernie Liebermann, Don Ross Monday morning, Recourse had time to run for Ross and trainer A. I. (Butch) Taylor in the featured seventh race at Woodbine, then went on to C. M. Clark, Jr.'s barn after being claimed.

Recourse finished second in the seventh race to Clark's Royal Start.

Clark, from Meadow Lake, Sask. paid $10,000 to claim Recourse from the mile and one-sixth trial, part of it coming from Royal Start's $1,680 first place pot.

And the first victory for Royal Start since shipping to Eastern Canada from the West. In his first outing he finished third, but showed promise of things to come.

Royal Start, charging from last place took the lead under the fine handling of Frank Ieda, Vancouver's leading rider this past summer, defeated Recourse by three lengths of a length for return $4.50, $2.80 and $2.20.

Royal Start raced the mile and one-sixteenth distance in 1.44 2-5, just a second and two-fifths of the track record. His earnings for the year total $11,955.

AT THE PARK — Cia Gulager holds Angie Dickinson out the window of her eight storey room in order to convince her that she must refresh her memory in this violent scene from Ernest Hemingway's "The Killers," showing today and Wednesday at the Park Theatre for its first Belleville showings, an explosive melodrama in color from Universal. Other stars are Lee Marvin, John Cassavetes and Ronald Reagan. On the same program the added thriller "Strongroom" completes the big double program. Show times 7.00 and 8.50 p.m.

Some Credit to Lancaster For Boosting Burton Salary

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—A lot of people may think that Elizabeth Taylor made Richard Burton one of the highest paid international stars.

Actually, Burt Lancaster can take some of the credit.

Before Cleopatra, Burton's price a picture was $150,000. He recommended Lancaster for The Spy Who Came in From the Cold at $750.000 plus 20 per cent of the profits.

Lancaster, a friend of Burton's, reveals this facet of Burton's life from atop a desk in his office personality .

"Walter Wanger approached me to do Marc Antony in Cleopatra. He told me he had Elizabeth set for the title role.

"But there was no script—just an English translation of an Italian high school history of Cleo. I turned him down. I wasn't interested in doing a spectacle anyhow.

"Then John Huston appointment me to do Night of the Iguana but I turned that down because I figured it another Elizabeth story. There's no fun in this business if you keep doing the same parts all the time.

"Then The Sandpiper was offered me. I turned that down too. Richard is doing that one with Liz.

"I liked The Spy but it had to be shot in Europe and I don't want to leave home. So I told Marty Ritt that while I believed it should be shot abroad, he would have to get himself another boy."

Burton couldn't thank Lancaster enough.

Burt is unusual among Hollywood stars. He does only parts that interest him.

Currently, he is playing a Civil War Union army officer in ground operation of hi anthology called Hallelujah Trail. It involves getting a wagon load of whisky across the plains, fighting both thirsty Indians and righteous temperance workers led by Lee Remick.

"It kids the pants off every western ever made. It's fun to do. That's all I look for in a script—a challenge, a thrill of making.

"And, one of these days, I'm going to do a musical. I'd love it."

Olympics Girls
Some Pretty, Others-Well

By JIM BECKER

TOKYO (AP)—There is one standard for feminine beauty at the Miss Universe contest and an entirely different one at the Olympic Games.

To be brutally frank, after looking over the crop gathering for the Olympics which open Saturday, it must be reported that there are few prospects for anyone whose face will stop traffic.

There are the exceptions.

Some of the swimming girls fill their suits quite neatly.

The women gymnasts have been known to set hearts tumbling.

And there is the odd-longlegged lass in soft wheel shoes who sets pulses pounding faster.

But when it comes to women shot putters and volley ball players, well, there are some here that even their mothers would admit are not ravishing.

They also run heavily to muscles.

The best estimate on a healthy Miss from one underprivileged Eastern European state produced these vital statistics: 38-40-40.

The first figure is for the shoulders and the other two were selected at random lower down.

HAVE GLITTERING SMILES

And those stainless steel teeth favored by Iron Curtain dentists do not exactly enhance the overall aspect.

Now, this low-down on pulchritude in the sweat socks set has long been hidden in a secret code.

Sports writers, gentlemen all, sort around in their vocabularies and comes up with descriptive words for women athletes that do not completely cover the case.

Here are some familiar examples, and their real meanings:

Attractive—Well, she must be a girl because the Russians say she is.

Pretty — Nobody has ever actually stepped on her face with a spiked shoe.

Lovely — She bathes after every race.

Gorgeous—She parked her truck outside.

Glamorous—She has had at least one permanent since spring.

Vivacious—She speaks English.

Shy—She doesn't.

Crowds Welcome N. Koreans

TOKYO (Reuters) — Crowds twice broke through police cordons Monday night in a giant welcome for the North Korean Olympic team, including athletes banned from the games.

Shin Kim Dan, the world's fastest woman over 800 metres, was among the banned.

The arrival of the 144-strong delegation highlighted once again the dispute over the refusal of the International Olympic Committee to allow athletes who took part in the Jakarta Games-within-Games for New Emerging Forces last year to compete in the Olympics starting here Saturday.

Trucks floodlit the scene as the crowd estimated by police at nearly 10,000 including 5,000 North Koreans living in Japan and also members of the Japanese Socialist and Communist parties, staged the big welcome.

Twice the crowd, many of whom carried North Korean Communist flags, broke through the police cordons and the Olympic hands said they could not recall such a demonstration of organized enthusiasm for the arrival of any other delegation to Olympic games.

Ambition; to Be a Star Says Educated Pat Wayne

By BOB THOMAS

At the Belle

John Lennon of The Beatles in "A Hard Day's Night"

John Lennon is a determined 24-year-old whose countenance stern face gives the impression of an angry young man. With him there would be no Beatles. He was the one who organized the group and gave them their tag — one that has become, in the past year, the most important word in the English vocabulary.

Fittingly, Lennon is called the "chief Beatle." But we don't let it count for much really," he said. People said there must be a boss, So the others said to me "Well, you started this whole thing off, so you're the leader.' And that's that.

Being the leader of the most popular musical group to ever emerge in England is not John's only distinction. He's the only married member of the Beatles and he has a baby boy that he adamantly refuses to talk about with him — "I'm dead keen to keep my home life and my career in this business. "I want my wife to lead a normal life and not be pestered day and night [illegible] because she's married to one of the Beatles." he said.

Born in Liverpool on October 9, 1940, John attended Liverpool High School and later the Liverpool College of Art. Lennon readily admits his school life was far from being outstanding but if my whole school life was a case of 'I couldn't care less,' it was just a little so far as I was concerned. Don't think I'm proud of it all, I wouldn't want anybody to follow my example.") The failures he had in school were more than made up for when the Beatles came into existence in a Liverpool club called the Cavern.

After some months of playing at the Cavern the boys received a booking for a tour with a Larry Parnes pop show. The job wasn't a very good one — just backing a young singer — but it was the first time they had played outside Liverpool. After that came their booking at the Indra Club in Hamburg, Germany, and a short time later their discovery by Brian Epstein who is now their manager.

Today, John is at the top but not overwhelmed by success. "I feel," he said, "richer and flattered by our good fortune. I am touched by the personal gifts that are showered on us now." This philosophy sums up the feelings of the entire group. "We all go out to have fun. If others have fun, fine, too."

John sings and plays rhythm guitar plus harmonica. He has provided the remarkable Falsetto Voice effects on the group's best-selling records. He bought his first electrified guitar from the proceeds of vacation building-site jobs. He likes steak, chips, jelly, curries, painting, modern jazz, cats, suede and leather coats and Marlon Brando heads.

The popular Beatles in "A Hard Day's Night" are added featurettes showing Tonight, Wednesday and Thursday at the Belle Theatre in Belleville.

Parliament At a Glance

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

MONDAY, Oct. 5, 1964

Commons Speaker Macnaughton rejected a bid by Opposition Leader Diefenbaker to set aside regular business for an emergency debate on government handling of former SIU boss Hal Banks.

Mr. Diefenbaker sought the debate on the basis of a report that persons in government made a deal with Banks to get out of the country. Opposition criticism of the government's bill providing loans to syndicates of farmers for the purchase of machinery went into its sixth day.

In amendment by NDP Leader T. C. Douglas that would have classified farm co-operatives as syndicates under terms of the legislation was defeated 91 to 31.

TUESDAY, Oct. 6

The Commons meets at 2:30 p.m. EDT to continue debate in committee of the whole House on the farm machinery loans bill. The Senate stands adjourned until Oct. 13.

Fisher Says 60 Is Too Old For an MP

GUELPH (CP)—No member of Parliament should be allowed to sit in the Commons for more than 10 or 12 years, and no person over 60 should be a member, Douglas Fisher, New Democratic Party member for Port Arthur, said Monday.

Mr. Fisher, 45, now in his eighth year in the Commons, was speaking to the Canadian Club here. He said that if men over 60 were eliminated from the Commons a breath of fresh air would be let in.

He said he thinks there are many backbenchers willing to see the change.

Yogi Likes Long Series

NEW YORK (AP) — If it's all the same to St. Louis Cardinals manager Yogi Berra would like to see a long World Series.

"Anything can happen in a short series," Berra said while the club ran through a light workout Monday. "One bad break and it's all over. I'd hate to have it decided that way."

Berra remembers all too well the last short series. That was a year ago when Los Angeles Dodgers beat New York four straight.

Asked at what the Mets did to the Cardinals in that last three-game series, the frecan man same said. "They took 'em two out of three and could have had a sweep with some pitching in that last one."

New Zealand Games Teams Picked By 3-Man Panel

By J. G. GRAHAM
Canadian Press Correspondent

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP) — A three - member panel has the last word in choosing New Zealand's Olympic and British Empire Games teams.

The method is novel but it works, despite occasional grumbling. Its acceptance can be gauged by the liberality of public contributions to the upkeep of the teams.

Nominations are made by the governing body of each sport usually after setting competition standards. Then the impartial panel, selected by the New Zealand Olympic and British Empire Games Association, hears arguments from delegates of each sport in support of their nominations.

The selectors then pick the team, reporting their reasons.

Athletes are chosen in two categories. Those in category A, with the strongest claims, are financed almost entirely by the association, with a small balance to be made up by the national sports body concerned.

Category B covers those judged capable of performing with credit but with less notable records. These are included in the team, provided their national sports body pays the shot. This year's team includes 21 in the first category and 47 in the second.

No athlete has ever been left off a team because of lack of funds. Doors invariably come to the rescue when a sports body's resources are inadequate.

The money paid by the Olympic and Empire Games Association for category—A athletes comes mainly from government grants. A small additional amount is paid by the association from its own funds—balances from previous tours and fund-raising efforts.

To send category B athletes abroad, some sport bodies make permanent levies on all affiliated members. Raffles, entertainments, sports meetings, donations and many other sources make up the balance.

In Auckland, hometown of 29 of this year's 68 athletes, the local amateur sports association conducts a door-to-door appeal before every Empire and Olympic Games. The canvassers are athletes from every sport, even those unrepresented at the Games.

A householder may be visited by a 13-year-old girl basketballer, an international known runner like Peter Snell or Murray Halberg or a football or cricket hero. Businesses and municipalities also make donations.

Team managers and coaches are the responsibility of the sports nominating them but many officials raise their own expense money.

Of approximately $125,000 required to send this year's team to Tokyo, about $33,000 will come from the government and the Olympic and Empire Games Association. The remainder will be contributed by sports associations, mainly as a result of public donations.

Hallowell Twp. and Town In Stalement on Planning

PICTON (Staff) — At a meeting of Picton's town council last night councillor J. Bird stated that there was a stalemate with the joining municipality of Hallowell on the planning board question. He added that the higher authorities will soon want action and may possibly take action themselves. "We will have no powers left," he said, "it is time that council did something about planning board activities. The Department of Agriculture has also some ideas on planning (1) inventory of the town; (2) project priorities; (3) immediate needs.

Deputy Reeve Don Thompson mentioned that a meeting was expected to be held on Oct. 27 at the Royal Hotel by a group of people from Kingston and the Department in regards to a planned parkway from the hamlet of Adolphustown. Members of this group he said wished to have a representative from Picton's town council at the meeting.

Further to the planning board business a motion was adopted to have Mr. Sam Gentile fill the gap left by the resignation of the planning board chairman, Carl Reid, earlier this year.

His Worship Mayor H. J. McFarland said that the county would certainly be going ahead in the next ten years. Jealousy between the two municipalities concerned is not good, he said. "We must work together, praise rather than criticize. We have been fortunate," he said, in being able to get industry into the county. Fortunate to get a bridge. There are some 500 to 600 people employed over the past five or six years.

"As I have said before, we could have been left here with nothing but a bridge of ten-ton capacity between us and Belleville. Also a small one at Carrying Place at 15 tons. If we had not looked far enough ahead we would not have a railroad in our county. Bethlehem Steel and Lake Ontario Portland Cement Co. and other industries are here now and we will always have a railway. Belleville will have to build a new bridge and so they will at Carrying Place."

The county has everything to offer industry, said the mayor, deep water, rail facilities and a new bridge linking the county with 401 Highway. "We are proud of what we have accomplished and we should get down to business and work for everyone's interests, to the benefit of all.

APPOINTMENTS MADE

Five new building permits were issued for the month of September.

Dr. R. Taylor was appointed representative of the arena commission and H. Collyer appointed member to another two-year period on the Prince Edward District High School Board. Neil Lowe was appointed to committee of adjustment for the town of Picton.

A by-law was passed to appoint polling places and officers for the municipal elections in November.

With regard to the election all members felt that it was becoming extremely difficult to find polling places. Many people did not want to be bothered to put up with the traffic and other annoyances in their homes for the small sum of money involved. It was decided to raise the polling fee for the residence to $15 and to also raise the pay of the polling officers to the same amount $15.

A telegram is being sent to her Majesty Queen Elizabeth welcoming her to the Country from the people of Picton and to wish her a good journey and a safe trip home.

A motion was passed to augment the small compensation pay of $30 per week for injured fireman George R. Warner to bring his pay up equal to that he was receiving before his injury at the town barn fire last August. The pay will be born by the town and will be retroactive to the end of his last pay. Warner a volunteer fireman injured his back while fighting the fire and is still in hospital. Some mixup either at the compensation board offices or in earlier council business back in 1957 left council members unsure of the amount he should be paid and the amount of compensation the town was paying on. Most if not all members were surprised to find that the amount paid to the injured fireman was so small and the motion was unanimous that immediate action be taken to provide him with adequate funds.

The American Dream Still Holds in Cuba

By RENNIE AIRTH

HAVANA (Reuters) — Cubans continue to cling—at least on the surface — to the American style of living.

Visitors to Cuba are amazed to see how American culture, tastes and customs still dominate the Cuban scene, now more than five years after Castro came to power.

Baseball is still the nations' sport with the premier one of the country's most ardent fans.

Cubans still follow the results of the major leagues in the United States and such baseball heroes as Mickey Mantle, Willie Mays and Sandy Koufax are household names.

The ubiquitous Coca Cola bottle is still in evidence in Cuba—though seldom filled with Coke.

Orangeade, lemonade and a soft drink made from apples are sold in the bottles and occasionally liquid which resembles Coca Cola in appearance, but hardly in taste.

Restaurants and snack bars sell hamburgers and hot dogs and hotel guests are still asked if they want their coffee "Cubano" or "Americano."

Although the American influence is greatly reduced in the cultural world, the vestiges enjoy extraordinary popularity with the people.

A 12-year-old American film will draw packed audiences for weeks while the newest products of Russian, Czechoslovak and Polish film studios play to half-empty theatres.

Similarly, favorite films of television viewers are American productions of the 1930s and the war years which are repeated interminably on late night shows and seem to be rapidly acquiring the status of folk legends.

Cubans have seen, for example, the John Huston masterpiece treasure of Sierra Madre 15 times, will sit through it happily a 16th time and tell anyone who cares to listen exactly what is going to happen next.

American jazz and pop music is still most popular and singers such as Frank Sinatra, Ella Fitzgerald and Peggy Lee are much admired.

Peronists Use De Gaulle Visit To Demonstrate

Argentine Police Fight Mob in Industrial City

ASUNCION (AP)—President de Gaulle basked today in the welcoming warmth of Paraguay, which greeted him with vivat and rose petals after a Peronist riot broke up his farewell appearance in Argentina.

The French chief of state arrived Tuesday night to visit Gen. Alfredo Stroessner, Paraguay's dictator president, on the eighth leg of his 10-country Latin American tour.

More than 20,000 residents of Paraguay's 450-year-old capital staged a well-organized welcome demonstration here. The scene contrasted sharply with the rock, tear-gas and gun battle that erupted a few hours earlier in the industrial city of Cordoba, a Peronist stronghold in Central Argentina.

At least 16 persons were wounded when armed police charged a Peronist mob that closed in on a car carrying de Gaulle and Argentine President Arturo Illia.

De Gaulle's short tour of Cordoba touched off three separate demonstrations by Peronists trying to use the French president's presence to draw attention to their campaign to bring exiled dictator Juan D. Peron back home.

Peronists broke through police lines and stopped the presidential car as it headed from the airport toward a plant that assembles Renault cars. Illia told reporters a woman demonstrator broke a window and he cut a finger. Police dispersed the mob with clubs and dogs.

At the auto plant workers belonging to the pro-Peron General Confederation of Labor shouted slogans hailing the former dictator.

Then de Gaulle's motorcade neared the Palace of Justice for a farewell luncheon, more than 1,000 cheering Peronists surged up one side of the street, pushing past police barriers and fire hoses. From the other side about 2,000 more Peronists approached.

Border guards could close the windows of the presidential car. demonstrators showered it with flowers and with leaflets. Police fired into the air and demonstrators reported to have returned the fire.

Authorities said a policeman was gravely wounded by a bullet in the chest, a woman was shot in the leg and another civilian received chest wounds. In the chaos, a second car carrying the presidents' wives ran into a ditch, but neither woman was injured.

Police finally opened a gap in the mob and Illia's car and the motorcade drove on to the luncheon.

'The Rock' Headache For U.K.

By CARMAN CUMMING

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—Gibraltar, a two - square-mile fortress guarding the entrance to the Mediterranean and the crossroads of Europe and Africa, is Britain's newest colonial headache at the United Nations.

It is an issue that calls up echoes of 18th century European power politics and modern overtones of the cold war and the British election.

Britain acquired the fortress almost by accident 260 years ago and now is under attack because it is moving the colony towards greater internal self-government.

The site of the debate is the General Assembly's 24-member colonialism committee, which has been discussing the future of "The Rock" for the last two weeks.

The accuser is Spain, and the nub of its case is that Britain agreed, under the Treaty of Utrecht of 1713, that if it ever pulled out of Gibraltar, the fortress would be returned to Spain.

Now, the Spaniards say, Britain is trying to perpetuate its toehold in Spain by moving the colony to a status of independent association with Britain.

BRITAIN DISAGREES

Britain replies that it does not accept the Spanish interpretation of the Treaty of Utrecht and plans to go on defending the colony.

In the middle are the fewer than 23,000 "Gibraltarians" who say they don't want to be turned over to Spain and are content with the way things now are going.

On the sidelines is the Soviet Union, claiming that Britain is trying to maintain a base threatening the "national liberation movements" of the peoples of Asia and Africa. The Russians demand that the base any be demilitarized, hinting that it might become a base for NATO nuclear submarines.

The UN debate has been marked by Spanish charges of British duplicity going all the way back to the Spanish War of Succession.

Spanish UN delegate Jaime de Pinies charged that Britain, after conquering the fortified promontory in 1704, expelled the true inhabitants and brought in a "prefabricated" population which has no right to "dispose of a part of Spain" as it pleases.

He warned that if Gibraltar receives self - determination without Britain withdrawal, Spain will cut vital economic links with the colony and declare its present "persons non grata" on Spanish territory.

Living Costs Decline

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's consumer price index declined slightly during August, due mainly to lower food prices, it was the second consecutive monthly drop.

At the start of September the index was 1.6-per-cent higher than a year earlier, in approximately the same period the index of industrial wages and salaries rose about 3.9 per cent.

The bureau of statistics on Tuesday placed the latest price index — based on 1949 prices equalling 100—at 135.6 on about Sept. 1 compared with 136.1 a month earlier, 136.2 on July 1 and 133.4 on Sept. 1 last year.

The industrial wages index for the last week of July—latest figure available—stood at 201.9 against 201.6 a month earlier and 194.0 a year earlier. That index also is based on 1949 conditions equalling 100.

Latest drop in the price index was caused chiefly by a month-to-month drop of 1.2 per cent in the food index, which accounts for about one-quarter of all spending covered in the over-all price yardstick.

SHOWS SEASONAL DROPS

DBS said this decline reflected "further marked seasonal price decreases for fresh fruits and vegetables." Lower prices also were reported for sugar, sirloin steak, ham, lamb and poultry. Prices were higher for eggs and most cuts of beef.

The food index was 132.7 on Sept. 1 compared with 133.1 a month earlier.

The index for recreation and reading, which accounts for about five per cent of expenditures covered in the total index, declined slightly to 130.4 due to sale prices for magazine subscriptions and a slight drop in the price of television repairs.

Other main indexes rose, except for the tobacco and alcohol component which was unchanged at 120.2.

The index for shelter and household operation rose slightly to 138.9 from 138.7 a month earlier. Rent and homeownership costs both rose. Furniture prices also went up.

The clothing index rose to 119.4 from 118.9. All clothing was involved in the price rise. So was footwear, piece goods and clothing services.

Higher prices for auto repairs, batteries, tires and lubrication outweighed a small decline in gasoline prices to push the transportation index up to 141.6 from 141.4 a month earlier.

The health and personal care index rose to 167.7 from 167.5.

Most of Dirty Jobs in Cyprus Are Given to Canadians to Do

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian government is becoming more and more provoked that the Canadian contingent in the United Nations force in Cyprus is continuing to be handed most of the force's dirty jobs, informed sources said Tuesday.

But there is nothing official the government can do about it because the 1,330-man Canadian contingent is under UN command.

Moreover, any formal action in this regard might appear to the other contributing nations as political jockeying for a preferred position in the force, informants said.

One of the chief causes of the present problem, in Canadian eyes, is that Canadian troops have been so efficient in UN peacekeeping operations that they almost automatically draw the toughest assignments.

External Affairs Minister Martin has been dropping hints — hoping they will reach the ears of the UN command—that the various tasks of the UN force in Cyprus should be rotated among the six national contingents. The other major units come from Britain, Ireland, Denmark, Sweden and Finland.

Sources said the government believes the Canadians have had long enough the nerve-wracking job of policing the 16-mile highway from Nicosia to Kyrenia.

Candidates' Wives Taking Active Part in Election

WASHINGTON (AI) — Candidates—and candidates' wives —scattered in all directions the day as the 1964 U.S. election campaign reached a furious pitch with less than four weeks remaining before the Nov. 3 vote.

While President Johnson swung into the midwest farm belt, his wife rode the Lady Bird Special, whistle - stopping through fifty southern communities that haven't seen a passenger train in years.

And while Johnson's Republican opponent, Senator Barry Goldwater, carried his campaign to New Jersey, Mrs. Goldwater took off on her first political trip, to her home town of Muncie, Ind.

Both candidates for vice-president were busy, too. And the wife of Republican representative William E. Miller was plugging for her husband in Alabama.

Johnson, in a speech prepared for a rally in Des Moines, Iowa, renewed his charge that Goldwater's one-time proposal to end farm subsidy programs would cut farm income in half and bankrupt one in five U.S. farmers.

He began a two-day campaign blitz of the midwest after joining forces with Mrs. Johnson Tuesday night in Raleigh, N.C., as she ended her first day of chugging through the southland.

Goldwater, meanwhile, moved into New Jersey, seeking to win back defecting Republicans. This was much the same formula he followed Tuesday in Pennsylvania.

The Arizona senator said the overriding issue of the campaign is "what kind of America we are going to have tomorrow." He also renewed his charge that the administration has soft on Communism.

He told the annual conference of United Press International editors and publishers that Washington that he had been advised it was "political suicide" to vote against the civil rights bill.

Mrs. Goldwater, adding a touch to political campaigning, made her political jaunt a speechless one. She concluded a two-minute visit to Ball State College in Muncie, but no speeches.

Mrs. Goldwater will attend "Peggy Goldwater Day" in her home town.

The Democratic vice - presidential nominee, Senator Hubert H. Humphrey, followed Goldwater today, before the conference of United Press International editors.

Humphrey, in his prepared speech, contended that Goldwater "wishes to back the Soviet Union into a corner where its only alternative would be retreat or nuclear war."

He said Goldwater doesn't seem to realize that "such juvenile games of nuclear 'chicken' will eventually result in annihilation of both players."

Meanwhile, Miller was, campaigning in Alabama.

Nasser Holds Tshombe Hostage Because Embassy Is Surrounded

CAIRO (AP)—President Gamal Abdel Nasser's government reported holding Congolese Premier Moise Tshombe a hostage today until his government calls off gendarmes surrounding the United Arab Republic's embassy in Leopoldville.

Tshombe abandoned his attempt to attend the conference of non-aligned nations Tuesday night after the conference told him he would not be admitted. He said he would leave for home immediately.

However, the newspaper Al Ahram, which has close links to Nasser, reported the U.A.R. government had told Tshombe he would remain in the guarded Aruba Palace on the outskirts of Cairo until the U.A.R. Embassy to the Congolese capital was freed.

Reports from Leopoldville Tuesday said gendarmes surrounded the U.A.R. Embassy and halted all movement in and out of the building. The reports said the action was taken to protect the embassy from mob action that was feared because of Tshombe's treatment in Cairo.

The Algerian Embassy also was cordoned off. Algerian President Ahmed Ben Bella having been a leader in the move to bar Tshombe from the non-aligned conference.

Leaders of African states who oppose Tshombe of being a stooge for the Western powers pushed through a resolution at the closed conference session Tuesday forbidding his attendance.

Indian Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri ended a three-day state visit with Nasser before attending the 46-nation conference. In a joint communique he said India supports the "just claims of Arab countries to the waters of the River Jordan and the rights of the Palestinian refugees."

Farm Bill Gets Approval

OTTAWA (CP)—Amid an outburst of old-fashioned sock-'em Prairie politics, the Commons passed a major farm bill and gave first reading to a second Tuesday.

A hard - fought debate spanning seven sitting days ended abruptly when final approval was given unanimously to a bill providing for government loans of up to $100,000 to syndicates of three or more farmers who wish to buy and use farm machinery on a joint basis.

Queen and Prince Trade Quips With Canada's Talented Group

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip traded quotes and quips with some of Canada's most talented performers here Tuesday night following a royal variety show in the Confederation Theatre.

At a half-hour backstage reception, the Queen and her husband bowled over the assembled performers with their charm and wit.

The performers later told all at a press conference, providing some of the most vivid glimpses of the Queen's personality so far on this Royal visit.

For example:

The Queen to comedian Anna Russell re the strange noises the performer made during a "folksong": "I can make those noises myself at home, but I haven't do it with a tiara on."

Actor Lorne Greene of "Bonanza" fame said the Queen exclaimed to him: "I've never seen you so dressed up."

He asked "Do you watch the show?"

She replied, "Oh yes, always on the weekends, with the children."

Montreal playwright and actor Gratien Gelinas said he congratulated the Queen on her "wonderful French accent".

Comedian Wayne Stradfoot said he traded opinion with the Queen on where is the best spot to sit in a theatre.

"She said she preferred the centre balcony, but that in this theatre the balcony is awfully far away from the stage."

Prince Philip advised the performers, a folk-singing group to go to England. They reported that he said: "Because the Beatles are on the wane."

Michel Cartier, director of the singers and dancers Les Feux-Follets, (The Will-O'-the Wisps) said the Queen spoke to him in French about the various elements that make up Canadian folk music. "And Prince Philip wanted me to show him how to play the spoons, so he could show Prince Charles how to do it."

Negro opera singer Portia White of Halifax said the Queen was particularly interested in the fact that she chose to sing a Scottish song about "Bonnie George Campbell."

"I said that I was from Nova Scotia and that mostly all us Nova Scotians are Scotish," said Miss White.

Visits House Where Union First Explored

State Dinner and Ball Close Memorable Visit

By JAMES NELSON

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP)—A drizzle of rain stopped long enough today for the Queen and Prince Philip to make their second open-air appearance of the Royal Tour on the balcony of Province House, Prince Edward Island's legislative building, and scene of the first meeting in 1864 of the Fathers of Confederation.

But a massive outdoor gathering of Charlottetown and district school children was moved inside the city's fair-grounds Arena. The Queen, wearing a simple turquoise wool tweed ensemble, presented senior boy scout and girl guide awards before a crowd of about 5,000 children.

Driving from the royal yacht Britannia in Charlottetown harbor to the legislature, the fair grounds, and the residence of Lieutenant - Governor W. J. MacDonald, the Queen and her husband acknowledged cheering crowds of their closed limousine.

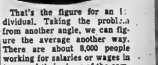
Despite the showery weather, thousands thronged the route. The crowd packing the main intersection in front of Province House sent up a roar of welcome when the Queen stepped onto a balcony.

Inside the legislature, the Queen spent several minutes visiting the chamber where in 1864, the first meeting of the Fathers of Confederation was held. She and Prince Philip signed the province's golden guest book—as she did as Princess Elizabeth in 1951.

PUBLIC HOLIDAY

Today was proclaimed a public holiday in Charlottetown. All business establishments closed for the day.

After the lieutenant - governor's luncheon, the visitors had a free afternoon. A state dinner and grand ball conclude the island visit. Tonight, the Queen and her husband sail all night aboard the royal yacht Britannia for a weekend visit to Quebec City.



At the children's rally in the arena, a formal address was read and presented to the Queen by Linda Matheson, 16, who conducted it. The Queen's pledge of 4 - H clubs — head, heart, hands and health dedi-

GOAL $106,000

Collected $20,000

Ever wondered what you should give the Belleville United Appeal? An Appeal worker yesterday balanced out Belleville's personal income, (about $48,000,000) against the number of people paying income tax in town, (about 11,000) and the needs of the appeal. The result was worked out at about one-half of one percent of each person's income. For a $100 a week man, that means a donation of 50 cents a week. Not much compared with the one-tenth of income the Bible says we should give, but it's enough to ma? Belleville a better place.

That's the figure for an individual. Taking the problem from another angle, we can figure the average another way. There are about 8,000 people working at salaries or wages in town and their share of the campaign goal is roughly $90,000. Dividing the 8,000 people into $80,000 we find that the average donation in, for example, a factory or office should be about $10. Some people need not be ashamed of giving less, of course, and some people should be ashamed if they do not give a lot more. Divide your group's gift by ten, and if the result is less than the number of people in your group, the group is not pulling its weight.

Largest single giving group reported this morning to Belleville United Appeal is still the C.N.R. employees, with a total of more than $3,500 among about 900 people. Largest gifts per person seem to be coming from the Ontario Hydro Office, where about 250 employees have raised $2,200 and are still working.

Fire Prevention Week Being Observed in City

Fire drills and inspections are the order of the day this week as city firemen carry out a detailed program in connection with Fire Prevention Week.

Fire Chief Gerald Vance said today that special fire drills are being held at all city elementary and high schools, as well as at public schools in Thurlow township and at Belleville General Hospital.

This afternoon nurses at the hospital will be lectured on fire prevention and will be given instruction on the proper use of fire extinguishers.

Inspection of all factories, churches and public buildings is also being carried out in the interests of fire safety.

Along with school fire drills, movies on fire prevention are being shown at all public schools while Thursday night at the Moira Street firehall, similar films will be shown, starting at 7.30. The public is invited.

HOLD OPEN HOUSE

All this week "open house" is being held at the two city firehalls with residents invited to inspect the modern fire-fighting equipment and to meet the firemen.

Members of the Industrial Accident Prevention Association meeting in Belleville last night were lectured on fire prevention.

Guest speaker for the meeting was G. A. Pelletier, Chief of the Fire Engineering Division of the Ontario Fire Marshall's Department.

Mr. Pelletier spoke on fire hazards and the fire dangers from careless smoking.

Labor Council May Change Meeting Date

Belleville and District Labor Council has received a change of its meeting date, because not enough members have been attending recent meetings. The general meeting, formerly held on the third Monday of each month, has since spring been held on the first Tuesday of the month. The change was made originally to accommodate the schedule of Canadian Labor Congress representative, Henry Nokes of Peterborough, who is unable to be in Belleville during the second half of each month.

Attendance at council meetings has dropped since the change, and delegates last night discussed possible alternate dates. The council decided last night to take no immediate action in the absence of the president, who was unable to attend the meeting, and in the absence of Nokes himself, who is at the O.F.L. conference in Parry Bay this week. Most members were reluctant to consider a meeting date while Nokes, who has no official status in the council but who can be asked for advice, from attending

Monday evening the Belleville Branch of the Ontario Public School Men Teachers' Federation, District 4, held its first fall meeting at Sinclair Place. A fine meal was served to the enjoyment of the 24 members present.

Clarke and John (Ted) Shaw of King George School were presented and were being congratulated by President Claude Hennessy, were officially presented with their prizes.

Start Planning For Visit by Santa Claus

With only 78 more days until Christmas, it is that time of year when the Belleville Santa Claus Parade Committee begins to make plans for the traditional Santa Claus Parade.

Next Monday evening the committee will be meeting at No. 1 Fire Hall on West Moira Street at which time all interested citizens are urged to attend.

The meeting will be held at 8:00 p.m. A lot of hard work is required and the more people who participate in getting plans underway, the easier it is to ensure a good parade.

Last year saw one of the best parades ever to be held in Belleville, and with the co-operation and assistance of the public, it will be possible for the 1964 committee to make this year's parade even better.

Bank Accountant Being Sought for Alleged Theft

TORONTO (CP) — Metropolitan Toronto police are looking for a 27-year-old bank accountant from a branch of the Bank of Montreal in suburban Leaside in connection with a possible shortage of up to $100,000.

A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Robert Donald Cummings charging him with theft of $17,000 in cheques representing travel cheques.

Police said they believe the man may have left for the Caribbean or South America.

They said Cummings disappeared Sept. 24 after a trip to the East Coast to meet a girl friend returning from Europe.

Bank examiners began a routine check while he was away and they said Cummings had obtained three travel cheques on credit to make the trip.

Two cheques were traced to a Toronto clothing store where a man purchased a new wardrobe.

Police said Cummings had been employed by the bank for nine years. He worked in Ottawa and Kingston and for a time was acting manager of the Leaside branch.

Town to Have Separate Public School Inspector

TRENTON — Trenton's public schools have now become big business in the eyes of the provincial legislature.

At the request of the local school board, Ontario's Minister of Education, the Hon. Wm. Davis, has designated the town a "municipal inspectorate," to become effective January 1, 1965. The board has been directed to advertise for a public school inspector, to serve the town exclusively. For a number of years, an area inspector has divided his time between the town and other school areas.

The man who gets the job, will, in all probability, have come up through the ranks . . . first as teacher . . . then as principal . . . and passed examinations in connection with special courses.

Trenton now has more than 2,800 public school students, and a public school, teaching staff of 103. Hiring of a new public school inspector is based more on the numbers of the teaching staff than on the number of students.

Ice Surface In Gardens Ready For Use

TRENTON — The ice surface at the community gardens is in and ready to use . . . in fact, skating has already started, with public skating sessions scheduled for today and Saturday (afternoons), and the kiddies skate free, courtesy of the Trenton Recreation Committee. Lessons are promised.

Minor Hockey League practices have started. This year, due to the late start, no games up for hockey.

Arena manager, Ronald Thornton, says the applications for ice time this year are "better than ever," with the arena concession hard pressed to fit everyone into available ice time.

Wednesday afternoons, from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m., are being "assigned" to ladies for mothers to bring younger children down for a skating session. Thursdays, from 4.30 p.m. to 5.30 p.m. the arena is given over to the schools, with the ice time paid for by the Trenton Board of Education. Private parties, for hours, children from St. Peter's School may use the ice.

The arena auditorium, upstairs, has been redecorated and available to groups for banquets, meetings, etc., at a rental price of $15 for the first hour and $10 for each succeeding hour. Special arrangements can be made for evening rates. The auditorium is licenceable. Groups, such as Girl Guides, are given a special price.

Business Girls To Hold Spiel On November 21

TRENTON — A representative group of Trenton business girls met this week to plan for the annual Business Girls' Curling Bonspiel, which will be held at the Trenton Curling Club, Nov. 21. Membership in the local club is 22. Mrs. Amy Wills is chairman; in charge of prizes is Mrs. Dorothy Lane and in charge of entertainment committee, Michelle Mason and Betty Hyde. The one-day event draws lady curlers from such places as Toronto; Waterloo, Kitchener-Waterloo, Lindsay and Peterborough and 16 entries are expected this year.

Meanwhile, the ladies' division of the curling club, with 65 members, is planning an active season. "Get Acquainted Night," Nov. 9, will see the first curling. Mrs. Ruth Steerle is president of the ladies' division.

The first event at the local club will be the opening industrial curling night, Nov. 6, with Mayor James Mandrona throwing the first stone to start the season.

RCAF Member Fined $200 for Impairment

TRENTON — To paraphrase a Gilbert and Sullivan classic, "a policeman's lot is not (always) a happy one."

Sgt. Gordon Steenburg testified in Trenton court yesterday that on the evening of Oct. 4, while trying to make an arrest, he was set upon by the man he was trying to Judge to "come quietly," and other members of the man's party. The sergeant said Joseph Fortin, RCAF, charged with impaired driving, struck him, and that other persons who piled out of the Fortin car had stamped on the back of his knee, while he was holding Fortin on the ground, struck him on the shoulder and torn his tunic.

The sergeant had followed the Fortin car at speeds upwards of 60 mph. in a 30 mph. zone. When he stopped Fortin and asked him to produce his licence, the accused was reported to have said to the passenger in his car, "Show him your licence. I'm not going to show him mine."

Fortin was fined $200 and ordered to pay the sergeant's cleaning bill for his uniform . . . and told he was "lucky" by Magistrate T. Y. Wills.

APPLIES FOR APPROVAL

Clerk-comptroller O. W. Larry said yesterday he had sent off an application for approval for an addition of two classrooms to the Dufferin and North Trenton Public School to the Ontario Municipal Board on Friday and expected an answer any day now.

Once the approval is forthcoming, the Mirco-Wyatt firm, the successful contender for the contract, will start on the $95,000 addition.

Government grants will amount to around $28,000, leaving $67,000 to finance the remainder, $66,000, by debenture, repayable in 20 years.

Killaloe Was Coldest Place In Province

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Cloudless skies sent temperatures plunging to record minimums for Oct. 7 in many Ontario communities today.

Coldest place in the province was Killaloe, northwest of Ottawa, where the mercury hit 11 degrees, lowest October reading there since 1952 when it was 10 degrees.

It sank to a frigid 19 degrees at Timmins and at Trenton airport, the city's lowest October temperature since a minimum was recorded at 28 degrees, 22 degrees, three degrees lower than the previous Oct. 7 minimum, set in 1956.

The minimum was 20 degrees at Trenton, compared to the previous record minimum for Oct. 7 of 22 degrees in 1935. At Timmins it was 19 degrees, one degree lower than the 1946 record. North Bay recorded 23 degrees, beating the previous 1954 low by two degrees. In Hamilton, the mercury reached 26 degrees, compared with 31 degrees in 1956.

Cloudiness was expected over much of the province today, bringing warmer temperatures and chances of light snowflurries in scattered areas.

The cold snap missed the St. Catharines fruit belt where it would have ruined the one-third of the grape crop that remains to be harvested. Temperatures only dropped to about 35 degrees there.

Shastri Against China Making Nuclear Arms

CAIRO (Reuters) — Indian Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri, saying China is about to make a nuclear test, asked the summit meeting of nonaligned nations today to send a delegation to China to persuade the Chinese to cease producing nuclear weapons.

Shastri emphasized that his peaceful purposes could help end Sino-Indian dispute, which he said will be solved, but because of the nuclear threat to humanity.

India uses nuclear power for peaceful purposes only and its scientists have strict instructions not to make devices which could be used for anything else, the Indian leader declared.

Rockefeller Backs Goldwater

ALBANY, N Y (AP) - Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller says New York state Republicans are "pledged" to support candidates from Barry and Bill, right down the line, all the way and that is what we are going to do."

The governor reaffirmed Tuesday night state Republican support of the party's national ticket, Senator Barry Goldwater and Representative William E. Miller.

Rockefeller, who failed in a bid to win the Republican nomination for himself, referred to Goldwater three times in a speech at a regional strategy conference of Republican candidates and party leaders.

He also praised — and also said of Goldwater, whom he had criticized sharply before the Republican convention:

"Senator Goldwater is a man of great courage and integrity who hasn't ducked issues."

U.S., Britain Reject Charges Of Russians

MOSCOW (Reuters) — The United States and Britain Tuesday rejected Russian charges that three American and one British military attache engaged in espionage while traveling more than 4,000 miles by train in the Soviet Union.

The U.S. embassy here said it did not accept the validity of the charges.

In London, Britain rejected the Russian charge that its attache had become engaged in espionage while on the trip

The rejections followed Russian protests to the U.S. and Britain and were contained in notes handed over at the foreign office here Tuesday.

The notes followed American and British protests last week against an incident in which the hotel rooms of the four attaches were forcibly entered and searched by Russian officials.

HEADED FOR TOKYO

The incident allegedly took place on the night of Sept. 28 in Khabarovsk while the four men were on their way to Tokyo. They arrived in Japan by ship Saturday, and then proceeded to Hong Kong.

The Russians said the four engaged in espionage while travelling to the Russian far east port of Nahodka.

The American attaches were named as Col. George A. Alvrey, the army attache; Maj. James F. Smith, assistant attache, and Lt.-Col. Karl R Liewer, assistant military attache.

The British attache was Lt.-Cmdr. Nigel N Laville.

The Russian notes said passengers on the train reported that a "group of foreigners" systematically photographed industrial plants, railway junctions, bridges, and made marked maps.

The notes said among property confiscated from the diplomats were 900 photographs and 26 notebooks, the Soviet news agency Tass said.

New Pesticide May Be Harmful To Bird Life

TORONTO (CP) —A wildlife expert said Tuesday that a new pesticide, tested in New Brunswick during the summer as a possible replacement for DDT may be less harmful to fish but more deadly to birds in areas sprayed.

Bruce S. Wright, director of the northeastern wildlife district in Fredericton, told the Canadian Institute of Forestry's annual meeting that the effect of phosphamidon on birds was "quite startling" no official figures are yet available.

The Canadian wildlife service is expected to report its findings of the experiment—the first detailed phosphamidon study undertaken in Canada.

Mr. Wright said that 160,000 acres of choice waterbirds were sprayed with phosphamidon in June while 1,800,000 acres were sprayed with DDT. Both substances are used to combat spruce budworms.

He explained that the study of pesticide after - effects is complicated by the fact that birds in the New Brunswick area have, in many cases, migrated from areas in the United States which have been treated with other chemicals against fire ants. He said birds arriving from these areas have two or more of the chemicals in their bodies.

Election Leaders Heckled

By ALAN WALKER

LONDON (CP) — Labor Leader Harold Wilson was called a toffee-nosed, puffed-up adder. A little later Prime Minister Douglas-Home's evening speech was nearly drowned out by jeers.

The issues may be less than earth-shaking but as the campaign approaches the final week today nobody can complain about a complete lackluster British election.

Sir Alec Douglas - Home tried to tell a Leeds audience that socialism would ruin Britain. Most members of the audience had trouble hearing because of catcalls, and the prime minister said after his speech:

"I think the Labor Party must be very hard up if they have to hire these kind of people in order to prevent people from hearing the serious issues before the country."

During his speech Douglas-Home said the country that really experimented with socialism in Russia, "and having learnt their lesson they now are galloping back to the system of enterprise and reward."

He spoke in Bradford, in the middle of the textile belt of Britain. His hearers consistently drowned out his words with cries of "rubbish."

Meanwhile Wilson was telling a Coventry audience that the election campaign had been recently transformed into something literally because there was a general realization "that the economic success story the Tories hoped to fight on was a phoney."

Earlier in the day Frank Byers launched a startling personal attack on Wilson at the daily Liberal Party press conference. He called the Labor leader "a puffed - up adder," "pompous and stuffy" and "toffee-nosed."

When Wilson was at Oxford University he was briefly a Liberal. Byers, Liberal Party campaign manager in this election, said Wilson had deteriorated since he left the Liberal Party. "It shows how people go downhill when they leave," he said.

The Liberals held seven seats in the last Parliament and Wilson contended after he was told what Byers had said: "The Liberals had better get busy defending their seats."

At prorogation, standing of the 630 seat Commons was: Conservatives and allies 333; Labor 260; Liberals 7; independent 2 with two vacancies.

COLLECTION DAY, THURSDAY

Many Will Vote For Candidates Who Won't Sit

BELFAST (Reuters) — Thousands of Northern Ireland's population will vote in the Oct. 25 British general election for Republican candidates who, if elected, will not go to the Houses of Parliament in London.

The Republican party, which wants union of Northern Ireland now part of Britain, with the independent Irish Republic to its south, has candidates contesting all 12 Irish parliamentary constituencies.

Among them are several former leaders of the outlawed Irish Republican Army who have served prison terms for political offences.

They want to break the connection with England and are pledged to boycott the British parliament.

Political temperatures, particularly in Belfast, the capital, were boosted to tension point by four nights of rioting last week in which Republicans clashed with police raiding a party headquarters to seize a banned Irish Republican tricolor flag.

There are 39 candidates for the 12 Northern Ireland parliamentary seats — 12 Unionists (Conservatives), 12 Republicans, 10 Labor, four Liberal and one Republican Labor. The governing Unionists are expected to win at least 10. They won 12 seats in 1960.

One Republican candidate, building inspector Thomas Mitchell, was elected for the Mid-Ulster constituency in 1955 while serving a 10-year prison sentence for his part in an I.R.A. raid on a British military barracks.

Disqualified, he was again elected in a byelection and finally unseated on a petition.

Japanese Honor Missionary

BROCKVILLE (CP) — Eight members of an 80-piece Japanese symphony orchestra stood at attention and applauded Tuesday and paid tribute to a Canadian Methodist missionary who spent 38 years in their country.

They had intended to play at the funeral of the late Rev. C. John L. Bates, but were prevented by inclement weather.

Instead, they participated in a memorial ceremony in a small church and then placed a floral tribute on the lid of the Wolford Township cemetery, 30 miles northeast of here, where Mr. Bates was buried last December. He was 96.

The touring orchestra, led by Professor N. Tamabayashi and currently touring Canada, is composed of graduates of Kwansei Gakuin University in Kobe of which Mr. Bates was president from 1920 to 1939.

Let Catholics Get Orthodox Sacraments

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican ecumenical council voted today to allow Roman Catholics to receive certain sacraments in Eastern Orthodox Churches.

This historic reversal of Roman Catholic policy on intercommunion was extended to the Protestant and Anglican churches.

However, the worldwide gathering of Roman Catholic prelates, voting on a draft decree on Christian unity, agreed that despite different conceptions, the very existence of sacraments in both Catholic and Protestant churches should help in the drive toward Christian unity.

These points were contained in the third and final chapter in the "de oecumenisme" (on unity) schema. With today's vote, provisions in all three chapters now have won overwhelming approval, marking another major milestone on the road to closer inter-christian relations.

The first chapter, setting forth unity principles, declares the church partly to blame for the discords of Christianity.

The second outlines a program of common prayer and public co-operation between Catholics and other Christians.

The council approved a day deal with specific relations with the Orthodox of the East and the non-Catholic churches of the West.

Plowing Match To Be Opened By Premier

PETERBOROUGH (CP)—The 1964 International Plowing Match, sponsored by Ontario Plowmen's Association, gets under way here today with Premier John Robarts handling official opening festivities.

The match will be held just west of the city limits where, over the next week, workmen have been erecting tents and setting up machinery and equipment displays.

Space has been sold to almost 200 firms that cater to the farm and home trade. They will display everything from tractors, plows and combines to fertilizers, farm publications and hybrid corn. Virtually every farm machinery manufacturer in Canada as well as several from the U.S. will have displays.

Plots of land classes in which entries have been received for plowing events, not including special matches.

Firm and Union Disagree Over Profit Sharing

DETROIT (AP) — American Motors Corporation and the United Auto Workers union today were reported in disagreement over the future role of a unique profit-sharing provision in their labor contract.

Douglas Fraser, head of the UAW negotiating team, told reporters the company had made a proposal earlier to the union paralleling the ones accepted from the automotive big three of General Motors, Ford and Chrysler.

But, Fraser said, the AMC offer included a proposal charging the costs of higher pensions and improved benefits for retirees to the profit - sharing plan, under which a percentage of profits is placed in a fund which buys stock for the company's 26,000 UAW - represented workers.

Fraser said both sides have agreed on the principle of profit sharing. The union, however is not willing to accept a proposal which would charge retirees the economic costs off to the fund, he added.

The AMC contract with the union expires Oct. 15.

Maw, Paw Refuse to Honor Sons

ALBA, Mo. (AP) — The mayor of Alba (pop 336) has flatly rejected a proposal that he issue a proclamation honoring this town's most illustrious citizens.

He said he'd be embarrassed by a proclamation honoring infielders Ken Boyer of St. Louis Cardinals and Cleto Boyer of New York Yankees.

The mayor is Vern Boyer, father of the baseball players.

How about the city clerk, would she issue a proclamation? No, said the clerk.

She's the players' mother.

British Think French Speech Eased Tension

LONDON (CP)—The Queen's speech in French, broadcast across Canada, kept the Royal Tour on British front pages today and prompted one of the few French-language headlines ever seen in a British national daily.

"Vive la Reine!" were the words The Daily Sketch over a picture of the Queen in Charlottetown. The Sketch suggested Tuesday that the Queen should speak in French in Quebec.

In a front-page report of the Queen's use of both French and English in her reply to Prime Minister Pearson's welcoming speech at the opening of the Confederation Memorial Building, Sketch correspondent Henry Thody says some of the tension surrounding the tour immediately seemed to evaporate.

The Daily Telegraph and The Sun both carry prominent front - page reports about the speech in French. The Express splashes a picture of the Queen "serene and happy" in her bullet - proof Cadillac, explaining: "You've never seen the Queen in a setting like this."

Several newspapers comment that the strict security measures in force even in Prince Edward Island seemed to dampen the crowd's welcome.

Britain's commercial televi sion network highlighted the French - Canadian extremist problem Tuesday in its weekly current affairs program, World in Action. Separatist sympathizers were interviewed with their backs to the camera. A young separatist leader described plans for a meeting Friday, on the eve of the Queen's visit to Quebec City, to protest a demonstration on her arrival.

Goldwater Claims Johnson Delegates A-Arms Authority

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Barry Goldwater says President Johnson has delegated authority for emergency use of nuclear weapons to the supreme commander of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The Republican presidential nominee said Tuesday that while Johnson was denouncing him for suggesting the NATO commander be given this authority, the administration already had taken the step he proposed.

In his speech before some 500 United Press International editors and publishers, Goldwater made it public a charge he has stated privately for some weeks.

Meanwhile, former president Dwight D. Eisenhower said: "I have always deplored the injection into a political campaign of sensitive matters that touch upon our national security."

But Eisenhower added in a statement Tuesday from Gettysburg, Pa.: "Nevertheless, I feel entitled to a knowledge of all the facts that could safely be revealed in this matter."

Eisenhower said he issued his statement to clarify remarks he made Monday in a New York after release of a Republican task force report on nuclear weapons. He said his views had been misinterpreted.

Goldwater said Johnson already has given the NATO commander authority to use nuclear weapons where there is an emergency and no chance to reach the president.

Johnson has said this authority belongs only to the president.

Goldwater said the administration has been "charging me with virtual madness in suggesting that there badly needs to be a clearly understood delegation of authority in this field."

Ice on Puddles As Mercury Drops to 23

It was ice on the roadside puddles this morning as the mercury dropped to its lowest point of the season — a chilly 23 degrees.

Pump house officials said today that the 23 degree temperature this early in October is considerably below the normal for this time of year.

Last year the coldest reading throughout all of October was 33 degrees.

The Black Horse Is Mounted

Time has mounted the black horse of famine.

The dread race has started and man has already lost the first lap.

In the twelve months ending July 15, 1964, the increase in the world's population outstripped the increase in the world's food production.

Famine, which has always grazed at random over much of the earth, now feels the spurs of geometric progression applied in earnest.

The danger of world over-population is no longer a threat for the theologians and the scientists to debate, talking wisely about moral problems and the opportunities open to man to make the earth and its waters yield him more from the horn of plenty to feed the multiplying millions.

The race has started.

It is doubtful whether there will be any turning back.

The world's per capita food production declined in the twelve months ending this past mid-summer, despite an increase in actual output. The world's fish catch, for instance, was three per cent higher than in 1962. The land yielded more generously in some regions. In North America production rose four per cent, in Oceania three per cent. But these increases were of no avail. The cradle outpaced the hoe. This did not come without warning. For five years, now the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization, there had been no increase in world agricultural production per capita. This in spite of the efforts, now proven woefully too little and likely to prove even more woefully late, to spread the use of modern machinery and the benefits of fertilizers.

Significantly, gains in food production were slightest in precisely those regions where food shortages have been most prevalent and where population increase has been most rapid. The gains in production were only one per cent in Latin America and two per cent in the Far East, excepting China. North America and Oceania, where larger increases in food production were reported, were already well fed. Food surpluses in these areas could, theoretically, be used to fight famine in those regions where food is shortest. But in practice this is not so simple. During 1963-64 there was a further reduction of unsold stocks of agricultural products, with "surpluses" of wheat and dairy products falling, but stocks of coarse grains increasing. Getting food from a surplus area to one of shortage is not always simple.

The dark horse is mounted and spurred. The other horses of the Apocalypse will surely follow its lead, if it is permitted to run wild. And it may already be too late to make it answer the bit. The population explosion, which we comfortably imagined we could leave to our children or grandchildren to tame, has started the stampede.

Nor should we in well-fed, increasingly productive North America delude ourselves that we shall escape from the hoofs of the Four Horsemen if they are permitted to ride unchecked. If they are to be forced to rein in, decisive action will have to be taken, not a few decades hence, but between now and the beginning of the seventies.

Now Air Canada

Trans-Canada Airways is now Air Canada.

The change in name makes sense.

It is a long time since the TCA confined itself to services bounded by the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. "Trans-Canada," which once served to stress the extent of its services, now conceals them.

The trouble is that Trans-Canada Airways long since ceased to be known by that name to most Canadians. It is known everywhere in this country as TCA—and neat and descriptive as Air Canada may be it will be a long time before TCA ceases to be the common name used by Canadians.

Something Wrong Here

A man is innocent until he is proven guilty.

But even to the most ardent supporters of that approach to the administration of justice, there will seem to be something wrong about the way the State of Mississippi applies the principle.

A sheriff was charged, with others, with beating a Negro in an effort to deprive him of his rights. The sheriff has been released on bail —and is doing business at his usual stand, as sheriff.

If you were a Negro living within that sheriff's jurisdiction, would you feel happy about the situation?

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

Oct. 7th, 1944

Prime Minister Mackenzie King, has expressed the appreciation of the Canadian government for the "devoted service" given by the newspaper boys of Canada during the present war. The expression of appreciation made public last night on the eve of the observance of National Newspaperboy Day follows:

"I have been interested to learn that Oct. 7 is being celebrated both in Canada and the United States as National Newspaperboy Day.

I should like to take advantage of this occasion to express the appreciation which is felt by the government, and, I am sure, by the millions of Canadians of the devoted service given by the newspaperboys of Canada during the present war. In wartime, the regular and prompt dissemination of the news is of even greater importance than in peacetime. To the thousands of boys, who, day after day in all kinds of weather bring us our daily papers, the people of Canada owe a debt of gratitude.

Ever Enjoy A 'Corn Boil?'

Lethbridge Herald

Go to a "corn roast" in Alberta and they put the corn in boiling water and boil it for a bit and then you eat boiled corn and remind yourself you never had a better feeling in your mouth, and then you get ready to leave and say to the next fellow, "hasn't it been a good corn roast?"

A column about Senator Goldwater in the Washington Post of Sept. 14 says: "Senator Goldwater, not always a happy warrior on the campaign trail, was ebullient last Friday as he ended a six-state tour with a speech at the annual Republican Corn Boil in Oregon, Illinois."

Corn boil? The annual Republican corn boil? Who ever heard of a corn boil? Don't they mean corn roast, which is where you eat boiled corn? The Americans sure have a funny way of putting things.

Today Spies Make Policy

Toronto Star

Espionage and policy-making are two separate functions of a modern government — and they can be mixed only at peril to the nation. The trouble is that, in our turbulent age, the spy has been increasingly usurping the job of the policy - maker.

This has been especially true of that giant of the cloak-and-dagger trade, the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency. Since it is accountable to no one except the president, not even the American lawmakers know what makes it tick. It is widely agreed though that the CIA is the biggest, richest with a budget probably as high as $3 billion a year and perhaps boldest venture into espionage in the history of man. If size and money mean anything the CIA should make the U.S. government the best-informed in the world.

But — to the alarm of many in the United States and of its allies — the CIA will not confine itself to the business of un-earthing secrets. Its goals have become far more ambitious, and it has developed a good rationale for what it is doing.

As one of its top agents, Willard Matthias, explained it not long ago, the fear of setting off a nuclear holocaust has made the great powers reluctant to use even their conventional weapons to snuff out local crises. They are, therefore, likely to engage in the safer, cheaper and neater bugger - mugger operations you indulge once the course of events in a desired direction." The best way is to give covert help — cash, or guns, or both — to some hand-picked local faction or leader.

Such operations no longer belong in the realm of information-gathering. They are now in the business of making and breaking governments, of financing putsches and sponsoring foreign politicos. Unfortunately, when the CIA succeeds, the United States often finds itself in an uneasy alliance with blackguards and fascists of the worst lands. Thus, what begins as a spy's job ends as a U.S. policy. The cold war has made intrigue a part of our life and politics. But to allow the intrigue-maker to make policy is to invite disaster.

The time has come for the president himself to define clearly the spy's task — and then see to it that he does not meddle in policy-making.

Leaving the Land

Sherbrooke Record

Some forms of farm assistance may always be necessary. As the population moves, many farms are being assisted to maintain operations that are either economic or personal drive. Moreover, when a farmer "leaves the land" the land itself is not necessarily removed to go to waste if it is good land and in a location that makes farming if an economic proposition.

What often happens is that the land is absorbed into a large and more efficient farm operation. It is made to produce more with comparatively less expenditure of manpower and equipment.

X-Rays Had Nothing to Do With Son's Mental Illness

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: My 26-year-old son started acting strangely five years ago. He had always been such a wonderful person, friendly, gentle and well-liked. Then his personality seemed to change gradually and he became so unlike himself it was hard to believe.

We went to a psychiatrist who did nothing but talk. He finally decided to join the army and the doctor thought it might be good for him.

He served three years, two overseas. After returning home he seemed normal for a short time but in seven months he entered a private hospital for psychiatric treatment. In three weeks he was much improved, but he should have stayed longer. He refused to take his medicine after coming home, and gradually went back to not being himself.

It finally became impossible to live around him. We were afraid he might do something drastic, so we just had to get a court order for him to be confined. After several months of treatment he is his old loveable self again. So far he is taking his medicine and we pray he continues to do so.

One thing I am wondering about: When he was 18 he had X-ray treatments for acne. Would that be in any way connected with his trouble now? We have tried for years to find some reason. His condition is schizophrenia, they say. — A. B. C.

I am sorry your letter almost in full because it is such a vivid example of how mental illness sometimes reveals itself — gradually.

It is natural for people to try to find some reason for their condition, but they rarely can. (Dismiss the X-ray idea completely).

While we know a good deal about mental (or rather emotional) illness, there is still a vast amount we don't know. We must learn.

Basically, let's put it this way: Each individual has a certain level of emotional pressure which he can tolerate. Some a little, some a lot.

We do not all like or dislike the same things. And so, for each of us, the thing that creates tension or emotional pressure can be different. So in emotional pressure can be different. So in emotional pressure can be different. So in

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP)—In its lowest morning volume since Aug. 25, the stock market today declined fractionally for the second time this week.

Volume in the first hour of trading was 665,000 shares, the lowest point volume has reached in the first hour since Aug. 25, when it totalled 602,000 shares in the first hour. Volume at this time Tuesday was 716,000 shares.

The drop in trading represents a decline in the popularity of speculative issues. Western Decalta and Leitch fell five cents each to $2.35 and $3.30, while Turnbull dropped 11 cents to $1.05.

Industrials were no better. Algoma Steel dropped ¼ to 44 even on news that the firm will ask shareholders for approval to split its common shares on a five-for-one basis Dec. 4.

Most other sections of the market were quiet. Kilembe Copper rose 25 cents to a high of $1.25 in light turnover. Golds and western oils were dull.

On index, industrials fell .16 f. 162.61 but the TSE index .13 to 154.06. Golds fell .83 to 143.75, base metals were unchanged at 70.65 and western oils rose .36 to 95.55.

On Tuesday the market produced its lowest volume since Jan. 21, 1964, in a day marked by only small fractional advances.

Volume Tuesday was 2,612,000 shares, the lowest turnover the TSE has recorded since Jan. 21 when volume totalled 2,446,000 shares. Volume Monday was 2,351,000 shares.

The industrial list advanced slightly with a number of key industrial issues leading the rise by attaining 1964 highs.

Great Lakes Paper added ¼ to 28 and Steamship Lines ¼ to 31¼, and Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce ¼ to 67¾.

Some issues took heavy losses. Consumers Gas led the leaders, losing 3¾ to 64¼, while Great Lakes Power dropped 1¼ to 25¾ and Interprovincial Pipe Line two points to 92. Royal Bank fell ½ to 70¾, and B.C. Forest Products and MacMillan Bloedel ¼ each to 33¾ and 35½.

Highland-Bell rose 55 cents to $8.25 while Windfall and Consolidated Morrison each rose a cent to 45 cents and $1.11 respectively. Consolidated Mogul gained five cents to $3.75.

Senior base metals trading was light. Coniprue at one point touched a high of 41½, but declined to 41¼ at the close to 41¼. Labrador rose ½ to 37, Steep Rock 15 cents to 6.35 and Normetal ½ to 40. Denison was down ⅛ to 16⅝.

Gold trading was light with Metalpro Perquinor off ¼ to 61 and Dome ⅛ to 34.

On index, industrials rose .17 to 165.17 and the TSE-index .13 to 154.19. Golds fell .35 to 144.44 and base metals .19 to 70.65 but western oils rose .01 to 95.19.

Judge Made $117,000 Profit On NONG Stock Court Told

SUDBURY (CP) — Mr. Justice Leo Landreville made a profit of $117,000 on the sale of Northern Ontario Natural Gas stock a year after he resigned as mayor of Sudbury, it was revealed Tuesday at a preliminary hearing on municipal corruption charges against him.

Mr. Justice Landreville was mayor of Sudbury from 1955 until late 1956 when he was appointed to the Ontario Supreme Court.

Testimony in a transcript of evidence prepared by the Ontario Securities Commission during a 1962 investigation of NONG stock transactions was read into evidence.

Mr. Justice Landreville is charged with accepting NONG shares as a consideration for getting a NONG franchise for Sudbury through city council when he was mayor, and with agreeing to keep NONG shares for signing the agreement.

The reading of the 180-page transcript began last Thursday and ended Tuesday.

PERJURY TRIAL WITNESS

It is expected that special Crown prosecutor Harvey McCullough of Hamilton will later read into evidence about 90 pages of testimony given by Mr. Justice Landreville at last April's perjury trial of NONG President Ralph K. Farris of Vancouver.

Mr. Farris was found guilty of perjury arising from statements he made at provincial government inquiries into stock distribution. He was sentenced to nine months but is free on bail pending the result of an appeal of his conviction.

Defence counsel J. J. Robinette of Toronto read from Mr. Justice Landreville's evidence at the 1962 securities commission inquiry:

"I am conscious of my position and I am conscious of the reflection on the bench and I am conscious as well of wide publicity given throughout the province.

"My position on the bench is a most uncomfortable one until this matter is settled.

"I can hardly imagine a man before me for theft when he looks at me and implies I am one too, when I haven't found me guilty. That is an implication I cannot bear in my office."

SOUGHT CLARIFICATION

The transcript said Mr. Justice Landreville told Harry S. Bray, then securities commission counsel and now his director, that if there was any evidence of serious misconduct while he was Sudbury's mayor, Mr. Bray should say so. If there was no such evidence, he would appreciate a clear and unambiguous statement to that effect "so the general public will understand."

In another part of the transcript, it was disclosed that Mr. Justice Landreville had asked Mr. Farris about acquiring NONG stock in the first or second week of July, 1956, shortly before the third reading of a bylaw which granted the Sudbury gas franchise to NONG.

"I was not sure that I would have it," the judge was quoted in the transcript. "He never gave me any assurances I would have it."

In other testimony Tuesday senior district court Judge J. W. Cooper of Sudbury testified he had not been told about an alleged offer to Mr. Justice Landreville for the purchase of 10,000 NONG shares.

Judge Cooper, a former law partner of the judge, said:

"To my knowledge no never told me about any such offer. I heard it elsewhere. If he did, it didn't mean anything to me at all because I wasn't interested."

In the transcript, Mr. Justice Landreville is thought he had told several people about NONG's offer, and he was sure he had told Judge Cooper.

In earlier testimony it was said Mr. Justice Landreville received 7,500 NONG shares without cost—2,500 of the original 10,000 shares being used to pay for the 10,000 at $2.50 each after they were sold for $10 a share.

APARTHEID DROPPED

PRETORIA (AP) — Anglican Church leaders in this South African government headquarters city have decided to drop all forms of church apartheid (race segregation) within their diocese, the South African Press Association reported Tuesday. Africans can share communion with white Anglicans, although in practice few do so. In its move away from apartheid practices, the diocesan synod now has decided to integrate parishes and missions and to discontinue salary differences between white and non-white ministers.

Find No Basis For Any Action Against SIU

NEW YORK (CP)—The U.S. Coast Guard said Tuesday U.S. immigration officials have boarded a yacht docked in Brooklyn on which Hal C. Banks had been reported staying to check whether there had been any violation of federal customs law.

A coast guard official said the immigration officials questioned seven men aboard the yacht JEB, owned by the Seafarers' Building Corporation of Brooklyn, about a report that the yacht may have been outside U.S. territorial waters and entered the United States without passing customs.

Capt. R. P. Bullard, U.S. Coast Guard officer in charge of the port, said the immigration officials found "no legal basis for any action against the owners of the ship.

Banks, 55 - year - old former president of the Seafarers International Union of Canada, was sentenced a few years in prison earlier this year for conspiring to assault a Great Lakes captain in 1957. Banks disappeared from Canada while free on $25,000 bail awaiting appeal and trial on other charges.

He turned up in Brooklyn last week but U.S. legal sources say he is not subject to extradition on any of the charges laid against him.

Blind May Be Allowed to Be Teachers

TORONTO (CP) — The blind are being allowed to study to become teachers at Toronto's Ontario superintendent of the Canadian National Institute of the Blind said Tuesday.

Alfred W. Sparks of Toronto told a meeting of the CNIB's management board that Ontario colleges of education no longer make applicants pass physical examinations. As a result, college Jensen of Windsor has registered this fall as the first blind person in a college of education.

Reading his address from a braille manuscript, Mr. Sparks said the rescinding of the physical exam requirement "is how I opens a door for 72 blind students enrolled in Canadian universities. Whether I helpers work with some of them, he said, and transcribe texts and exams into braille.

Dean D. F. Dadson of the Ontario College of Education in Toronto said in an interview later that although physical exams will no longer be required, "people like myself have to decide" whether an applicant's handicap is likely to stop him from becoming a teacher.

"We may recommend a physical examination," said Mr. Dadson.

"If a qualified person comes to us with extremely poor eyesight, we're willing to give him a try, to see how he can make out. We think that takes a tremendous amount of courage to try. We hate to turn them down."

Profumo Scandal Pops Up In Bitter Election Campaign

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

LONDON (CP) — With last year's Profumo scandal popping into the British election campaign, the Conservative party said today it has no allegations to make about the morals of any Labor member.

Lord Blakenham, Tory party chairman, made the statement at a stormy press conference in London as the temperature rose in the campaign for the Oct. 15 election.

And Harold Wilson, Labor party leader, said at a Birmingham press conference he "naturally assumes" Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home will make a statement on the subject.

Lord Profumo resigned his job as minister of war in June 1963 and play-girl Christine Keeler.

"If you can tell me there are no adulterers on the front bench of the Tory party you can talk to me about Profumo," Hogg is reported to have said.

DEMAND REPUDIATION

Blakenham, turning aside repeated demands by reporters as to whether he "repudiated" the Hogg statement, declared:

"We have no allegations to make against any member of the Labor party."

Blakenham seemed in difficulty at another point when he advised reporters not to take "literally" or "seriously" a suggestion by Sir Alec Tuesday night that Labor is hiring hecklers to bother Tory meetings.

Blakenham strained Douglas-Home was now accusing Labor of infringing the law governing elections but he denied he was saying that the prime minister's words were not to be taken seriously.

Defence Secretary Peter Thorneycroft appeared for the first time at a daily press conference to open a major assault over the issue of nuclear weapons, stating Wilson was guilty of throwing around "intellectual sludge" on defence.

Douglas-Home has referred to Britain's separate nuclear deterrent on nearly every speech.

The emphasis on the nuclear matter led observers to think the Tories feel they are making the best headway on this issue than on domestic topics in the campaign.

Pumper's Tank Was Filled With Gasoline

TORONTO (CP) — Firemen on their way to douse a garbage fire noticed a peculiar smell as they topped their pumper from a hydrant near a service station.

They checked the pumper's storage tank. Sure enough, it was filled with gasoline.

The gasoline had leaked from the service station's underground tanks into the hydrant's drainage hole. Hydrants have a safety device—something like an S-pipe that is filled with water—to prevent such a thing happening, but the hydrant's trap was bone dry, allowing this water to escape and be replaced by other liquids.

Rhodesian Army Hunts Thugs In Salisbury African Area

SALISBURY (Reuters)—Southern Rhodesian army troops and police swooped down on the African township of Harare here today with orders to arrest "all thugs, hooligans and criminals."

The all - white government placed Harare, the second of Salisbury's two main Negro townships, under a state of emergency. The other township, Highfield, has been under a state of emergency since last August.

Both townships have been scenes of considerable violence this year, largely because of political rivalry between the country's two main Negro nationalist movements — The People's Caretaker Coun il and The Zimbabwe African National Union.

Police reported the situation in Harare quiet. Some Africans had been picked up for screening, but their exact number was not known.

Desmond Gardiner - Burke, minister of law and order, said "the main and primary object of this operation in Harare is to arrest all thugs, hooligans and criminals and thus to remove from the scene intimidation and violence so that the inhabitants may live their lives in peace and move about without fear."

Young Couples Not Equipped To Manage Their Incomes

By BRENDA LARGE

OTTAWA (CP) —Canadian consumers don't know enough about how to manage their incomes, says one of Canada's leading home economists.

Laura C. Pepper, who has been chief of the agriculture department's consumer section for the last 25 years, says:

"Today's consumers have a better knowledge of food products and other consumer goods than they did 25 years ago. But I do not think young married couples are really properly equipped to manage their incomes.

"The tremendous growth of consumer credit, which I think is a very unhealthy trend, has made consumer buying a complicated business. I feel young people should be prepared for it through courses in high school."

Miss Pepper, who retired in June, said in an interview there is a great deal more to be done in the field of consumer education. That's why she agreed to be an active member of the education committee of the Consumers' Association of Canada. The committee is exploring ways in which consumer education might be combined with secondary school subjects.

NO LONGER PERSONAL

A sprightly, blue-eyed woman with a lively enthusiasm for her life's work, Laura Pepper has spent 33 years helping educate consumers about Canada's agricultural products.

She remembers her travels in 1931 as a young home economics demonstrator for the dairy branch of the agriculture department. In those days the branch handled all promotion and research on dairy products.

"In those days I used to do a lot of personal lecturing at country fairs and at individual farm houses across the country. We had a very personal relationship with housewives then and they were always eager to receive new recipes and advice."

This close relationship between government and consumer now has almost disappeared, says Miss Pepper.

"With the development of the mass media, most of our contact with the consumer is through television and radio, newspapers and magazines."

Miss Pepper says she thinks consumers today spend too much time and money on fancy packaging and gimmicks to sell food.

"Consumers want food that is safe, good to eat, good for them and at moderate prices."

NAMED IN 1939

A native of Ottawa and graduate in home economics from Macdonald Institute in Guelph, Ont., in 1926, Miss Pepper was put in charge of the new consumer section of the agriculture department in 1939.

She began the job of building up a national advisory service on buying and using Canadian agricultural products which has continued to expand ever since.

"When the section began in 1939 there were only three of us in the office. Today there is a network of home economists across the country and at peak times of the year our food inspectors number as many as 300.

During the Second World War, Miss Pepper's advice to consumers on how to make best use of tightly rationed foods earned her membership in the Order of the British Empire, a decoration she received in 1946.

In 1960 Mount Allison University, Sackville, N.B., recognized her work in the field of home economics by conferring on her an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

When do we pray, and why do we sometimes stop praying?" The program closed with prayer and a thought for the day.

The president conducted the business and reminded all of the bazaar, October 14. Plans also drawn to the packing and sending of a bale to needy missions.

All joined in the Bible study with a further discussion on the subject.

Two ladies, Mrs. Martha Lee and Mrs. Jennie Kaiser were welcomed by all to the community, after which Mrs. E. Phillips, Mrs. W. Tufts and Miss Carol Lane and the hostess served lunch.

Jewish Women Focus Attention On the Problems of the Aged

By JEAN SHARP
Canadian Press Staff Writer

For 14 years the problems of the aged have been the focus of a project of the 6,000-member National Council of Jewish Women.

It began as a simple plan to have council members organize social clubs for people over 60. Today there are 15 such clubs.

But in addition to serving the aged personally, the council is promoting an educational program to help turn out more specialists in the problems of old people.

Since 1953 the group has given 21 fellowships for the study of social and medical care for the aging. Last year it provided money for two special courses in the rehabilitation of the elderly.

A new aspect of the whole program that is still in the planning stage is the organization of placement bureaus to find jobs — paid or volunteer work — for older people who want them.

Julia Schulz of Toronto, executive secretary of the council, said her organization is taking its cue from a pilot placement program tried in a U.S. city by a research group. It placed 1,000 persons in community service work, field in which there is a chronic shortage of personnel.

"Our society puts people on the shelf for really no good reason," Mrs. Schulz said. "We must get them back. We can ill afford to lose all their skills and life experience and let them deteriorate."

TO OFFER COURSES

The council's first recreation club was formed in 1950. Staffed by council members, the 15 non-denominational groups now in operation are located mainly to offer entertainment once or twice a week.

A council booklet that gives suggestions on how to organize a club emphasizes that the club members be encouraged to do what they want and not merely have things done for them.

Some clubs now have gone beyond their original idea of simply providing recreation, however.

"Recreation is fine for a group of people but it is not the whole answer," said Mrs. Schulz. "The older people are as much individuals as anyone else. We have to have diversified plans."

Toronto is planning to diversify by adding a series of courses, for example, cooking or writing, armchair travel and help-others projects.

"There is a different philosophy behind this program. It offers more than a friendly hour or so a week. For instance many older people have had interesting lives. If for nothing else, they might learn to write it down for their grandchildren.

"The course is based on cooking for two; good nutrition on a small budget. When it was first started, I had the feeling that these women have cooked all their lives and wouldn't be interested. We had a trial day last spring, however, and we couldn't pack them into the kitchen."

EXPERTS NEEDED

As the first clubs were being started, it became apparent that in Canada there was little organized knowledge or experience on which volunteers and professional social workers could draw.

Mrs. Schulz said the council decided to try to get at the roots of the problem, and the idea for fellowships in gerontology—the study of aging—was born.

The fellowships were offered to three groups—senior people in schools of social work, in hospitals with geriatric services and in government public health departments.

The 21 persons from 10 cities who received fellowships went to the United States, Britain and Europe to observe and discuss techniques and developments which could be adapted for use in their own fields in Canada.

Some of the fellows, guided by experience since their return, suggested still another idea. They said there are not enough people trained to work with the elderly and added that the field of physical rehabilitation would be a good place to start.

The council then gave the extension departments of the University of Manitoba and McGill University funds to establish special short courses for nurses and therapists who do most of their work with the aged.

Speaking Personally

By Gladys Ward

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

It may be just coincidence but it seems that more and more people are celebrating 50th, 60th and over wedding anniversaries. Scarcely a week passes that a report does not come to the paper about a celebration of this kind.

It must be that people are living longer to enjoy their golden years.

It used to be a rare and unusual thing when a couple could celebrate a golden anniversary, but they are now almost commonplace, and frequently we hear of diamond anniversaries. Recently a report of a 70th anniversary was published in this paper when Mr. and Mrs. George Bonisteele of Cobourg marked a long married life.

Probably this trend will continue as better living conditions extend the lives of people. Hygiene, knowledge of nutrition, an awareness of health and how to preserve it, an extended knowledge of medicine, new methods of surgery, antibiotics, new drugs, all contribute to a longer lifeline on the palm of our hands.

The emphasis today is on health and how to preserve it, mentally and physically. I read once that in ancient China a physician was responsible for the health of his royal patients, and if a member of the household took sick the doctor was blamed, and if the patient died, the doctor was put to death. This is pretty drastic, and hardly cricket for the doctor, but the emphasis was right, in keeping people well rather than curing the sick.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES EDWARD LANGTON

Langton – Reynolds

White gladioli and blue shasta mums decorated the Church of St. Michael the Archangel for the double ring ceremony on Saturday, September 26th, of Nancy Ellen Reynolds to James Edward Langton. Rev. T. J. Boyle performed the marriage rites. Miss Dorothy Grant played traditional wedding music at the organ, and the soloist was Mr. Robert Burke.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Reynolds of Foxboro, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Langton of Belleville.

Given in marriage by Mr. Noel Langton, the bride was gowned in misty nylon sheer over taffeta, featuring a bodice of nylon and rayon lace over net and lined with rayon taffeta. It was enhanced with a scalloped neckline and long pointed sleeves buttoned at the wrist. The bouffant skirt was high-lighted with lace appliques with tiny self bows scattered over the front of the gown, with one large bow at the back of the waist. Her headpiece was a crystal tiara with a fingertip veil of filmy nylon net, and her flowers were pink sweetheart roses mingled with green fern in a V-shape.

Mrs. Jerry Ethier of Belleville attended the bride in a street-length dress of powder blue which had a scooped neckline and short sleeves, with a chiffon and lace insert panel in the front, and bow at the waist. Her headdress was a small wedding band and veil of the same color as the dress, and her flowers were a cascade of white and blue mums.

Mr. Frank Langton was groomsman, and the ushers were Mr. John Oliver and Mr. Tony Wring, all of Belleville.

A reception was held at St. Joseph's Parish Hall which was decorated in pink and white streamers and bells. A four-tiered wedding cake was topped with a miniature bride and bridegroom, and was flanked by pink and white candles, and the bridal bouquets.

The guests were received by Mrs. Noel Langton wearing a two-piece spice brown suit with contrasting feathered hat, brown furs and accessories and a corsage of yellow sweetheart roses.

The bridegroom's mother assisted wearing a brocaded dress in peacock blue with matching jacket, matching feathered hat and mink stole, black patent shoes and purse, and corsage of yellow roses.

For a wedding trip to Western Ontario and northern United States the bride chose a blue double knit suit with matching coat, black velvet hat, shoes and purse and corsage of pink sweetheart roses.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding were from Detroit, Woodstock, Paris, Foxboro, Kingston, Frankford, Gilmour, Port Hope and Waterloo.

Mr. and Mrs. Langton will reside at 287 Westdale Avenue, Kingston.

The bridal table was entertained before her marriage at the home of Mrs. Jerry Ethier, where a miscellaneous shower was given with Miss Pat Clapp and Miss Toni Wall as co-hostesses.

Co-workers at the Ontario Hydro presented her with two lamps, and the Hydro social club gave her bathroom scales. The Lines and Distribution department presented her with a pole lamp on her departure from the Commission.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Wamboldt, Palmer Road have returned from a three week's vacation in Germany where they visited their son Corporal J. G. Wamboldt and Mrs. Wamboldt. They also toured other countries in Europe.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Ken Fargey, North Park Street left yesterday by train to visit their son Mr. Max Fargey, Mrs. Fargey and family in Winnipeg, Man.

visitation to visit Seymour East W.I. tea at Menie Hall in October was accepted. It was decided to renew subscriptions to the A.C.W.W. magazine "The Countrywoman" and to provide funds for the Gets 4-H supper club supplies. The leaders for the training school "Focus on Finishers" will attend and relay their information to the interested members.

Mrs. Roy Tucker presided over the program which she had arranged. Miss Marilyn Conley and Mr. Ralph Johnson conducted a sing-song of special items which had been written on the blackboard. Miss Linda Morrow contributed a vocal selection with her mother, Mrs. Harry Morrow as accompanist.

GUEST SPEAKER

Mrs. Percy MacMillan introduced the guest speaker Mr. John Svoboda a student at Albert College. The summer he was sponsored on a pilgrimage to the United Nations by the I.O.O.F and Rebekah Lodges of district 45 which comprises of Belleville, Stirling, Campbellford, Madoc, Tweed, Thomasburg and Springbrook. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Svoboda of Mill Street, Stirling.

John gave a most informative and educational message and stressed the importance of understanding and understand the work of the United Nations and to give it their financial support. The UN has a budget of $40,000, for a year of work which helps to keep the whole world running smoothly and peaceably. If each teen-ager contributed ten cents a year much more could be accomplished.

The speaker gave a picture of the General Assembly which is an international court of justice and the main job is to better world conditions. Various organizations assist and the local Women's Institute is linked through its head organization in the work of the Associated Countrywomen of the World. Through pennies for friendship and other contributions from A.C.W.W. there is scope for health safety and a chance to help people to help themselves. The various nations have to ask for assistance and prove that they need it.

John also gave a descriptive account of the numerous rooms in the UN building and what goes on in the sessions. In concluding he stated that as an organized group of people everyone must be concerned about the work of the United Nations and must be vitally interested in people who cannot read nor write and who have not enough to eat.

SETS OF SLIDES

He showed four sets of slides, the first was pertaining to the UN buildings; the second gave a picturesque view of the entertainment part of the pilgrimage, including many scenes in New York City; a number of World's Fair scenes were shown and the last set of pictures covered various points of interest that were visited along the way, including Valley Forge Park, Washington Cathedral, Mount Vernon, the ancestral Washington Mansion; the resting place of John F. Kennedy at Arlington, the Lincoln Memorial tomb of the unknown soldier, the White House, the Gettysburg battle field and several views of Niagara Falls.

This was a most interesting talk and showing of slides and John will be doing likewise for each group in district 45, thus more will have the opportunity of hearing him.

Mrs. Roy Bush voiced appreciative thanks to John for the success of his first speech and he was the recipient of a small token of remembrance for which he voiced thanks.

Mrs. George Beasman, convener of the program, gave the motto entitled "Mirrors on Windows." She also read an article of interest from Ethel Chapman's book.

The president, Mrs. Harry, conducted the closing exercises and the hostesses and lunch committee served refreshments. Mrs. Charles Wilson voiced thanks for the hospitality and lunch.

MR. AND MRS. P. J. McLAUGHLIN

McLaughlin – Hickson

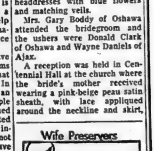
A charming double ring ceremony united in marriage Lois Louise Hickson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman E. Hickson of Belleville and Phil John McLaughlin of Oshawa, son of Mr. and Mrs. Verne McLaughlin, Oshawa.

King Street United Church in Oshawa was decorated with a beautiful setting of pink gladioli and white chrysanthemums where Rev. L. Wesley Herbert performed the ceremony. Mr. Williams of Oshawa was organist, and the soloist was Mrs. Earl Hickson, cousin of the bride.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a full-length gown of white silk organza over taffeta with bell-shaped skirt, accented with imported lace around the neckline and down the front of the dress. The detachable chapel length train was lace trimmed. Her shoulder length veil was secured with a small cluster of flowers with rhinestone stems, and she carried a bouquet of red and yellow roses with ivy.

Miss Heather Robins was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Mrs. John Potter and Miss Susan McLaughlin, all of Oshawa. They wore full-length dresses of French blue organza and headdresses with blue flowers and matching veils.

Mrs. Gary Roddy of Oshawa attended the bridegroom and the ushers were Donald Clark of Oshawa and Wayne Daniels of Ajax.



A reception was held in Centennial Hall at the church where the bride's mother received wearing a pink-beige peau satin sheath, with lace appliqued around the neckline and skirt, matching shoes, white accessories and corsage of pink carnations.

The bridegroom's mother assisted wearing a dusty rose peau satin sheath with panel back and bodice of Chantilly lace, matching hat and shoes, white accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

Mr. and Mrs. McLaughlin left on a wedding trip to Cleveland with the bride wearing a royal blue boucle suit with black velvet collar, black accessories and corsage of red roses. They will reside in Oshawa.

QUEEN VICTORIA SCHOOL

The first general meeting of the Queen Victoria Home and School Association for the new term was held Tuesday evening, October 6th.

Preceding a brief business meeting Principal H. R. Frink introduced the teachers to the parents.

Mrs. Watson outlined the meaning and aims of UNICEF and its accomplishments, stressing that we are not our brothers' keepers but our brothers' brothers.

Mrs. L. Jourard and Mr. John Welch explained the purposes and goals of Home and School. This was done in a refreshing interview type skit.

A large number of last year's graduating class attended the meeting to view Mr. Frink's slides of the conservation tour in which they had participated in the spring.

Following the enjoyable pictures the meeting adjourned with the serving of refreshments.

For an attractive looking party snack, food experts at MacDonald Institute, Guelph, suggest that you color cream cheese pink or green with food coloring, flavor with a dash of garlic powder, and fill a decorating tube with this mixture. Then swirl the cheese onto crisp cracker rounds and top with a few parsley leaves.

A REMINDER

Wedding forms for write-ups are available at The Ontario Intelligencer and should be completed and returned BEFORE the ceremony, so a report can be published immediately after the wedding.

Pictures may be submitted by your photographer up to three days after the wedding. We cannot promise publication of weddings sent in later.

W.W., Mrs. Roy Tucker read an article from the September Countrywoman magazine which gave a descriptive account written by Mrs. Brownlee of Englehart, Ont., telling how Dack W.I. displayed a number of items received from pen pals in Scotland, Wales, Australia and South Africa.

Mrs. Percy MacMullen read a letter from Mrs. N. Coombs, link secretary of Abbot's Leigh W.I. in England. This Institute had a busy year with a garden party held in July a great success. They entertained all of the elderly people of the village at an afternoon outing at Clandon Manor at Bath, England and raised a great deal of money for local improvement. She sent greetings to all the River Valley Institute members.

A 'Big Sister Club' For Shut-Ins Good Idea

DEAR DORIS — Re your answer to "Distressed" concerning an aged lady left alone in her room.

My advice to "Distressed" would be to get busy and form a sort of Big Sister club and take turns staying with elderly people or other shut-ins while their regular nurse or relative has a period of complete relief from this responsibility.

The poor shut-ins at home are much worse off as far as company is concerned than those confined to hospitals. As I have cared for a shut-in for over ten years I speak from experience. — TWENTY-FOUR-HOUR-A-DAY NURSE.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS — The letter written by "Distressed" about a 91-year-old lady being left alone made me see red as I suspect it was written about me.

Now for my side. I hate leaving mother alone but as I have tried everywhere for help and can't get it, I have to leave her when I go shopping. I lock the door because she doesn't want it left unlocked. She feels safer with the door locked. I rush my business and always worry about her.

Why doesn't "Distressed" offer to stay with my mother instead of reporting to the health department? I wanted to go to my brother's wedding and I offered $10 a day for four days for help but the excuses were so transparent that it was funny. I had to stay home.

Please do not make the mistake that I am complaining about my mother living here, as I am not. It is the lack of help at times that bothers me. — SEEING RED.

* * *

DEAR NURSE AND RED — "Distressed" lives hundreds of miles from both of you — so the reference couldn't possibly be personal. The unrelieved nurse in all such cases has our sympathy. I like your idea about a Big Sister club for the shut-ins. What does "Distressed" think about it?

* * *

DEAR DORIS — Can you get V.D. from French kissing? Ever since I heard that you could I have been worried, as I have done my share of French kissing. — SIXTEEN.

* * *

DEAR SIXTEEN — No. The infection is through actual physical intercourse with one similarly infected. But there are serious enough reasons for not indulging in French kissing.

* * *

Confidential to M.G.J.—People are people, whatever country they come from. Parents who don't take the trouble to know their daughters' friends are in no position to judge.

At the same time, your difference in religion is so full of dangers that the best time to call off romance is before it gets fairly started. Better to be true to your parents than sorry about an unhappy affair later.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — I don't know what to do, you're the last resort. I am madly in love with Dave and he with me. But when we go out together his actions appear too sexual and I'm afraid that one of these days (or nights) he will go too far. Should I break up with the one I love or take this risk? I am 18 and he is 19. — TRYING TO AVOID TROUBLE.

* * *

DEAR TRYING — "Madly in love"? Write me the symptoms. If it's the real thing it's worth protecting; and the one who loves protects the loved one.

In any case, you should be together on this. Your dates should be quiet, sporting, and usually with others. If you can play a congenial game of ping-pong or what-have-you, or discuss religion or child-raising, and find your ideas blending; if you can take a long walk; if you can spend a whole friendly evening with ambition and without touching one another all evening long; maybe you've got something worth having.

If you can't, break it up.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — I have gone with Ben for the past four years. We are very much in love and we plan marriage in the near future.

My problem is that Ben takes me for granted. I guess I am a little old-fashioned but to me it is the little things that count. A lot of people that we meet think we are married.

Would you please give me some advice as to how I can get him to treat me the way he used to? — JUST WONDERING.

* * *

DEAR WONDERING — What are the symptoms? No little courtesies? Arriving late for a date? More attention to the other ladies, while you sit on the sidelines?

Set the pattern for life right now by taking the lead. Buy a book on manners — since Ben's deportment can mean a good deal to his career as well as to you.

To show you are not taking him for granted do a special thing, like making him candy, or a late snack he loves. And discuss this business of making love grow with thoughtfulness or smothering it with neglect. I agree about the "little things".

I am sending you a list of books on manners which some well recommended.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — A few weeks ago you had an address in your column telling where to write for free advice from lawyers when you couldn't afford one.

My husband takes a great kick out of beating me every time he doesn't get his own way. I've taken this because I figured I could not keep the children on my own. We have been separated several times and he always promises the moon to get us back. Now that my children are old enough to help I want to get out.

My own doctor is willing to give medical history towards my suing for support. I work but he makes me account for every cent. — BATTERED.

* * *

DEAR BATTERED — Sounds to me as if you've had the course. The resource for legal aid in Belleville is Mr. Ross Bailey, Sheriff and Legal Aid Director for the County of Hastings, Belleville.

POPULATION HIGHER

More than 1,054,000 babies were born in West Germany in 1960, the highest figure since the Second World War.

Our Thanksgiving Pumpkin Meringue Pie is decorated with candied ginger — an understandable addition considering the powdered ginger included in the spicing. Mary Moore's tall contemporary coffee pot adds elegance to this dessert course.

Two Desserts For Holiday

by Mary Moore

Wheels are turning and the answers from our mental IBM are items for Thanksgiving Dinner. We'll give you our suggested menu tomorrow, which includes Pumpkin Meringue Pie and, as an alternate, easy delicious Pineapple Bavarian.

Meringue on top of a pumpkin pie may puzzle you, but some expert died-in-the-wool pumpnik pie fanciers approved — most important of whom is Bruce. He knows a good pumpkin pie when he tastes it, for in his early youth was a farm boy and has never forgotten the beauties his mother produced.

Dinner Menus

WEDNESDAY

Chilled Pineapple Juice; Panned Liver with Parsley and Green Onion Milk Gravy,. Fluffy Mashed Potatoes; Brussels Sprouts; Apple Pie and Cheddar Cheese; Coffee.

PUMPKIN MERINGUE PIE:

1½ cups white sugar, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon nutmeg, ¼ teaspoon ginger, ¼ teaspoon cloves, ½ teaspoon salt, 1½ cups canned pumpkin, 3 eggs, yolks and whites separated, 1¼ cups (one large can) undiluted evaporated milk, 9" unbaked deep pie shell, 2 tablespoons chopped candied ginger (optional).

Mix together 1 cup of the sugar, spices and salt. Blend in pumpkin and egg yolks. Stir in evaporated milk. Pour into deep 9" pie shell with high fluted edge. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. for 15 minutes; reduce heat to 350 deg. Fahr. and bake 40 minutes longer. Cool for 45 minutes. Beat egg whites stiff but not dry. Gradually add remaining ½ cup sugar and beat until very stiff and glossy. Spread meringue over cooled pie; sprinkle evenly with candied ginger (if used). Bake meringue at 450 deg. Fahr. for 5 minutes, or until gold. Cool before serving.

PINEAPPLE BAVARIAN: NOTES:

1) Ideal for making in advance. 2) Could be doubled to serve 18 or (if cut in slightly smaller pieces) 24.

1 cup fine graham cracker or ginger snap or plain cracker crumbs, ¼ cup melted butter or margarine, one 20-oz. can good-quality crushed pineapple, 1 tablespoon (1 envelope) plain gelatine, ¼ cup sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 2-3 cups evaporated milk (divided — see below), 2 tablespoons lemon juice, maraschino cherries (to decorate top — optional).

Mix together crumbs and melted butter and press on bottom of 8¾ x 8¾" square pan (or slightly smaller or larger square or oblong pan). Chill. Drain crushed pineapple and save syrup. Measure ½ cup syrup into saucepan, sprinkle gelatine over and let stand 5 minutes. Add sugar and salt and stir over medium heat until gelatine and sugar are completely dissolved. Remove from heat. Stir in 1 cup of evaporated milk. Chill until it is softly congealed then turn into big beater bowl and beat until doubled. (This is easy.) Gradually add, while beating, the remaining 2-3 cup evaporated milk and the lemon juice. When it just about fills the beater bowl, fold in well-drained crushed pineapple. (Use leftover pineapple juice to add to a fruit drink.) Pour over chilled crumbs in pan, smoothing top. Chill until firm; if overnight, cover with saran. Cut into 9 squares and carefully transfer with lifter to serving plates. Garnish each with a cherry.

Kiwanis Ladies Hear of Life In India

The Kiwanis ladies met for their first meeting of the fall season at the Centre, on Thursday evening. There was a good turnout of members, as well as several Keyettes, from Quinte High School, who came to share the evening's program with the members.

President Mrs. Bob Brain conducted the business meeting. Included were plans for the Christmas doll project and the annual bridge marathon; also a report from the treasurer and secretary.

GUEST SPEAKER

Mrs. Melika Kar was guest speaker for the evening and gave an interesting informal report on her native land, India. Mrs. Kar is from Bengal. She told about the climate, agricultural picture, population, Hindu religion, and answered questions of the members. Mrs. Kar also brought several pieces of Indian jewellery and a beautiful stole. She explained that although parts of India encounter cold weather, generally a stole is sufficient warmth for balmy evenings around Calcutta or Bengal.

Refreshments were served following thanks to Mrs. Kar.

COLLEGE HILL WEDDING RING CLUB

The College Hill Wedding Ring Club held their first meeting of the new season on Monday, Sept. 28th, with president, Mr. Ray DaFoe in the chair. A new couple was introduced to the club and given a hearty welcome.

A short business meeting was conducted following the devotional, which was given by Carmen Syne and Guy Thompson. A trip to the County museum, a delicious lunch and social half - hour brought the meeting to a close with many thanks to Doris and Carmen Syne and their group who were in charge of the meeting.

MISH MASH

Susanna's Family Fare

Dear Susanna: Read your article about braiding rugs from nylon stockings and I would surely like to have the instructions. There are three of us using nylons at our house, so you see I could really put them to use.

On the other hand, perhaps you and the readers would be interested to know that if you have a quantity of odd nylon stockings that are still perfectly good but don't match, there is something you can do about them.

Whenever we accumulate about eight or ten mismatched nylons, we put them all in a big pot, and cover them with warm water and let them simmer on the low burner for a spell. Some of the dye comes out and the whole thing mixes together so that when we remove them from the water they are all the same shade.

By doing this, we wind up with 4 or 5 pairs again. — Mrs. D. C. Hall

How about that! Susanna

Bringing Up Baby

HINTS COLLECTED BY MRS. DAN GERBER, MOTHER OF 8

Baby-style "daily dozens" are part and parcel of your little one's physical development. For exercise, like sweet sleep and balanced meals, helps a baby grow and glow. "Setting-ups" your little gymnast will love!

Pre-bath workouts. Let baby kick to his feet's content, minus clothes to hamper his enthusiasm.

Pull-ups. If baby is old enough to hold up his head, take his hands and gently pull him up and down for a minute or two.

Two-way arms. As baby gets older, Peek-a-Boo and Pat-a-Cake combine mild exercise with co-ordination.

*

Self-styled gymnasts need plenty of protein to aid growth and muscle development . . . plenty of calories for energy. Gerber Protein Cereal Food has a 35% protein content and calories to spare. And, like all Gerber Cereals, it has added iron, calcium and 3 important B-vitamins, namely, thiamine, riboflavin and niacin. Its toasty, tasty, nut-like flavour appeals to both babies and toddlers.

For continued meal-appeal rotate with Gerber Rice Cereal, Barley, Oatmeal, Mixed Cereal.

"Doing what comes naturally" is the theme song of the creeper. Here's exercise at its best, because practically every muscle in baby's body comes into play. If your darling one has turned creeper, you can provide creeping incentive by giving him a big, bright ball to push and follow. As all from you, from the other side of the room, will set him off on a cheerful scamper to you.

*

Sip Sips. Here's sipping pleasure pure and simple with a nutritional bonus to boot. Gerber Strained Fruit Juices are delicate in flavour, delicious as can be. All 5 are excellent sources of vitamin C, needed for good gums and other body tissues. The delightful list includes Orange Juice, Apple Juice, Orange-Apple, Orange-Banana and Orange Pineapple Drinks. Your baby will love every one. Gerber Baby Foods, Niagara Falls Canada.

U.C.W. Meeting

EVENING GROUP

CANNIFTON — The first fall meeting of Cannifton Evening Group U.C.W. was held in the church on the last Monday of September.

It was decided to purchase "God and His Purpose" and the Guide for religious education and the Missionary study books on Brazil and Trinidad.

The members were informed of the Presbytery meeting in Shannonville United Church on October 16th.

The worship service was conducted by Vera Mitchell, Doris Ellsworth, Helen Holgate and Shirley Crook.

SHOW SLIDES

Mr. and Mrs. Langstaff showed slides taken on their residence in Cairo and a trip through Lebanon, Syria, Jordon, Jericho and Jerusalem. These were interesting, depicting the different levels of economic status of the population of Cairo.

In a city of three million people under 100 thousand live a decent life and only about 25 thousand live up to our standards. A few blocks from the best residential district other people are living in absolute squalor. In the same block you may see people in automobiles, on bicycles or camels going about their business. The young boys that do hand work on leather, silver, etc. work right on the street as the shops are too small to accommodate the employees.

Most of these boys start to work when they are six and those inlaying silver will be totally blind by the time they are twenty.

The guests ended their talk by showing slides of Jerusalem and the churches in the Holy City

Everyone thoroughly enjoyed the slides and the information given by Mr. and Mrs. Langstaff. A social hour was spent with an enjoyable lunch.

Food experts at Macdonald Institute, Guelph, recommend that all cheese dishes should be cooked at a low temperature, 325 deg. Fahr., because the protein is made tough by extreme heat. When cheese is toasted, a sacrifice some nutritive value in favor of flavor.

Ann Landers

Some People Have to Argue Just to Gain Attention

DEAR ANN LANDERS — What can be done with a belligerent man? No matter where we go my husband manages to stir up a violent argument. This has been going on for thirty years and it's getting worse.

His pet subject is politics. When he exhausts that he picks a fight about religion. I am embarrassed by the fierceness of his attacks and his refusal to let others speak. Once the hostess asked him to please drop the subject but he ignored her and continued to rip into the guest of honor. We were never invited to that home again.

ANN LANDERS

It is awful to see the pained look on the faces of those who have been listening too long. Why does my husband continue to argue and bait people even though he knows it has made him thoroughly despised? — G.D.B.

* * *

DEAR G.D.B. — Arguing is your husband's method of attracting attention. He'd rather be despised than ignored.

Civilized people can make a point, adroitly and effectively without ripping the opposition to shreds. A dissenting opinion is rarely resented if the dissenter attacks the issue and not the person who presents it.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I'm a G.I. stationed in a foreign country as you can see by the envelope.

Back home I was never a hotshot with the girls. Here I can have my pick of the lot. These females go big for Americans. About four months ago I met a beautiful girl who treats me like a king. She wants to marry me and I think I want to marry her but I'm not sure.

The girl has a child but was never married. All this probably sounds terrible to you but over here they look at it differently. In fact, the government helps these girls out and nobody thinks anything of it.

I have not written to my folks about my feelings. All they know is I met a girl and I like her a lot. My father has hinted that I had better "put on the brakes" and not get "involved" with anybody.

Do these marriages work? Can you give me some advice? Your column is my best link with the U.S. I never miss it. — BRINK.

* * *

DEAR BRINK — Have you ever considered how this girl will fit into your home environment? You see her now in her environment. And consider, too, how you will look to her out of uniform.

Make no commitments, Buster. If it's love it will keep till you get home and can look at this relationship through state-side eyes. After six months if you still want to marry the girl, that's another matter. If she loves you, she'll be waiting. But make sure your two feet are planted firmly in good old terra firma — and the firma the betta.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I disagree with your reply to "Old Fashioned" — the woman who was annoyed because the butcher called her "Honey." You told her not to be so stuffy, that the butcher was trying to be friendly.

I quit trading at a gas station because the attendant called me "Darling" in front of my mother-in-law. She was so shocked she almost fell out of the car. I happen to know this attendant calls all his women customers "Darling," but my mother-in-law didn't know it.

I'm not a snob, Ann, but I believe a person who serves the public should remember his place. He should not get so familiar with customers that it causes embarrassment. Thank you for letting me have my say. — ANOTHER OLD-FASHIONED GIRL.

* * *

DEAR ANOTHER — Apparently your threshold of embarrassment is lower than mine, Honey — I mean Mrs. Whateveryernameis. You do have a point, however, and I respect it.

* * *

To solve some of the frustrations, disappointments and disillusionments of married life, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "What To Expect From Marriage," enclosing with your request 25c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

HIGH (?) FASHION NOTES

According to the fashion pages, above-the-knee skirts are up-and-coming for sports and "discotheque" wear this season. Since I am not an ingenue, I'm inclined to sit this one out with my prim hemline firmly tucked around aging knee bones.

Those skinny young-leg-legged things can set their knee-caps for the shorter skirts, and as far as I'm concerned, they're really the only ones who should.

But while we watch the new styles glide into place, there are a few old "styles" I'd like to see scotched for good. I'm willing to go along with the bare-knee business — as long as you have the age and figure to match.

But what really gives me dyspepsia are some of the far-out looks you see on the streets now.

Such as:

Skin-tight pants with high heels, yet.

FAKE EYELASHES

Elaborate eye makeup, complete with fake lashes and dramatically-drawn brows and lips. At the supermarket, it comes as a shock when a theatrically - eyed customer asks for the location of a plebian loaf of bread instead of launching into an aria from "Aida."

Scads of jewelry, the sparklier the better, even with slacks and sweater. Much as I adore diamonds, I'm afraid they lose much of their taste and appeal when worn before sundown.

A mink stole with flat shoes.

"Teased" hair-dos with a thick plastering of hair spray to help hold the line.

No hair-do at all, but just rows of curlers festooning the head like so many sausages and covered with a billowing scarf or a hair net.

UNCOMBED HAIR

The "best" uniform—dark or mouse-colored stockings, skirt and long-sleeved sweat shirt, with a long, lank uncombed hair-do that seems to be part of the outfit.

I'm all for the short skirts and decorated stockings if they will remove some of the above-mentioned horrors from the fashion picture for good. And if they'll also nudge out the shaggy Beatle hair-cuts, I'll even give the upcoming styles an added vote of approval. Yeah! Yeah! Yeah!

The Experts Say

A Few Hints on How To Care for House Plants

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP)—Taking care of house plants is largely a matter of common sense, especially if you begin with plants known to be popular, tested house plants.

The best varieties will differ with the part of the country you live in, but among the most popular are African violets, geraniums, coleus, begonias, cacti, philodendron and some ferns.

Russell Gomme says the best place to buy them usually is from a local florist or nursery man because he will be interested in their welfare for business reasons. You can go back to him if you have any problems. But plants from mass outlets should be as satisfactory he says.

Mr. Gomme is secretary of the Ontario Horticultural Association and horticulture supervisor for the provincial department of agriculture.

There are a few general rules that Mr. Gomme says apply to almost all indoor gardening. The first is that plants need proper care if they are to thrive.

Their indoor environment should be free of drafts or too much heat and should not be too dry.

Mr. Gomme says an area near the kitchen is often a good spot because the humidity is higher there than in other parts of the house. Otherwise, you may put a saucer of water near them, or cover them occasionally with a plastic bag when they have been watered.

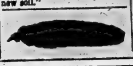
THUMP THE POT

There is no fast rule for watering plants.

"Some people water them too much, some not enough. You should give them a good soaking and not water them again until they need it. Then the soil on top will be dry. Or if you tap a clay pot, it will thump if the soil is still wet, give a sharp ring if it is dry.

"You don't need to water plants in a plastic pot nearly as much as in a clay one, because the plastic will not let water evaporate."

Know your plants, though, Mr. Gomme says; water will harm the leaves of some, but can be safely used on others to rinse dust off. Most provincial departments of agriculture, and the federal department have pamphlets on house plants which you can get by writing to the department.



You can buy soil for potted plants at a florist or five-and-ten. It is specially prepared and is sterilized. The mixture is usually seven parts compost or good soil, two parts organic matter, one part well rotted manure and two parts building sand.

SHOULD SPRAY

Indoor plants should be sprayed to be kept bug-free, and a new plant should be kept in isolation until it is certain it is not infected. Plants also need occasional injections of plant food. And if a plant or a leaf becomes diseased, it should be thrown away, so that it cannot spread infection.

"Plants should be repotted if they get pot bound—their roots crowded and matted. They should be repotted every two or three years anyway, because soil and food gets used up.

"Take them out of the old pot and clear old soil off the roots and perhaps remove dead or old foliage. Then repot them in new soil."

SOCIAL EVENT

Among the women of the Wabena tribe of Tanganyika pottery-making is a social activity which is accompanied by drinking beer and roasting corn.

74-Year-Old Clan Chief Has Dedicated Life to Restoring Ancient Kisimul Castle

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

CASTLEBAY, Barra (CP)—When Noah offered to save pairs, MacNeils from the Biblical Flood, he was told in Gaelic: "Thanks just the same, but we have a boat of our own."

This yarn was related with relish by Robert Lister MacNeil, 74-year-old clan chief, when he showed a Canadian reporter around ancient Kisimul Castle, which he has dedicated his life to restoring.

The MacNeil, as he is called, obviously takes pride in the fiercely independent reputation of his seafaring ancestors who from time immemorial ruled Barra, 33-square-mile isle in the Outer Hebrides off northwest Scotland.

MacNeil, whose father was from St. Stephen, N.B., has written Castle in the Sea, a history of Barra and his clan with emphasis on Kisimul, a square, towered fortress nearly 1,000 years old.

Proceeds from the book will go toward further restoration of the castle, a project begun by the chief in 1938 when he bought the granite edifice after it had been out of MacNeil hands for 100 years.

Brought up in the United States and a New York architect for many years, MacNeil declared: "All my life Barra has been instilled in my heart and mind as the place to be. . . . I love the land as passionately as I can."

But MacNeil, who has travelled all over Canada and plans to visit Montreal in mid-October, is one of the few "new" residents of lonely Barra whose contribution to the island's prosperity has been considerable.

Large sections of Cape Breton were utilized by Barra in emigration waves that began around 1840, a fact that partly accounts for the combination of friendliness and slightly prickly independence common to people of the two islands.

"Today we have only about 1,300 people in Barra compared with 2,200 when I was a boy," said 43-year-old Hugh Morrison, Castlebay postmaster.

Morrison, busy in his stone-floored Offic A' Phuist (post office), where cattle is the language of business, told of the hardships of wresting a living from the sea and from the rocky crofts, or tiny farms, where seagulls and sheep forage side by side.

Why did the Barra people go in such numbers?

"From where you stand, you can see 10,000 reasons why," said one old crofter, referring to the rocks.

"But they kept the Gaelic over there," added proudly. "We've seen copies of the last Gaelic periodical, Mac Tala (Echo), which was published in Cape Breton."

Byra's brother - like stone cottages, roofs of turf and thatch and walls only five or six feet high were withstood Atlantic gales for centuries. But they haven't been able to keep out all traces of so-called modern culture.

One night there was an "over-30s dance" in Castlebay. Asked how dances came to be segregated by age-group, one 17 year-old local lass replied repetitfully:

"The older ones used to laugh at our dancing, especially the twist."

Just who introduced the twist is not known. Television can't be blamed because that mixed blessing is out of Barra's range.

Kisimul — the word is from Old Norse meaning "castle island"—stands a few hundred yards offshore, approachable only by boat.

"It was never taken by battle although it was attacked literally hundreds of times in the clan wars and by other marauders," said MacNeil, 45th chief of the clan.

In more recent times nerring fleets pried away castle stones for ballast to be sold as street paving in Glasgow—but that the chief faced a mammoth task of restoration.

"I shall never finish the job which may be just as well since I don't desire in retirement," said the silver-haired MacNeil. He received a £9,000 grant from the British government and has spent several times that amount from his own resources.

MacNeil's architectural training enabled him to supervise the task and "what I'm most proud of is that from the outside no one can see a change."

At high tide the castle seems to rise straight from the sea.

MacNeil and his wife will be returning to his United States home at Marlboro, Vt. after the Montreal visit.

"Sometimes I think people came away... feel sorry for us alone out here, but we are as much at ease as they said the lady of the castle, Elizabeth, with a smile.

It was difficult to reconcile the gracious MacNeus with stories of the ferocious ancestors, whose retainers did not hesitate to drop rocks on the heads of unwelcome visitors.

In those fanoff times the gock men (keepers) shouted at nightfall from the battlements:

"Hear, O ye people, and listen O ye nations: the great MacNeil of Barra is howling his meat, the princes of the earth may dine."

Suitable Land For Recreation Hard to Find

TORONTO (CP) — A major problem facing metropolitan areas is the acquisition and preservation of suitable areas for outdoor recreational needs, K. G. Higgs, director of sports functions for the Metropolitan Toronto and Region Conservation Authority, said today.

The expected population growth in Metropolitan Toronto to 4,000,000 by the end of the century will result in great shortages of land of the right type, in the right amount and in the right places to meet such needs, he told the annual meeting of the Canadian Institute of Forestry.

"Water is the prime requisite for outdoor recreation," he said. "The experience of the Metropolitan Toronto and Region Conservation Authority verifies this fact, since surveys have indicated that 80 per cent of the recreation areas either swam, went fishing or went boating."

Dozens of Defiant White Mothers Arrested by Police

NEW YORK (AP)—Police arrested dozens of defiant white mothers today during a school sit-in protest against a racially-imbalanced program which transferred their children away from their neighborhood school.

The arrests sparked a march of riot among scores of demonstrators and on-lookers outside Public School 189 in the Jackson Heights section of Queens.

Police headquarters reported the arrests of 65 adults on charges of loitering in or near a school. One man was charged with disorderly assault on a policeman.

The adults, along with 80 children, were taken by police vans and patrol wagons to court.

As they were led to the vehicles, a large detachment of police linked hands to keep chanting and sign-waving demonstrators away. One man tried to break through the cordon and was wrestled to the ground by policemen.

About 100 demonstrators started outside the school when the mothers, some pushing baby carriages, arrived for the third day of a sit-in at the school. In addition to the 65 first and second-graders directly involved in the protest, the mothers were accompanied by several younger children.

They had been warned they would be arrested if the protest was resumed today, but they persisted.

cated to promoting good citizenship.

Also attending the children's party was Anne Greene Canadian-born actor who plays Ben Cartright in the television series Bonanza. He and his wife got almost as big a reception from the youngsters as did the Queen.

The weather forecast was for clearing skies before the end of the royal visit to Prince Edward Island. It was the island's first royal ceremonial occasion Tuesday involving federal government participation.

Tuesday night Queen and Prince Philip were guests of honor at a royal variety performance in the new $1,500,000 Fathers of Confederation Memorial Centre. She opened the centre officially earlier in the day.

While RCMP police dogs were held on short leash and mounted in riot-squad dungarees surveyed the crowd with sigh-powered binoculars, the Queen delivered a message to the crowd praising the Confederation of Canada 97 years ago.

CONFEDERATION THE ROCK

"The Confederation which has its beginnings here in Charlottetown," she said, "is the rock on which the Canadian nation has built its strength and authority."

She described Canada as one of the world's "older and most stable nations," and said: "Canada born star of the American TV show Bonanza.

While the Queen's reaction to individual performances could not be seen, it was clear from the audience reaction that the show-stopper of the evening was a performance by a professional group from Montreal, les Feux Follets (the Will o' the Wisps).

Their program of songs and dances depicted the ethnic origins of Canada's citizens—Eskimo, Indian, French, Loyalist and middle-European.

The dramatic highlight of the evening came when the full cast of the royal performance appeared on stage for a rousing rendition of O Canada. Some sang in the English version, the French but all turned to the Queen as the personifica-tion of Canada's unity.

CHILDREN PRESS

Earlier in the day, crowds of school children greeted Canada and the royal car during a 20-minute drive through residential parts of the city.

Exuberant youngsters cheered and waved small Union Jacks and Canadian flags as Queen and Prince Philip drove by almost within touching distance of the 2,000 children lining the rolled down.

The downtown areas the crowds pressed 20-deep around the Confederation Centre as members of the armed forces held ropes in place.

During a tour of the art gallery the Queen and Prince Philip raised a laugh by commenting on Jack Shadbolt's controversial modern art.

The Vancouver artist has produced a composite of hundreds of flag designs with a large red ensign in the middle of the huge mural.

"That's a compromise 'for you," said Prince Philip with a broad grin towards Premie Mi-nister Pearson.

"Yes, this may be the answer to all our problems," chuckled Premier Shaw of P.E.I.

County Court Hears Number Of Cases

PICTON (Staff) — In county court, Monday, civil actions were heard by His Honor Judge G. F. Smith of Napanee.

Wm. B. Lane represented James John Leaman re assessment for damages for alleged fraudulent misrepresentation on the sale of a motor vehicle to Mr. Leaman. After reviewing the facts of the case, Judge Smith awarded Mr. Leaman a judgment of $1,500. Mr. Leaman had purchased a 1961 Valiant from Sylvia Beatch and later the automobile was repossessed by the Royal Bank of Canada as there was an outstanding lien against the car.

In two cases of motor vehicle damages, represented by R. E. Nourse, Bernard and Ethel Brooks vs. Howard Leavitt and McKee Motors vs. George Valliere were settled out of court.

The last action heard was Joseph D. Walmsley and Russell Mitchell against Lloyd Grindrod, with R. E. Nourse representing the plaintiffs. Mr. Grindrod was represented by counsel. As a result of an automobile accident February 7, 1962, in which Mr. Grindrod was involved while driving Mr. Walmsley's car, Judge Smith awarded the plaintiffs a judgment of $535.65.

Mr. Grindrod acted as defence for himself advising the court that he was returning Mr. Walmsley's car from the service station after completing service on the car. The street conditions were deplorable and were covered ice over the entire street. Mr. Grindrod contended that a car driven by Russell Bond which had made a left turn in front of him, turning into a driveway, was responsible for the accident which saw Mr. Grindrod collide with the parked vehicle. Russell Bond was apparently Mr. Grindrod did not take any action against Mr. Bond or have a lawyer do so. Mr. Bond was called to the stand and stated he had not seen the accident but had heard it and that when he turned into the driveway he had noticed Mr. Walmsley coming in the Walmsley car, but had already made the turn into the driveway and was starting to back out when the accident occurred.

Farm Bill

next Tuesday after a month long recess.

The Commons also passed a resolution leading to the introduction of amendments to the Crop Insurance Act of 1958. The changes would give added federal financial backing to provincial crop insurance plans.

Spokesmen for various parties agreed that the new legislation would help encourage more provinces to enter the crop insurance field and extend coverage to meet many farm ers.

So far only three provinces—Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Prince Edward Island—have set up crop insurance pilot projects. About 6,000 out of the 400,000 farmers in Canada were covered by crop insurance at last count. All were prairie farmers except for 75 potato growers in P.E.I.

Conservative MPs livened up the proceedings by accusing Agriculture Minister Hays of being "bull - headed" and of trying to destroy the Prairie Farm Assistance Act.

(PFAA levies fees from farmers who grow wheat. If the wheat board and pays bene fits to farmers hit by crop failures.

Mr. Hays replied that it would take "a very long time" before crop insurance plans replaced PFAA on the "Prairies

"If this resolution were to replace the PFAA, in the areas it would have to be under crop in surance," he said.

The main feature of the crop insurance bill provides that provinces operating their own plans may enter "reinsurance agreements" with the federal government to cover their losses in bad crop years. The provinces would pay annual premiums into a new federal re insurance fund.

Norwegian Whalers Teach 'Bluenoses' the 'Catch-How'

By ED WALTERS

BLANDFORD, N.S. (CP) — "Hvalbiast," the glad cry of the Norwegian whalers echoed over the vast reaches of St. Pierre and Sable Island banks this summer, announcing to the earth's mightiest mammal that Nova Scotians were after his meat and blubber.

For four months, Nova Scotia fishermen have been taught by Norwegians, masters of the art, how to catch whales.

The project was a joint effort of the provincial and federal fisheries departments and Karl Karlsen, a native of Norway who operates a shipping company out of Halifax and a seal-processing plant here.

The experiment began in Mid-June with the arrival here from Norway of the 102-foot whaler Harryford, under Capt. Torodd Huse, 31, son of the vessel's owner.

Harryford had on board the answer to one of the experiment's principal questions. Thirty tons of whale meat came out of her holds, flensed from eight bottlenose whales that had been taken within a 10-mile radius near Sable Island. This right proof that whales were available within easy reach of Nova Scotia.

MEAT IS EDIBLE

Capt. Huse also reported seeing many fin and minke whales within a couple of days sail of here. While the bottlenose run up to 40 feet long and is rather coarse for human eating, it can be used for pet food.

The fin and minke whales, 50 to 60 feet long, produce meat that is suitable for human consumption.

In addition, oil rendered from blubber of all whales is used in domestic products and industry.

Arrangements were made to allow Harryford to work at sea with the Karlsen - owned Minna, manned by Nova Scotians but with a Norwegian gunner.

And the cry of "hvalbiast," Norwegian equivalent of the now - discarded English "thar she blows," announced the sighting of whales with encouraging regularity.

For most of the four months Harryford was getting a whale a day and up to Sept. 19 had gotten 43, mostly fin whales. Minna took four sperm, one fin and about 30 minke whales.

All the whales were landed at Karlsen's plant here. Canadian law forbids a foreign fishing ship from landing any catch in Canada but the federal fisheries department found a way around the law, recognizing that the experiment would probably mean a new industry for Nova Scotia. Harryford was chartered for four months, the federal department paying a nominal $6,000 charter fee and Karlsen underwriting financial guarantees.

POPULAR IN NORWAY

Whale meat was selling for six cents a pound out of Halifax but Capt. Huse said that in Norway this season prices have been about 30 cents. This is because in Norway whale meat is considered good to eat.

Most of the meat landed here was intended for sale to pet-food manufacturers in the United States, with some going to the small Canadian market.

Capt. Huse, Brian Meagher, the provincial deputy fisheries minister, and Mr. Karlsen all agreed that another season is necessary before the full potential of whaling off Nova Scotia can be assessed.

Mr Karlsen is optimistic. He put up a 40-by-60-foot building for packing whale meat and plans to build a refrigeration plant here.

For the Harryford's crew, whaling off Nova Scotia has at least two advantages over the Arctic, the usual summer cruising area. It's warmer here and there's more rest than in the north where the constant daylight prompts round-the-clock operation.

LAUGHS ON HIM

READING, England (CP)— Rev. Peter Bullock-Flint, Vicar of St. Mary Magdalene Church here in Berkshire may have the last laugh. He plans to write a book of jokes about clergymen and has asked his parishioners to contribute items to the book.

Business Booming Again In UN Security Council

By MAX HARRELSON

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Business is booming again in the United Nations Security Council, once virtually written off as useless because of the Soviet veto.

So far this year there have been more than 60 meetings of the 11-country council whose prestige almost touched bottom in 1959 when it convened only five times.

There is a good chance that 1964 may be the council's busiest year since 1948 when it met 171 times. Only twice since then has the council met more than 70 times in a year—in 1950 and again 10 years later.

In 1955, it met only 23 times and in 1954, 32 times.

Recently, the council has been busy with the Cyprus problem and with the dispute between Indonesia and Malaysia. So far this year it has dealt with such varied problems as the Yemeni civil war, the U.S.-Panama controversy, Kashmir, Viet Nam and the South African apartheid problem.

Since July 15, 1963, there have been more than 100 meetings of the council.

In these 100 meetings, only two Soviet vetoes were recorded. This is undoubtedly one of the significant factors in the revival of the council. Altogether the Russians cast 100 vetoes in approximately 1,000 meetings up to that time. The biggest single year for Soviet vetoes was 1955 when 18 were cast, all of them on the admission of new members.

BECOMES UNWIELDY

Another important factor in the council's new popularity is the rapid membership expansion of the United Nations. Beginning in 1955 there was a tendency to shift security problems from the council to the veto-free General Assembly.

The assembly has become more and more unwieldy because of its large membership. The emergence of the Asian and African nations as a major bloc caused both the Soviet Union and the Western powers to take a new look at the Security Council.

The Kremlin apparently concluded that it should use the veto more sparingly and therefore remove the principal obstacle to employing the council in peace-keeping matters.

One notable example this year was in the border dispute between Cambodia and South Viet Nam. The Soviet Union strongly opposed sending a Security Council mission to the area to make recommendations, but in the end it voted for the proposal.

In another move calculated to bolster the council, the Soviet Union announced it was prepared to ratify a proposed UN charter amendment increasing the council membership to 15 from 11 members.

This amendment is intended to give the council better balance by including more Asian and African countries. Earlier the Russians stood firm against any charter revision unless Communist China was seated in the UN.

Orlando W. Wilson Proved The 'Eliott Ness' of Chicago

CHICAGO (AP)—Four years ago residents of Chicago watched as a citizens' commit tee struggled to find a man capable of cleaning up the city's scandal-ridden police department. Heading the committee was Orlando W. Wilson, dean of the School of Criminology at the University of California.

The committee screened candidates for months, and then picked the man it decided was tough enough to handle the job — Orlando W. Wilson.

After getting a "hands off" promise from Mayor Richard J. Daley, Wilson, then 59, reluctantly took over what many considered the most demanding police job in the country.

And things haven't been the same for the Chicago underworld since.

Last year, while crime soared 19 per cent across the U.S., Chicago reported a three-per-cent dropoff. It was the only major city to do so.

WINNING HONORS

Since 1960, the department has won 13 national honors, including an award from the American Society of Criminology.

Wilson took over at a time when police fortunes and morale were at low ebb. Eight policemen had been indicted for their part in a wave of burglaries on the North Side. Three more were to be indicted.

Public indignation had forced the resignation of Police Commissioner Timothy J. O'Connor, who for nine years had maintained no organized crime existed in the city.

Tough jobs were nothing new for the deceptively mild-mannered Wilson, who had directed public safety and denazification programs in the U.S. zone in Germany after the Second World War.

His first day in office, Wilson pledged he would not tolerate political influence in the 13,000-man police force. He promised to fire any policemen engaged in illegal activities.

He immediately set up a bureau of intelligence services charged with "finding out if the department is as clean as the driven snow . . . or of making it as clean as the driven snow if it isn't."

Once security was established, Wilson launched into a massive shakeup of the department.

The number of police district was slashed from 38 to 21. The detective division was consolidated into six area commands. Most importantly, the bulk of the department's manpower was thrown into the patrol division, considered by Wilson to be the city's "first line of defence against crime."

As a former patrolman—he began his career in 1921 by walking a beat in Berkeley, Calif. — Wilson particularly was critical of O'Connor's deployment of beat men.

"Every time somebody was robbed, assaulted, raped or whatever, that meant a policeman was assigned there," Wilson said in an interview.

"And he was left there forever and usually around the clock. We were guarding coal yards, private businesses, banks and what have you in much the same way."

Wilson called in the beat men and put them into patrol cars. within two years, the number of police vehicles on the streets was doubled.

BOOSTS MORALE

The next step was to lift police morale. Wilson saw to it that examinations for promotions were held on a regular biennial basis. Within three years, more than 1,200 promotions were made. They included 873 sergeants, 206 lieutenants and 94 captains.

Wilson also fought for pay raises that put Chicago's police scale right behind New York and Los Angeles.

Wilson also revamped communications, spending $3,000,000 on a modern centre capable of handling thousands of calls for help daily.

"We can get men to the scene of a crime at a speed that amazes the citizens and frankly, me too," he says.

British Voters Appear To Be Listening to Wilson's Promises of a Better Life

LONDON (CP) — The British election fight, sometimes heady but more often dull, rolls into its final week with the issues boiled down essentially to the question of whether the 33,700,000 voters want to risk the swings of capitalism or wish deeper into the world of socialism.

Despite Prime Minister Douglas-Home's pleading that those who tinker with socialism are toying with Russia's unhappy experiments, voters appear to be responding more readily to Labor Leader Harold Wilson's promises of a better life.

National opinion polls maintain Labor now has the edge. Stock markets have responded with anxiety.

Undoubtedly, the fight will stiffen in the final days before Oct. 15.

The issues are fairly clear. Conservatives maintain Britons never had it so good and that a Labor administration would sink the prosperity ship, turning Britain into a third-rate power by destroying the country's nuclear deterrent.

Labor maintains that profiteering Conservatives are strangling economic expansion while forcing the poor working man to pay high prices for scarce housing and land.

Wilson has accused the government of hiding the truth about Britain's economic "crisis" by borrowing heavily from other countries to finance a widening gap between high imports and trailing exports.

Both major parties talk of the need of stripping Britain of "restrictive practices" which lend to enforce price rigidity and make Britain less competitive in world markets. And both seem to agree there must be restraint by management and labor to prevent runaway prices.

But the Tories maintain the Socialists would saddle the country with such a huge new program of social welfare that Britain would sink deeper into the economic quagmire. And Labor argues back that the Tories are self-thinking of huge profits for themselves without opportunity for progressive young Britons.

Both major parties have shied away from committing themselves to short-term deflationary measures. Reginald Maudling, chancellor of the exchequer, concedes there are difficulties ahead. Douglas Home describes the situation as a "testing time."

The reality of the situation would indicate, however, that no matter which party wins, emergency restraints may have to be imposed. For while Britain may keep on borrowing from other governments and central banks to finance trade deficits, these governments demand, as Canada found in her own financial difficulties of 1962, that the borrower undertake operations to provide the necessary ability to repay.

U.S. Copter Shot Down, Six Killed

SAIGON (CP)—A U.S. Army helicopter with five Americans and a South Vietnamese aboard was shot down in flames 13 miles west of Saigon today crashing in the midst of a powerful Viet Cong guerilla unit.

Ground troops who fought their way to the burned wreckage today found three bodies charred beyond recognition. The other three bodies could not be found.

While it was presumed they also had been killed, there was some possibility they had eluded and been captured by the Viet Cong.

The crash brought the total number of Americans killed in combat in South Viet Nam to 197—and possibly 200 — Since late 1961.

A second helicopter also was downed nearby, but its crew was rescued repairing the aircraft for a flight back to its base. The two helicopters, armed with rockets and machine-guns, had been providing strafing support for a small search and clear operation.

On the political front, a member of Viet Nam's ruling military junta broke off into political exile today, lowering the possibility of a new coup attempt against Premier Nguyen Khanh's government.

Lt.-Gen. Tran Thien Khiem told a reporter he did not know whether he would come back but that he would be out of the country for at least three months. Officially Khiem is going to Formosa to thank those countries which have supported Viet Nam's anti - Communist fight.

Some of the young generals who saved Khanh from an attempted military coup in September were reported to have given Khanh an ultimatum to get rid of five other generals as part of a purge of the armed forces.

The Citadel Will Be Spic And Span for Visit of Queen Elizabeth Saturday

QUEBEC (CP) — The big granite fortress sprawling high above the St. Lawrence River will be spic and span and alive with soldierly dash by the time an old friend returns there Saturday.

The friend is Queen Elizabeth and she will be returning to The Citadel for a third visit after stops at the historic installation in 1951 and 1959.

The Queen made her 1951 visit as Princess Elizabeth but she and Prince Philip found the Citadel's welcome fit for a monarch, the way intensive preparations are making it this time too.

The preparations are being carried out by men of the Royal 22nd Regiment, of which the Queen is colonel-in-chief.

She will take advantage of her visit to dedicate a memorial on the 50th anniversary of the Royal 22nd, a predominantly French-speaking unit.

It will be the feature of her two-day visit to Quebec City, although she'll also speak in Legislative Council chamber and attend a state dinner before leaving Sunday.

Artist Raoul Hunter and architect Edouard Fiset put the finishing touches on the memorial building, with its square-cut stone and granite.

It has 22 stained glass windows bearing the colors of reserve units—such as Les Voltigeurs de Quebec or Les Fusiliers de Sherbrooke—and the regiment.

Inside, there is a black marble stand on which a memorial book will be placed, add to one side and above, two bronze hands cupping a gas jet.

The flame will light this "eternal flame" designed by Mr. Hunter, professor at Quebec's Ecole des Beaux-Arts and editorial cartoonist for the Quebec City daily, Le Soleil.

Minister Denies Knowledge Of Profligacy in Church

CHATHAM (CP)—Rev. Russell D. Horsburgh repeatedly denied Tuesday he had ever encouraged or permitted sexual intercourse between teen - agers in Park Street United Church here.

Replying to eight charges against him of contributing to juvenile delinquency, the 45-year-old clergyman said he had never suspected anyone of having sexual intercourse at the church, let alone seeing it take place as alleged by a witness.

Mr. Horsburgh spent nearly four hours on the witness stand Tuesday and faces cross-examination by Crown Attorney Blake Ward as the Juvenile Court trial enters its 12th day today. Fifty-five witnesses have already appeared at the trial—24 for the Crown.

The minister said he attended a movie with his stepson the night he was alleged by an earlier witness, a youth, to have called his church "the biggest whorehouse in Chatham."

"It would be blasphemy for me to do so," he said.

He said he was not in the habit of discussing sex with teen - agers in his office, but that on one occasion he had counselled a couple, aged 15 and 14, who wanted to get married. He said sex entered the conversation but that he had not introduced the subject.

He told defence counsel Cyril Perkins that he was present at a Friday night dance when a teen-age girl told a chaperon she would get even with him for taking disciplinary action against her. The same girl testified earlier that she could not remember how many times she had had sexual intercourse in the church.

He said that despite the posting of out - of - bounds signs around the dance area, the washrooms were returned to the dance floor and told to stay there.

All the doors that could be locked were locked, he said, but chaperons frequently reported finding teen - agers in prohibited areas.

The clergyman said that an organization called Youth Anonymous was formed "to bring into the church and help a type of young person who doesn't normally come into traditional church groups—we call them problem thinkers."

He said that after being counselled, the youths either went home or made use of the recreational facilities at the church, including basketball, volleyball, badminton or billiards.
